A resolution calling on the president for a detailed statement of removals from office March, 1893, and appointments since then, together with the number of ex-soldiers appointed, promoted, reduced or removed was adopted. Martin, pop., of South Carolina was seated in place of Lockhart, dem. and the Rinaker-Downing contest from the Sixteenth Illinois, district was decided in favor of Rinaker.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Indian appropriation bill was finally disposed of, the contract school item being modified so that Catholic schools will be abolished July 1, 1897. Conferees of the sundry civil bill were instructed to insist upon public buildings at the capitals of the states of Idaho, Wyoming and Montana.

HOUSE.

The house cleared its decks for adjournment to-day by disposing of all the essential business before it, which consisted of conference reports on appropriation bills. The speaker laid before the house a message from the president vetoing the general deficiency bill. A motion to pass over the veto failed to secure the constitutional majority. A substitute was then passed, excluding the French spoilation claims and southern war claims. The conference report on the Indian appropriation bill was agreed to.

PLAGUE SPREADS.

Black Death Gaining Alarming Proportions in the Oriental Countries.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7.—The passengers by the steamer Peru, from China, report that the black plague is gaining alarming proportions in the Orient. The disease is spreading in all quarters, and communication with many places is entirely cut off. The Japanese officials are doing all in their power to keep the disease out of that country, and so far seem to have met with success. They have adopted strong measures of quarantine, and all incoming vessels are being thoroughly disinfected.

TIRED SALESWOMEN.

Employers Should Be More Considerate of Their Health.

Men formerly held the positions that women now hold, and while women's organism is less strong than men's they are expected to do the same work. Their duties compel them to be on their feet from morning to night, and many of them, in a short time, contract these distressing complaints called "female diseases."

Then occur irregularities, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, indigestion, leucorrhœa, general debility and nervous prostration.

They are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness.

"My dear Mrs. Pinkham:—After writing you, and before your answer came, I was too miserable to go to the store, and so lost my position. That was five weeks ago. I am now back again in my old place, and never felt so well in all my life. The bearing-down pains and whites have left me, and I am not a bit nervous or blue. Life looks brighter to me. I don't get tired, my temper is real sweet, and I could scream right out sometimes for joy.

Your Vegetable Compound is my stand-by. You don't know how thankful I am to you for saving me from suffering. Every woman in my position should know of your wonderful remedy. I never saw you, but I love you for being so good to me."—EDITH——W 6th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ST. LOUIS TORNADO

ST. LOUIS, June 1.—The total number of dead, missing and fatally injured in the two cities numbers 424 This estimate is made as follows: St. Louis—Known dead, 198; unknown dead, 11; fatally injured, 13; missing. East St. Louis—Known dead, 138; unknown dead, 3; fatally injured, 2; total, 424. This will undoubtedly be added to when the ruins shall have been uncovered.

The Post-Dispatch prints a statement which very materially modifies all previous estimates of the aggregate loss by the hurricane. The article says: "No estimate of the financial loss sustained by this city from the storm approaching the correct figure nearer than several millions can be prepared for at least a week, but it is already evident that representations of loss equalling and sometimes exceeding $50,000,000 are unfounded upon facts. In fact, conservative and well informed business men regard $5,000,000 as being nearer the proper amount. In arriving at this conclusion all the heaviest losses have been considered, and the figures have been obtained from persons in possession in almost every place of personal knowledge."

ST. LOUIS, June 3.—The known list of dead in St. Louis foots up 143 names, all of these bodies having been recovered. Besides this, it is known that 13 other persons were killed in the storm, eight on the river, whose names are known, and five within the city, whose names are unknown. The loss of life in East St. Louis numbers exactly 100 identified, with two—a man and a woman—who are unknown. In addition to this, one man is missing, and eight are so seriously injured that they will probably die.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—There were just eighty-five miles of streets obstructed by debris as the result of the tornado. All these streets have been made passable and will be cleaned up in ten days. In the city there are 480 miles of improved streets, so it can be seen to what extent the tornado obstructed traffic. The storm district, on its outside lines, extended from the river on the east to Tower Grove avenue on the west, and from Olive street on the north to Lynch street on the south. This comprises an area of six square miles. The extreme limits are three miles east and west and two miles north and south. An adequate idea of the damage can be formed when it is stated that if all the houses damaged and blown down were on both sides of one street that street would be just eighty-five miles long. This figure is given by the street commissioner, who has been through the entire district, and from the reports of his general superintendent, who has cut a roadway through eighty-five miles of streets. In addition to this, there are many more streets obstructed by wires and the like which were not counted in the total.

May Mean a Crisis.

LONDON, June 4.—A dispatch from Constantinople to the Times says that Russia has warned the porte that a Christian massacre in Crete would unite the whole of Europe against Turkey.

LONDON, June 5.—A dispatch from Madrid says that General Martinez Campos and General Borroro have been arrested on a charge of duelling. The quarrel grew out of a dispute over the Cuban campaign. Neither of the generals were hurt.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 5.—The outbreak in the Island of Crete has had the effect of increasing the rigor of the policy pursued by the palace authorities against suspects here. As a result of this activity, one thousand arrests have been made. Most of those arrested are Moslems and include 153 students at the military college, who are suspected of being in sympathy with the young Turk movement. Besides these arrests, many of them have been deported to distant provinces and some have been secretly put to death.

LONDON, June 7.—The Times has a dispatch from Athens which says that telegrams from the island of Crete indicate a state of anarchy in the whole western portion of the island In numerous villages the Turks are besieged by the insurgent Christians. Wherever the Mohammedans are in a majority they plunder and murder the Christians. The sound of battle in the villages is distinctly heard on board the war ships in Suda Bay.

Hawaii Wants to Be Annexed.

HONOLULU, June 6.—The legislature passed the annexation resolutions before adjourning, declaring the voters of Hawaii are in favor of annexation. Great Britain has made a demand on the government in behalf of V. V. Ashford, exiled for complicity in the rebellion of 1895. The demand says that Ashford's reputed request that he be allowed to return here must be complied with. Ashford is in San Francisco. It is understood that President Dole replied to the demand, declining to allow Ashford to come here. It is believed a British man-of-war will be sent here to land Ashford without respect to the government's wishes. The government will doubtless appeal to the United States for aid.

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

There is no person bad enough not to contemplate reforming at some time in the future.

Many a man is going through life with the idea that he will grow great by creating trouble.

Li Hung Chang, when he arrives, will find the laundries doing quite as well as he has expected.

The Mohammedan faith was built up by the sword, and it naturally turns the sword toward defenseless Christians.

Miss Maud Ingersoll may have refused to swear in a New York court, but wait till her shirt-waist collar-button rolls under the dresser.

Milwaukee announces that the divorce season has opened and the divorce lawyer cheerily commences to rub the rust from his stub pen.

If people would not persist in dreaming that they are individually an exception to the laws of nature, there would not be so many disappointments in life.

A couple was married in Monroe, Mich., the other day after a courtship of twenty years. The reckless haste of the Michigander in affairs of the heart is truly alarming.

A man has written Jailer Whitman of Chicago for a piece of hangman's rope to be used around his neck as a cure for fits. Some people would call this heroic treatment.

A Chinaman who has been arrested is charged with kissing all the women he met. Evidently the celestials are capable of as high a state of civilization as any native American.

Somebody has figured it out that we pay something like $8,000,000 more for chewing gum than for the maintenance of preachers in all denominations. We are indeed a busy people.

This being the strawberry short-cake season, it may be well to explain that the 500 dreams, more or less frightful, that come to the consumer in a single night, are not the result of the berries, but of the preponderance of the cake. Strawberry short-cakes for restaurants or hotels should contain twice or thrice the amount of fruit they now hold. This reform, however, we shall probably not see in our day.

The weather prophets insist that there is a vast difference between a cyclone and a tornado and that all of 'em that we had this season are tornados. So everybody has been calling them by the wrong name, but they came just the same. As we understand it, a cyclone is a small tornado, while a tornado is a big cyclone. It's easy enough to distinguish the difference if you see it soon enough.

John Clark is now sleeping in the Sioux City jail for a very singular misconduct—that of swearing at his wife in his sleep. He says it is a habit which he has been unable to break himself of. The judge thought that a few weeks in jail might break it, and that's why John is sleeping in a cell. And besides, Mrs. Clark is getting a much needed rest. John is said to be doing the most of his swearing in the day time.

Governor Rich, of Michigan, has issued a proclamation prohibiting until November 1, 1896, the importation of Texas cattle or those raised south of the thirty-sixth parallel of north latitude, which have not been kept continuously one winter north of said latitude. Cattle in transit across the state are excepted, but they can be unloaded only for watering and feeding, and then only at West Detroit in the Texas cattle division of the Michigan Central stock yards. Cattle intended for immediate slaughter are also excepted, but they must be held in strict quarantine awaiting it.

Among the storm stories that are pouring in from all parts of the country is one from La Cygne, Kan., where two young society leaders were drowned while boat-riding in the streets. The gondola in which the society leaders were drifting along a la Venice was run into by the bark of a mandolin club and upset. A boy who was in the boat was saved by his parent throwing him into a tree and a young society bud saved herself by clinging to the boy's foot. There is nothing slow about this story just as it is, but what a gem it would have been if only a fire brigade had been exterminated while diving down to put out a fire in a basement

THE NEWS IN IOWA

AN OSKALOOSA SENSATION.

An Effort to Poison a Man Meets With Failure.

OSKALOOSA, June 11.—W. H. Roberts, who has been occupying rooms with a small son at the home of Minnie and Mary Brooks in Oskaloosa, recently moved to neighboring quarters. He was taken sick and the Brooks women and others administered to the wants of him and the boy. Roberts says that when the last meal from the Brooks women was brought him he suspected something was wrong and did not drink the coffee, but had it taken to the chemist at Penn college and analyzed. The professor says that the coffee contained large quantities of strychnine. The women deny that they knew anything about the strychnine in the coffee, and claim that the poison was put in after they left the room.

SHOT BY A CHILD.

A Drunken Brute in Denison Probably Fatally Injured.

DENISON, June 12.—Jack Grady was shot by Lew Cochran, a boy about 14 years old. About a year ago Grady became interested in the wife of Wesley Cochran, a blacksmith of Denison, causing the separation of the family. Since then Grady has been hanging around the woman, contributing nothing to her support, much less to the happiness of the family. Of late he has been feeling so much at home that he took the liberty to trounce the children at will, and, being loaded to the gunwale with forty-rod, he was in the act of abusing one of the little girls, when he was shot by her brother, the ball, which was of small caliber, entering his back in the region of the right kidney. It is believed he will die.

ACCIDENT AT OSCEOLA.

Street Commissioner Flemming Seriously Injured.

OSCEOLA, June 12.—Jesse Flemming, our street commissioner, met with a very serious accident by the premature explosion of a blast. He was endeavoring to dispose of a large rock and was tamping the fuse when the explosion occurred. His face was blown full of powder and fragments of rock, and his eyes so injured that it is supposed he will be utterly blind. His brother, who was helping, received several painful wounds and was badly stunned, but escaped very serious injury. Flemming was already a cripple, having, while quite a boy, lost his leg from an accident on the railroad.

A MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

DAVENPORT, June 12.—The body of a well dressed man about 50 years of age with a railroad coupling link in his inside coat pocket, rocks weighing about six pounds inside his clothing just over the abdomen, and skull crushed in, was found floating in the Mississippi river. On his shirt were the initials "F. S." and an identification card of Mooney & Boland, Chicago and New York, was found in his pocket marked 'Return and receive $1 reward," and numbered C 7036. There is every indication that the man was murdered and his body thrown into the river.

TRY SIOUX CITY ALDERMAN.

Council Takes Cognizance of Serious Charges of Corruption.

SIOUX CITY, June 14.—As a result of the recent charges of corruption preferred against Alderman H. H. Johnson, a prominent local politician, by R. P. Elkins, a fireman in the city's employ, proceedings have been commenced for the former's removal from office. Elkins accuses Johnson of requiring him to share his salary with him in return for the latter's influence in securing his appointment and with threatening to bring him and his family to want if he refused. Elkins has resigned his position, the better to push his charges.

IOWA'S SILVER SERVICE.

Executive Council Closed the Contract for It at $5,000.

DES MOINES, June 14.—A meeting of the state executive council was held at the rooms of Governor Drake, at the Savery, at which designs for the silver service to be presented by the state to the battleship Iowa were examined and the contract awarded. J. E. Caldwell & Co., of Philadelphia, represented by J. F. Thomas, secured the contract, at the appropriation price of $5,000.

Accused of a Horrible Crime.

POCAHONTAS, June 13.—Perry Dorton was arraigned before Justice Joseph Mallison at Fonda and bound over to the grand jury on the charge of rape on the 11-year-old daughter of W. P. Flint. His bonds were placed at $500 and he had trouble securing bondsmen.

TO RECOVER STOLEN FUNDS.

Remley Will Sue for Some of the Money Embezzled by Spaulding.

DES MOINES, June 13.—It is reported that Attorney General Remley will take up the Spaulding case with the idea in view of recovering some of the money taken by Spaulding while acting as secretary of the pharmacy commission. There has been much dissatisfaction over the state from the fact that Spaulding was not only not convicted, but that there has apparently been no attempt made to recover the money. It is said that the attorney general will begin suit against Spaulding, his bondsmen and the three members of the pharmacy commission. It is said that the attorney general believes that a portion of the money taken by Spaulding can be obtained from his bondsmen. The bond which they gave had expired at the time Spaulding was arrested, but the attorney general is said to believe that as much money as it can be proved was taken while they were on his bonds can be recovered. Spaulding's defalcation is known to have extended over two years, and during a part of this time he was under bonds.

Drake Gives $5,000.

DES MOINES, June 13.—At the conclusion of the Drake University convention meeting, Governor Drake and President Aylesworth announced it was the desire of the board of trustees to raise $25,000, to be placed in what would be known as an emergency fund. Governor Drake said he would head the subscription with a cash donation of $5,000. Nine thousand dollars were raised in a few minutes.

Tramps Kill an Officer.

MUSCATINE, June 15.—Night Policeman Jacob Neidret, one of the oldest on the force, was shot and killed by tramps while trying to arrest them in Hershy's lumber yard at an early hour in the morning. Deceased was 55 years old and a member of the Thirty-fifth Iowa Infantry. Blood hounds have been placed on the track, as one of the tramps is known to have been shot by the dead officer.

Fined for Woman Beating.

INDEPENDENCE, June 15.—Sebastian Wingret, a saloon keeper of this city, has been fined $50 and costs in the justice court for beating his daughter, who is a refined and respected young lady. He still maintains that it is his privilege as head of the family to regulate the degree of punishment and has appealed the case.

Mrs. Cram Gets $500 Damages.

PRIMGHAR, June 14.—In the Cram vs. Doroty case, wherein Mrs. Cram was expelled from the Episcopalian church at Sheldon by the defendant, and brought suit in the district court to recover $5,000 claimed for damages, the jury brought in a verdict to pay the plaintiff $500.

Given to Withrow.

DES MOINES, June 14.—Governor Drake has appointed W. S. Withrow, of Henry county, judge of the Twentieth judicial district, which was created by the Twenty-sixth general assembly.

BREVITIES.

At Des Moines recently William Winbeck, an electric light lineman, was electrocuted at the top of a high pole. He was repairing wire and connected with an arc light current. He died instantly.

W. J. Young, a prominent lumberman of Clinton, died a few days ago of kidney disease. He had suffered a long time. He was born at Belfast, Ireland, February 27, 1827, and came to Clinton in 1858.

The Iowa College of Law, at Des Moines, seems to be growing faster than any other law school, and is to have a new building this year. Neat catalogues have been prepared by the secretary, Prof. P. S. McNutt.

The Farmers' Mutual Hail Insurance Association of Iowa, which insures growing crops against damage by hail storms, received over 1,000 applications during the week ending June 6. Over 20,000 Iowa farmers are in this association.

Des Moines dispatch: George W. Perkins, railroad commissioner, was stricken with apoplexy as he was walking near the capitol. He was seized with a dizziness and fell to the sidewalk. He was at once taken to his home and a physician summoned. Paralysis gradually developed until it was quite pronounced, but Mr. Perkins afterwards rallied and the physicians have strong hopes of his recovery.

At Webster City recently the body of a man was found on the front platform of the east-bound Illinois Central baggage car at midnight by Policeman Butler. As indicated by letters on the body, his name was E. W. Dudrey, of Macon, Ill. He had been struck on the head with a pistol and shot through the heart by tramps. His partner, G. W. Adcock, was placed under arrest, and at the coroner's inquest proved himself innocent. No clew to the murderer has yet been found. The deceased leaves a widow and son in Macon. He was 22 years old, and is said to have been an industrious and sober man. A telegram was received ordering the body sent to Decatur.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

CUBA.

NEW YORK, June 13.—A special to the Herald from Havana says: Dispatches from Madrid say that the bankers of Paris and Amsterdam have declined to advance any further loans to Spain before next November. A cable to the World from Madrid says: The greatest concern and curiosity are shown in Spain, especially in the political and military circles of Madrid, for intelligence of the movements of Consul General Lee. All the papers comment on his cordial relations with General Weyler, his wary and cautious replies to the Spanish reporters and his prudent remarks on the relations between Spain and the United States.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The World says: The steamer Bermuda left Philadelphia with another cargo of arms and ammunition for the Cuban insurgents. The expedition consists of fifty men, among them being several physicians, who carry with them a full supply of medicines and surgical instruments. Stored away in the hold of the vessel are 1,000 Manser rifles, four Hotchkiss guns and a large number of machetes.

HAVANA, June 15.—A heavy cannonading and musketry fire has been heard in the city of Puerto Principe for the past two days and has caused considerable alarm among the residents. It is believed that a fierce engagement has been fought between the insurgents and a Spanish force of 20,000 troops under General Castellano. No definite information in regard to the fight has yet been received.

AT ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, June 11.—The Alabama contests in the republican convention have been decided in favor of the McKinley delegates. Of the delegates entitled to seats eighteen are for McKinley and two for Reed. J. H. Manley, in charge of Reed's forces, has issued a statement that this action settles McKinley's nomination on first ballot, and that it is conceded on all hands.

ST. LOUIS, June 12.—McKinley is not to be nominated without a struggle. Twenty-four hours has so changed the position of the political chess-board that there is still a fighting chance for the field against McKinley. The stumbling block in the road of the latis the divergent views of the delegates on the financial plank of the platform. The differences are as wide as the continent, and at present seem irreconcilable.

The western delegates maintain their adherence to silver, with a frankness that in former gatherings of the party would have been punished as political heresy. The other half of the country is represented by sound money advocates, who will listen to no suggestion of any other platform declaration. This issue, even in these ante-convention days, has ranged the delegates into two camps.

ST. LOUIS, June 13.—The principal development of yesterday was the agreement upon a gold standard plank for the platform. It had been asserted for several days that this would be done, but now the matter has been settled so far as it can be in advance of the convention. The incoming delegates from every section swelled the sentiment for an unequivocal declaration for the gold standard and against the free coinage of silver.

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—The republican national committee has decided that C. W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, will be temporary chairman, and C. W. Johnson, of Minnesota, secretary. It is believed that the permanent chairman will be John M. Thurston, McKinleyite, of Nebraska. The McKinley men are pushing Foraker for chairman of the committee on resolutions.

The silver men will fight for free silver in the platform committee. If beaten there, they will fight for it in the convention and will oppose any platform that is against free coinage and any man who is nominated upon such a platform. If beaten in the convention, as they expect to be, they will take the case back to their people and let them decide what they wish to do, whether they will vote the republican ticket or give it to the third party or stay from the polls. This course was decided upon at a conference of silver delegates.

Caught After Eleven Years.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 15.—Eleven years ago Arthur W. Pratt, attendant at the state lunatic asylum in this city, shot and killed Jesse T. Yree, a patient, and escaped. In May last he was arrested in Oxford, England, on the charge of burglary. While in jail there he confessed and the Kentucky authorities were notified. Sheriff Cross has left for England to bring Pratt back.

Sunstroke Kills Seventy.

BOMBAY, June 14.—The British cruiser Bonaventure, flagship of the East Indian squadron, lost seventy men by sunstroke on the voyage from Colombo to Pombicherry.

CRETAN CRISIS AND TURKEY.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The Herald's Vienna special says: In an address to the Austrian delegation, Count Goluchowski, minister for foreign affairs, explained the foreign policy of the government, in the course of his remarks declaring that the situation at Crete was of such a character that it was impossible to say what would happen next. The condition of things prevailing in the island, he said, was due to the maladministration of public affairs by the Turkish authorities. Turkey, he added, ought to take measures in her European and Asiatic provinces which would justify confidence in the vital force of the Ottoman empire; otherwise, he said, Turkey's best friends, including Austria, would be unable to prevent the empire's fall.

TRAIN ROBBERS.

MONTGOMERY, W. Va., June 13.—The west-bound express on the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad was held up between Cotton Hill and Kanawa Falls by three men, who, after a short fight with the train crew, made their escape without securing any booty. Jack Maynard, L. M. Martin and George F. Stringer were subsequently arrested near the scene of the attack and are in jail.

Borrero Will Be Prosecuted.

MADRID, June 14.—The government has decided to criminally prosecute General Borrero, who recently wrote an insulting letter to Captain General Martinez Campos, which resulted in the sending of a challenge by the latter, Borrero having refused to retract the letter.

TERSE NEWS.

Paris dispatch: M. Jules Francois Simon, the celebrated statesman, a life member of the French senate, member of the French academy, perpetual secretary of the academy of moral and political sciences and formerly prime minister of France, is dead. M. Simon had been ill for a fortnight with neurosis of the stomach.

A severe tornado struck the town of Wyeth City, about thirty miles from Gadsden, in northern Alabama. Thirteen houses have been literally blown from the face of the earth, but only two deaths, Ed Long and a negro woman, have been reported. A hundred or more persons were injured. The basket factory, where the greater portion of the inhabitants of the town work, was just out of the storm's path.

Washington dispatch: Cullom has definitely declared himself out of the presidential race. He said: "My name will not be presented at the St. Louis convention. McKinley will be nominated. I came to the conclusion that it was no use for me to do anything immediately the Springfield convention had declared for McKinley. Of course, if anybody wants to vote for me, I can't help his doing so, but my name will not be presented."

In a conference between President Cleveland and Senators Gray, Sherman and Lodge, a few days ago, the president said he had decided to address a communication to the Spanish government with the view of bringing the premier and the cabinet to a realization of the obligations resting on the United States to stop the barbarous warfare conducted by the Spanish officers and soldiers in Cuba. He stated that he was engaged in preparing a letter as he thought best calculated to promote the object in view. The president assured the senators who discussed the Cuban question with him that the Americans convicted and sentenced to death because of their alleged connection with the Competitor expedition would be protected by all the power of the government if necessary. He said their conviction was an outrage and would not be tolerated.

London dispatch: The judgment of the Egyptian mixed tribunal declaring against the legality of the use of the Egyptian reserve fund for the purposes of the Anglo-Egyptian Soudan expedition has made a great sensation. It is literally a bolt out of a clear sky, for the cabinet has been pushing the preparations for a vigorous advance up the Nile next August in the full confidence that the cost would fall upon the Egyptian treasury and not upon the British exchequer. If this decision is sustained, the cabinet must either call upon British taxpayers to meet the expense or retire from the expedition. The former alternative would mean a heavy loss of party prestige at home and the latter a loss of diplomatic prestige abroad. Salisbury is between the devil and the deep sea. Under the terms of the decision, the sums which have already been paid out in conformity with the ruling of the Egyptian debt commission must be repaid by the khedival government, and the commissioners are prohibited from paying out anything further for the Soudan expedition from the reserve fund.

THE FATAL GLOVE.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER VI.—(CONTINUED).

A hundred pairs of hands were outstretched to receive Margie when Arch brought her to the shore. Her dear devoted friends crowded around her, and in their joy at her escape, Arch retreated for his lodgings. But Miss Lee had been watching him, and seized his arm the moment he was clear of the crowd.

"Oh, Mr. Trevlyn, it's just like a novel!" she exclaimed, enthusiastically. "Only you cannot marry the heroine, for she is engaged to Mr. Linmere; and she perfectly dotes on him."

She flitted away, and Trevlyn went up to his chamber.

That evening there was a "hop" at the hotel, but Arch did not go down. He knew if he did the inevitable Miss Lee would anchor herself on his arm for the evening; and his politeness was not equal to the task of entertaining her.

The strains of music reached him, softened and made sweet by the distance. He stole down on the piazza, and sat under the shadows of a flowering vine, looking at the sky, with its myriads of glittering stars. There was a light step at his side, and glancing up, he saw Margie Harrison.

She was in evening dress, her white arms and shoulders bare, and glistening with snowy pearls. Her soft unbound hair fell over her neck in a flood of light, and a subtle perfume, like the breath of blooming water-lilies, floated around her.

"I want to make you my captive for a little while, Mr. Trevlyn," she said, gayly. "Will you wear the chains?"

"Like a garland of roses," he responded. "Yes, to the world's end, Miss Harrison!"

The unconscious fervor of his voice brought a crimson flush to her face. She dropped her eyes, and toyed with the bracelet on her arm.

"I did not know you dealt in compliments, Mr. Trevlyn," she said, a little reproachfully, "I thought you were always sincere."

"And so I am, Miss Harrison."

"I take you at your word then," she said, recovering her playful air. "You will not blame me, if I lead you into difficulty?"

"Certainly not. I give myself into your keeping."

She put her hand within his arm, and led him up the stairs, to a private parlor on the second floor. Under the jet of light sat old Mr. Trevlyn. Archer's heart throbbed fiercely, and his lips grew set and motionless as he stood there before the man he hated, the man against whom he had made a vow of undying vengeance. Margie was looking at her guardian, and did not observe the startling change which had come over Arch. She spoke softly, addressing the old man.

"Dear guardian, this is the man who this morning so gallantly rescued me from a watery grave. I want you to help me thank him."

Mr. Trevlyn arose, came forward, and extended his hand. Arch stood erect, his arms folded on his breast. He did not move, nor offer to take the proffered hand. Mr. Trevlyn gave a start of surprise, and seizing a lamp from the table, held it up to the face of the young man. Arch did not flinch; he bore the insulting scrutiny with stony calmness.

The old man dashed down the lamp, and put his hand to his forehead. His face was livid with passion, his voice choked so as to be scarcely audible..

"Margie, Margie Harrison!" he exclaimed, "what is this person's name?"

"Just as I thought! Hubert's son!"

"Yes," said Arch, speaking with painful calmness, "I am Hubert's son; the son of the man your wicked cruelty murdered."

Mr. Trevlyn seized his cane and rushed upon his grandson; but Margie sprang forward and threw her arm across the breast of Arch.

"Strike him, if you dare!" she said, "but you shall strike a woman!"

Mr. Trevlyn looked at her and the weapon dropped to the floor.

"Margaret Harrison," he said sternly, "leave this room. This is no place for you. Obey me!"

"I am subject to no man's authority," she said, boldly; "and I will not leave the room. You shall not insult a gentleman to whom I owe my life, and who is here as my invited guest!"

"I shall defend myself! There is murder in that fellow's eye, if I ever saw it in that of any human being!"

"I am answerable for his conduct," she said with proud dignity. "He will do nothing of which a lady need stand in fear. I brought him here, ignorant of the relationship existing between you and him, and unconscious of the truth that I should be called upon to defend him from the causeless rage of his own grandfather."

Again the cane was uplifted, but Margaret laid her hand resolutely upon it.

"Give it to me. Will you—you who pride yourself upon your high and delicate sense of honor—will you be such an abject coward as to strike a defenseless man?"

He yielded her the weapon, and she threw it from the window.

"You may take away my defense, Margaret," said the old man, resolutely, "but you shall not prevent me from cursing him! A curse be upon him—"

"Hold, sir? Remember that your head is white with the snows of time. It will not be long before you go to the God who sees you every moment, who will judge you for every sin you commit."

"You may preach that stuff to the dogs! There is no God! I defy him and you! Archer Trevlyn, my curse be upon you and yours, now and forever! Child of a disobedient son! child of a mother who was a harlot——."

Arch sprang upon him with a savage cry. His hand was on his throat—God knows what crime he would have done, fired by the insult offered to the memory of his mother, had not Margie caught his hands, and drawn them away.

"Oh, Archer, Archer Trevlyn!" she cried, imploringly, "grant me this one favor—the very first I ever asked of you! For my sake, come away. He is an old man. Leave him to God, and his own conscience. You are young and strong; you would not disgrace your manhood by laying violent hands on the weakness of old age!"

"Did you hear what he called my mother, the purest woman the world ever saw? No man shall repeat that foul slander in my presence, and live!"

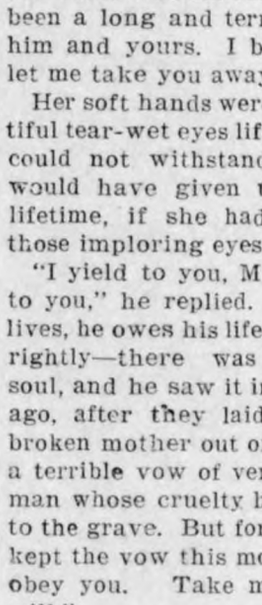
"He will not repeat it. Forgive him. He is fretful, and thinks the world has gone hard with him. He has sinned, and those who sin suffer always. It has been a long and terrible feud between him and yours. I brought you here—let me take you away."

Her soft hands were on his—her beautiful tear-wet eyes lifted to his face. He could not withstand that look. He would have given up the plans of a lifetime, if she had asked him with those imploring eyes.

"I yield to you, Miss Harrison—only to you," he replied. "If John Trevlyn lives, he owes his life to you. He judged rightly—there was murder in my soul, and he saw it in my eyes. Years ago, after they laid my poor heart-broken mother out of my sight, I swore a terrible vow of vengeance on the old man whose cruelty had hurried her into the grave. But for you, I should have kept the vow this moment. But I will obey you. Take me wherever you will."

She led him down the stairs, across the lawn, and out on the lonely beach, where the quiet moon and the passionless stars dropped down their crystal rain. The sweet south wind blew up cool from the sea, and afar off the tinkle of a sheep-bell stirred the silence of the night. The lamp in the distant lighthouse gleamed like a spark of fire, and at their feet broke the tireless billows, white as the snowdrifts of December.

CHAPTER VII.



THERE was something inexpressgbly soothing in the serenity of the night. Arch felt its influence. The hot color died out of his cheek, his pulse beat slower, he lifted his eyes to the purple arch of the summer sky.

"All God's universe is at rest," said Margie, her voice breaking upon his ear like a strain of music. "Oh, Archer Trevlyn, be at peace with all mankind!"

"I am—with all but him."

"And with him, also. The heart which bears malice cannot be a happy heart. There has been a great wrong done—I have heard the sad story—but it is divine to forgive. The man who can pardon the enemy who has wrought him evil, rises to a height where nothing of these earthly temptations can harm him more. He stands on a level with the angels of God. If you have been injured, let it pass. If your parents were hurried out of the world by his cruelty, think how much sooner they tasted the bliss of heaven! Every wrong will in due time be avenged. Justice will be done, for the Infinite One has promised it. Leave it in His hands. Archer, before I leave you, promise to forgive Mr. Trevlyn."

"I cannot! I cannot!" he cried, hoarsely. "Oh, Margie, Miss Harrison, ask of me anything but that, even to the sacrifice of my life, and I will willingly oblige you, but not that! not that!"

"That is all I ask. It is for your good and my peace of mind that I demand it. You have no right to make me unhappy, as your persistence in this dreadful course will do. Promise me, Archer Trevlyn!"

She put her hand on his shoulder; he turned his head and pressed his lips upon it. She did not draw it away, but stood, melting his hard heart with her wonderfully sweet gaze. He yielded all at once—she knew she had conquered. He sank down on one knee before her, and bowed his face upon his hands. She stooped over him, her hair swept his shoulders, the brown mingling with the deeper chestnut of his curling locks.

"You will promise me, Mr. Trevlyn?"

He looked up suddenly.

"What will you give me if I promise?"

"Ask for it."

He lifted a curl of shining hair.

"Yes," she said. "Promise me what I ask, and I will give it to you."

He took his pocket-knife and severed the tress.

"I promise you. I break my vow; I seek no revenge. I forgive John Trevlyn, and may God forgive him also. He is safe from me. I submit to have my parents sleep on unavenged. I leave him and his sins to the God whom he denies; and all because you have asked it of me."

Slowly and silently they went up to the house. At the door he said no good-night—he only held her hand a moment, closely, and then turned away.

Paul Linmere's wedding-day drew near. Between him and Margie there was no semblance of affection. Her coldness never varied, and after a few fruitless attempts to excite in her some manifestation of interest, he took his cue from her, and was as coldly indifferent as herself.

A few days before the tenth of October, which was the day appointed for the bridal, Dick Turner, one of Paul's friends, gave a supper at the Bachelors' club. A supper in honor of Paul, or to testify the sorrow of the club at the loss of one of its members. It was a very hilarious occasion, and the toasting and wine-drinking extended far into the small hours.

In a somewhat elevated frame of mind, Mr. Paul Linmere left the rooms of the club at about three o'clock in the morning, to return home. His way lay along the most deserted part of the city—a place where there were few dwellings, and the buildings were mostly stores and ware-houses.

Suddenly a touch on his arm stopped him. The same cold, deathly touch he had felt once before. He had drank just enough to feel remarkably brave, and turning, he encountered the strangely gleaming eyes that had frozen his blood that night in early summer. All his bravado left him. He felt weak and helpless as a child.

"What is it? what do you want?" he asked brokenly.

"Justice!" said the mysterious presence.

"Justice? For whom?"

"Arabel Vere."

"Arabel Vere! Curse her!" he cried savagely.

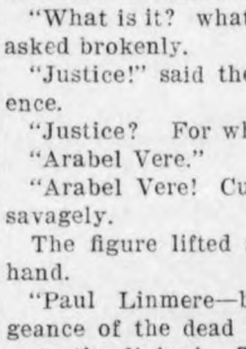
The figure lifted a spectral white hand.

"Paul Linmere—beware! The vengeance of the dead reaches sometimes unto the living! There is not water enough in the Seine to drown a woman's hatred. Death itself, cannot annihilate it! Beware!"

He struck savagely at the uplifted hand, but his arm met no resistance. He beat only against the impalpable air. His spectral visitor had flown, and left nothing behind her to tell of her presence.

With unsteady steps Mr. Paul Linmere hurried home, entered his room, and double-locked the door behind him.

CHAPTER VIII.



MR. TREVLYN had decided that the marriage of his ward should take place at Harrison Park, the old country seat of the Harrisons, on the Hudson. Here Margarie's parents had lived always in the summer; here they had died within a week of each other, and here, in the cypress grove by the river, they were buried. There would be no more fitting place for the marriage of their daughter to be solemnized. Margie neither opposed nor approved the plan. She did not oppose anything. She was passive, almost apathetic.

The admiring dressmakers and milliners came and went, fitting and measuring, and trying on their tasteful creations, but without eliciting any signs of interest or pleasure from Margarie Harrison. She gave no orders, found no fault; expressed no admiration nor its opposite. It was all the same to her.

The bridal dress came home a few days before the appointed day. It was a superb affair, and Margarie looked like a queen in it. It was of white satin, with a point lace overskirt; looped at intervals with tiny bouquets of orange blossoms.

MOTHERS MUST GUIDE.

Information They Should Furnish at the Proper Time—Knowledge by Which Suffering May Be Avoided.

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter.

sleep, pains in back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike to the society of children: when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then, her mother should come to her aid.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will, at this time, prepare the system for the coming change. See that she has it, and Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., will cheerfully answer any letters where information is desired. Thousands of women owe their health to her and the Vegetable Compound, and mothers are constantly applying to her for advice regarding their daughters.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Stove polish mixed with vinegar and a small bit of sugar will gain additional and more lasting luster.

Turpentine mixed in the black lead, and brushed over greasy stoves, is very effectual in cleansing them.

Keep cheese, when you have a large piece, in a cool, dry place, and wipe off any mold that appears. The cheese should be constantly turned from side to side.

The longer a baby's feet are kept in woolen shoes the better. Even the earliest kid shoes often begin to distort them, unless extremely well shaped, and these good shapes are not to be found in cheap and common shoes.

The first time meat is given to an invalid it should be a slice from a well-cooked joint—mutton is to be preferred to beef. Cut the meat up finely and serve it with gravy and salt, a potato mashed up by the side, if it is allowed by the doctor, but on no account mixed with it.

To store a brass bedstead so that it will not get spoiled wipe it with vaseline and then envelope it in soft rags. The vaseline should be put on thickly and a common kind will answer the purpose. Thoroughly sprinkle all stuffed furniture (underneath) with turpentine before storing it.

If you suspect an escape of gas mix one pound of soap with three and a half pints of water, then apply this sticky liquid with a brush to the gas pipe, when, if an escape is taking place, bubbles will readily be seen on the liquid and the position of the escape thus indicated without danger.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"DESTINY OF NATIONS," LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

"There Fell a Great Star From Heaven Burning as it Were a Lamp, and It Fell Upon the Third Part of the Rivers"—Rev. 8:10—11.

MANY commentators, like Patrick and Lowth, Thomas Scott, Matthew Henry and Albert Barnes, agree in saying that the star Wormwood, mentioned in Revelation, was Attila, king of the Huns. He was so called because he was brilliant as a star, and, like wormwood, he embittered everything he touched. We have studied the Star of Bethlehem, and the Morning Star of the Revelation, and the Star of Peace, but my present subject calls us to gaze at the star Wormwood, and my theme might be called "Brilliant Bitterness."

A more extraordinary character history does not furnish than this man this referred to, Attila, the king of the Huns. One day a wounded heifer came limping along through the fields and a herdsman followed its bloody track on the grass to see where the heifer was wounded and went on back further and further, until he came to a sword fast in the earth, the point downward, as though it had dropped from the heavens, and against the edges of this sword the heifer had been cut. The herdsman pulled up that sword and presented it to Attila Attila said that sword must have fallen from the heavens from the grasp of Mars, and its being given to him meant that Attila should conquer and govern the whole earth. Other mighty men have been delighted at being called liberators, or the merciful, or the good, but Attila called himself, and demanded that others call him, the Scourge of God. At the head of 700,000 troops mounted on Cappadocian horses, he swept everything from the Adriatic to the Black Sea. He put his iron heel on Macedonia and Greece and Thrace. He made Milan and Pavia and Padua and Verona beg for mercy, which he bestowed not. The Byzantine castles, to meet his ruinous levy, put up at auction massive silver tables and vases of solid gold. A city captured by him, the inhabitants were brought out and put into three classes: the first class, those who could bear arms, who must immediately enlist under Attila or be butchered; the second class, the beautiful women, who were made captives to the Huns; the third class, the aged men and women, who were robbed of everything and let go back to the city to pay heavy tax.

It was a common saying that the grass never grew again where the hoof of Attila's horse had trod. His armies reddened the waters of the Seine and the Moselle and the Rhine with carnage, and fought on the Catalonian Plains the fiercest battle since the world stood—300,000 dead left on the field! On and on, until all those who could not oppose him with arms lay prostrate on their faces in prayer, and, a cloud of dust seen in the distance, a bishop cried: "It is the aid of God!" and all the people took up the cry, "It is the aid of God!" As the cloud of dust was blown aside the banners of re-enforcing armies marched in to help against Attila, the Scourge of God. The most unimportant occurences he used as a supernatural resource, and after three months of failure to capture the city of Aquileia, and his army had given up the siege, the flight of a stork and her young from the tower of the city was taken by him as a sign that he was to capture the city, and his army, inspired by the same occurrence, resumed the siege, and took the walls at a point from which the stork had emerged. So brilliant was the conqueror in attire that his enemies could not look at him, but shaded their eyes or turned their heads.

Slain on the evening of his marriage by his bride, Ildico, who was hired for the assassination, his followers bewailed him not with tears, but with blood, cutting themselves with knives and lances. He was put into three coffins—the first of iron, the second of silver, and the third of gold. He was buried by night, and into his grave were poured the most valuabe coin and precious stones, amounting to the wealth of a kingdom. The grave diggers and all those who assisted at the burial were massacred, so that it would never be known where so much wealth was entombed. The Roman Empire conquered the world, but Attila conquered the Roman Empire. He was right in calling himself a scourge, but instead of being the scourge of God, he was the scourge of hell. Because of his brilliance and bitterness the commentators were right in believing him to be the star Wormwood. As the regions he devastated were parts most opulent with fountains and streams and rivers, you see how graphic is this reference in Revelation: "There fell a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers and upon the fountains of waters, and the name of the star is called Wormwood."

Have you ever thought how many embittered lives there are all about us, misanthropic, morbid, acrid, saturnine? The European plant from which wormwood is extracted, artemisia absinthium, is a perennial plant, and all the year round it is ready to exude its oil. And in many human lives there is a perennial distillation of acrid experiences. Yea, there are some whose whole work is to shed a baleful influence on others. There are Attilas of the home, or Attilas of the social circle, or Attilas of the church, or Attilas of the state, and one-third of the waters of all the world, if not two-thirds the waters, are poisoned by the falling of the star Wormwood. It is not complimentary to human nature that most men, as soon as they get great power, become overbearing. The more power men have the better, if their power used for good. The less power men have the better, if they use it for evil.

Birds circle round and round and round before they swoop upon that which they are aiming for. And if my discourse so far has been swinging round and round, this moment it drops straight on your heart and asks the question: Is your life a benediction to others, or an embitterment, a blessing or a curse, a balsam or wormwood?

Some of you, I know, are morning stars, and you are making the dawning life of your children bright with gracious influences, and you are beaming upon all the opening enterprises of philanthropic and Christian endeavor, and you are heralds of that day of Gospelization which will yet flood all the mountains and valleys of our sin-cursed earth. Hail, morning star! Keep on shining with encouragement and Christian hope!

Some of you are evening stars, and you are cheering the last days of old people; and though a cloud sometimes comes over you through the querulousness or unreasonableness of your old father and mother, it is only for a moment, and the star soon comes out clear again and is seen from all the balconies of the neighborhood. The old people will forgive your occasional shortcomings, for they themselves several times lost their patience when you were young, and slapped you when you did not deserve it. Hail, evening star! Hang on the darkening sky your diamond coronet.

But are any of you the star Wormwood? Do you scold and growl from the thrones paternal or maternal? Are your children everlastingly pecked it? Are you always crying, "Hush!" to the merry voices and swift feet, and their laughter, which occasionally trickles through at wrong times, and is suppressed by them until they can hold it no longer, and all the barriers burst into unlimited guffaw and cachinnation, as in high weather the water has trickled through a slight opening in the mill-dam, but afterward makes wider and wider breach until it carries all before it with irresistible freshet? Do not be too much offended at the noise your children now make. It will be still enough when one of them is dead. Then you would give your right hand to hear one shout from their silent voices, or one step from the still foot. You will not any of you have to wait very long before your house is stiller than you want it. Alas, that there are so many homes not known to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, where children are put on the limits, and whacked and cuffed and ear-pulled, and senselessly called to order, and answered sharp and suppressed, until it is a wonder that under such processes they do not all turn out Modocs and Nana Sahibs!

But I will change this and suppose you are a star of Worldly Prosperity. Then you have large opportunity. You can encourage that artist by buying his picture. You can improve the fields, the stables, the highway, by introducing higher style of fowl, and horse, and cow, and sheep. You can bless the world with pomological achievements in the orchards. You can advance arboriculture and arrest this deathful iconoclasm of the American forests. You can put a piece of sculpture into the niche of that public academy. You can endow a college. You can stocking a thousand bare feet from the winter frost. You can build a church. You can put a missionary of Christ on that foreign shore. You can help ransom a world. A rich man with his heart right—can you tell me how much good a James Lenox or a George Peabody or a Peter Cooper or a William E. Dodge did while living, or is doing now that he is dead? There is not a city, town, or neighborhood that has not glorious specimens of consecrated wealth.

What is true of individuals is true of nations. God sets them up to revolve as stars, but they may fall as wormwood.

Tyre—the atmosphere of the desert, fragrant with spices, coming in caravans to her fairs; all seas cleft into foam by the keels of her laden merchantmen; her markets rich with horses and camels from Togarmah, her bazaars filled with upholstery from Dedan, with emerald and coral and agate from Syria, with wines from Helbon, with embroidered work from Ashur and Chilmad. Where now the gleam of her towers, where the roar of her chariots, where the masts of her ships? Let the fishermen who dry their nets where once she stood, let the sea that rushes upon the barrenness where once she challenged the admiration of all nations, let the barbarians who set their rude tents where once her palaces glittered—answer the question. She was a star, but by her own sin turned to wormwood and has fallen.

Hundred-gated Thebes—for all time to be the study of the antiquarian and hieroglyphist; her stupendous ruins spread over tweny-seven miles; her sculptures presenting figures of warrior and chariot, the victories with which the now forgotten kings of Egypt shook the nations; her obelisks and columns; Carnac and Luxor, the stupendous temples of her pride! Who can imagine the greatness of Thebes in those days when the hippodrome rang with her sports and foreign royalty bowed at her shrines and her avenues roared with the wheels of processions in the wake of returning conquerors? What dashed down the vision of chariots and temples and thrones? What hands pulled upon the columns of her glory? What ruthlessness defaced her sculptured wall and broke obelisks and left her indescribable temples great skeletons of granite? What spirit of destruction spread the lair of wild beasts in her royal sepulchres, and taught the miserable cottagers of to-day to build huts in the courts of her temples, and sent desolation and ruin skulking behind the obelisks and dodging among the sarcophagi and leaning against the columns and stooping under the arches and weeping in the waters which go mournfully by as though they were carrying the tears of all ages? Let the mummies break their long silence and come up to shiver in the desolation, and point to fallen gates and shattered statues and defaced sculpture, responding: "Thebes built not one temple to God. Thebes hated righteousness and loved sin. Thebes was a star, but she turned to wormwood and has fallen."

Babylon, with her 250 towers and her brazen gates and her embattled walls, the splendor of the earth gathered within her palaces, her hanging gardens built by Nebuchadnezzar to please his bride, Amytis, who had been brought up in a mountainous country and could not endure the flat country round Babylon—these hanging gardens built, terrace above terrace, till at the height of 400 feet there were woods waving and fountains playing, the verdure, the foliage, the glory looking as if a mountain were on the wing. On the tiptop a king walking with his queen, among statues snowy white, looking up at birds brought from distant lands, and drinking out of tankards of solid gold or looking off over rivers and lakes upon nations subdued and tributary, crying: "Is not this great Babylon which I have built?"

I pray that our nation may not copy the crimes of the nations that have perished, and our cup of blessing turn to wormwood, and like them we go down. I am by nature and by grace an optimist, and I expect that this country will continue to advance until Christ shall come again. But be not deceived! Our only safety is in righteousness toward God and justice toward man. If we forget the goodness of the Lord to this land, and break his Sabbaths, and improve not by the dire disasters that have again and again come to us as a nation, and we learn saving lesson neither from civil war nor raging epidemic, nor drought, nor mildew, nor scourge of locust and grasshopper, nor cyclone, nor earthquake; if the political corruption which has poisoned the fountains of public virtue and beslimed the high places of authority, making free government at times a hissing and a byword in all the earth; if the drunkenness and licentiousness that stagger and blaspheme in the streets of our great cites as though they were reaching after the fame of a Corinth and a Sodom are not repented of, we will yet see the smoke of our nation's ruin; the pillars of our national and state capitols will fall more disastrously than when Samson pulled down Dagon; and future historians will record upon the page bedewed with generous tears the story that the free nation of the West arose in splendor which made the world stare. It had magnificent possibilities. It forgot God. It hated justice. It hugged its crime. It halted on its high march. It reeled under the blow of calamity. It fell. And as it was going down, all the despotisms of earth from the top of bloody thrones began to shout, "Aha, so would we have it," while struggling and oppressed people looked out from dungeon bars with tears and groans and cries of untold agony, the scorn of those and the woe of these uniting in the exclamation, "Look yonder! there fell a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the rivers and upon the fountains of waters; and the name of the star is called Wormwood!"

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The new deficiency bill was taken up and passed as it came from the house. A bill was passed amending the law for punishment for trespass or selling liquor or wines under any other than the proper name and brand. Final report on postoffice appropriation bill was agreed to.

HOUSE.

In order to guard against the failure of a quorum the house revoked all leaves of absence except for sickness. Final report on postoffice bill was agreed to. Bill to facilitate the reorganization of the Northern Pacific railroad passed. The purpose of the bill is to enable the road to reorganize under a federal charter.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The senate to-day agreed to final conference reports on the naval and industrial appropriation bills, leaving only the sundry civil and District of Columbia conference reports outstanding. The bill to amend the law respecting punishment for contempt of court was discussed by Hill and Allen, but a final vote was not reached. The measure is the result of the agitation over the imprisonment of Eugene V. Debs and others for contempt.

HOUSE.

The house to-day gave its final approval to conference reports on two of the four appropriation bills which were in issue last night, the naval and the Indian bills. In the contested election case of Aldrich and Underwood, from the Ninth Alabama district, Aldrich was seated, the Tucker rule, compelling members to vote, being used for the first time during the session.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—A number of bills were passed during the day, including the important bill giving trial by jury and other safeguards in prosecution for contempt of court. Senate bill to increase pay of mail carriers passed. Agreement was reached on the sundry civil and District of Columbia appropriation bills and a resolution passed for final adjournment at 4 p. m. to-morrow.

HOUSE.

Fifty-three bills and joint resolutions were passed, the most important of which probably was the bill appropriating $200,000 for the trans-Mississippi exposition at Omaha. Conferencee reports in the District of Columbia and sundry civil appropriation bills were agreed to and the senate resolution for final adjournment was passed.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—A committee was appointed to wait on the president and inform him that congress was about to adjourn, and later they reported that the president had no further business to communicate to congress. Resolutions of thanks to the vice-president and president pro tem were passed, and at 4 p. m. the senate was declared adjourned.

HOUSE.

A few bills of minor importance passed, and at 4 o'clock Speaker Reed, in a short speech, declared the house adjourned.

TRUSTEES ARRESTED.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., June 12.—Sheriff Cannon arrested all the trustees of the University of Illinois, except Governor Altgeld, State Superintendent Inglis and Mrs. Flower, on an indictment charging them with violating the state flag law. They were taken before Judge Wright in the circuit court and O. Cunningham, of Urbana, signed their appearance bonds in the sum of $200 each.

The following good words from Henry Wallace recently appeared in Wallace's Farmer: A few years ago the editor of this paper desired to carry some life insurance, and after looking the matter up carefully took a five thousand dollar policy in the Des Moines Life Association. Their plan seemed to avoid the excessive cost of old line insurance, and by providing a reasonable reserve it seems to overcome the danger incident to post-mortem assessment life insurance. As a member of the Des Moines Life Association we have been pleased to note its large substantial growth; especially in seasons of such general business adversity. The insurance in force, deposit of securities with the auditor of state and general assets all showed a large increase during 1895.

HEALTH IN OLD AGE.

AN OLD WOMAN FINDS THE TRUE SOURCE OF VITALITY.

From the Union, Port Jervis, N. Y.

But a short time ago, in a distant part of the country, we heard of a cure by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which seemed almost marvelous, and more recently another substantial evidence of their value reached our ears. Being of an inquiring turn of mind, and wishing to know just how much there was in the story, a reporter was sent to interview the person said to be thus benefited. If the narrative as it had reached our ears was true, it was only simple justice to let it be known—if it proved untrue, it would be well to know it.

The person alluded to above as having been thus greatly benefited by the use of Pink Pills is Mrs. Jane Hotalen, of Hainesville, N. J., a pleasant hamlet in Sussex County, about fifteen miles from this office. The reporter had no difficulty in finding Mrs. Hotalen. She is a pleasant-faced old lady, looking to be sixty-five, but is in reality seventy-two years of age. After a few preliminary remarks in explanation of the call she was asked if she had any objection to giving us the details of the case and how she came to try this now famous remedy.

"Not at all," said she. "If my experience can be of any good to others, I am sure they are welcome to it—it can do me no harm."

"When were you taken sick and what was the nature of the malady?"

"It was about two years ago. The trouble was rheumatic in character—sciatica, they called it—and it was very painful indeed. The difficulty began in my hip and extended the whole length of the limb, crippling me completely. I suffered intensely from it, and the ordinary treatment gave me not the slightest alleviation. I was under treatment about a month as stated, but grew worse instead of better, and was fast becoming discouraged."

"What brought Pink Pills to your notice?"

"My son called my attention to an article in a paper, in which it was stated that a Mr. Struble, of Branchville, a village in this county, had been greatly benefited by their use, and suggested that it would be a good plan to try them. But I was skeptical in regard to their value—in fact, I had no confidence in their efficacy, and rather laughed at the suggestion. But the trouble increased and I was badly crippled. A few days later my son was about to visit a neighboring town and suggested again that it might be well to try this much-talked-of remedy, and I then consented. He bought me a box of them, and I began taking them at once. At the end of a week I noted a marked improvement, and by the time I had taken the first box I was able to walk without a cane. I continued their use, taking several boxes, and am, as you see, in a very comfortable state of health."

"Have you had any return of the trouble?"

"Not as yet, though at my time of life, seventy-two, it would not be surprising if I should have. If it comes I should at once begin the use of the pills. I suppose I inherit a tendency to troubles of this kind—my mother died from them."

"Did you ever note any ill effects from the use of Pink Pills?"

"None whatever. They never disturbed my stomach in any way or caused me any annoyance. I am able, as you see, to attend to my own work."

The reporter thanked Mrs. Hotalen for her courtesy and bade her good day. It is not often that one can witness such a complete recovery from such a pertinacious trouble at such an advanced age, and such instances cannot fail to produce a profound impression. Readers of the Union may rely on the absolute accuracy of all the statements here given — nothing has been exaggerated, nothing withheld.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, by addressing Dr. Williams' Med. Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

MERCHANT AND BUYER.

Don't buy a pig in a poke.

He who disparages wants to buy.

He who buys betimes buys cheaply.

Quick returns make rich merchants.

Merchant to-day, beggar to-morrow.

He is no merchant that always gains.

The merchant that gains not, loseth.

The merchant that loseth cannot laugh.

He who buys without discretion buys to sell.

He that buys and sells is called a merchant.

It is good to buy when another wants to sell.

Who buys wants a hundred eyes; who sells needs but one.

A merchant has never enough until he has got a little more.

He who buys what he don't want will sell what he does want.

To be a merchant the art consists more in getting paid than in making sales.

If a man knew when things would be dear he need be a merchant but once in the year.

It is naught, it is naught, sayeth the buyer, but when he is gone his way then he boasteth.

When you buy one fine thing you must buy ten more that your appearance may be all of a piece.

EXONERATED.

Court Martial Declares That General Barrateiri is Innocent.

MASSOWAH, June 14.—The court-martial trying General Barrateiri found him not guilty of the charges preferred against him. General Barrateiri was commander of the Italian forces employed in Abyssinia. He was in personal command of the army when in March last the Abyssinians inflicted a crushing defeat on the Italians. He was tried before a court martial for crimes coming under the provisions of articles 74 and 88 of the military penal code, of having, on March 1 last, attacked the Abyssinians from inexcusable motives under circumstances rendering defeat inevitable and of having abandoned the chief command of the troops from half past 12 on March 1 until 9 o'clock on March 3, thereby failing to give the orders required for lessening the consequences of the defeat.

ONE THOUSAND SLAIN.

Dervishes Are Put to Rout by the Egyptian Troops.

Firket, Egypt, dispatch: This point has been taken by Egyptian troops, en route to Dongola, and their manner of acquitting themselves in this, the first engagement of the Nile campaign, has given great satisfaction to the British officers in command of them. The Egyptian forces left Akasheh, the Egyptian outpost, and marched twenty miles during the night. The dervishes were taken completely by surprise, but made a brave though hopeless fight. They were finally put to rout by a flank movement, executed by the cavalry. Seeing themselves in danger of being surrounded, the forces of the khalifa took flight to the southward, toward Suarda, pursued by the cavalry. Suarda is nearly a hundred miles south of here, but it is strongly held by a force of several thousand dervishes. Reports received indicate that the loss to the dervishes will amount to a thousand men.

RELEASE OF JOHN HAMMOND.

With the Other Reform Transvaal Leaders He is Fined $125,000.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—United States Vice-Consul Knight, at Cape Town, South Africa, reported by cable to the state department that the imprisoned reform leaders, John H. Hammond, Colonel Rhodes, George Farrar and J. W. Leonard, have been released. The leaders were fined $125,000 each, and the sentence of banishment was commuted.

Venezuelan Dispute to Be Settled by Arbitration.

LONDON, June 12.—In response to questions, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Curzon, said in the house of commons that negotiations were proceeding with the United States with a view to the settlement of the Venezuelan dispute by arbitration. He declined to speak further.

Three Only Suffocated.

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., June 13.—The Taylorville coal mining works were destroyed by fire and eighty-five men entombed alive. After hours of suffocation all but three were rescued alive. The fire, which was caused by an explosion of gasoline, spread rapidly throughout the mine, cutting off the men at work in the lower levels. Those rescued were taken out through a shaft which the fire did not reach. The flames are still raging below and the bodies of the three dead miners can not be got. Twelve mules also perished.

Spain's Crops Short.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Owing to the copious rains early in May, the condition of Spanish grain crops is materially improved; still, according to United States Consul Fay at Denia, owing to the diminished area of crops Spain will import 600,000,000 pounds of wheat. He suggests that since no country is as favorably situated as the United States to supply this demand, the market may be secured by the establishment of direct steamship lines

British Leaders Alarmed.

LONDON, June 12.—The Westminster Gazette says that Lord Salisbury has summoned a meeting of the leaders of the ministerial party for the purpose of discussing its position. The meeting was called, the Gazette asserts, in consequence of the discontent of many members of the house of commons over the mismanagement of the legislative programme of the government.

BIG AND GOOD.

BattleAx PLUG

No doubt about that.
But once in a while it isn't.
For instance, there's "BATTLE AX."
The piece is bigger than you ever saw before for 5 cents. And the quality is, as many a man has said, "mighty good."
There's no guess work in this statement.
You can prove it by investing 5 cents in "BATTLE AX."

W. R. ROBERTS who is widely and favorably known in banking and business circles of Omaha, Neb., writes on March 7th 1896: "I have been troubled with NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA, cold feet and hands and lack of circulation, loss of flesh, etc. I commenced taking Dr. Kay's Renovator Jan'y 15th 1896 and I continued to improve from the third day, and have found this medicine most pleasant, no griping, no sickness at the stomach; but a complete Renovator, and I voluntarily without the Doctor's request, recommend this to any one afflicted with indigestion and nervousness which follows. I now eat well, sleep well, and have gained about twenty-five pounds in weight, am free from cold feet or hands, circulation good and I feel better than for many years and I attribute this to Dr. Kay's Renovator. One 25c box will convince any one that it surpasses the whole train of pills and cathartics usually taken. I now only take one little tablet when I over load my stomach and it will relieve me at once." AT THIS TIME OF YEAR it is invaluable as it renovates and invigorates the whole system and purifies and enriches the blood giving new life and vigor to the whole body, curing spring fever, dyspepsia, constipation, liver and kidney diseases and all nervous and blood diseases, headache, billiousness etc. It is the best nerve tonic known for worn out business men. It has 2 to 4 times as many doses as liquid medicines selling for the same price. Sold by druggists or sent by mail, for 25cts. and $1. Send free sample and booklet; it has many valuable receipes, gives symptoms and treatment for nearly all diseases and many sa- worth $5, if they could not get another. Address Dr. B. J. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. Harr.

Henry Schroeder had a runaway last Tuesday. When he drovh out of the yard at Aug. Lau's place over a little culvert, one side of the tongue came loose, the team ran, throwing Henry out cutting a bad gash on one leg and bruising his head quite badly. The team ran into Martin's yard and were caught, with no other damage. Henry was brought into town and Dr. Spooner dressed the wound.

Conscience Stricken.

A parcel containing an old towel, a pair of socks, hairbrush and key was recently found just inside the fence of an Adelaide police station, with a piece of cardboard on which was written: "On Dec. 5, 1895, the inclosed were taken by a young wild oat sower in devilment from Wolseley. Now converted, he restores them with apologies: Bridle from an open shed alongside a store near Dunn's, at 6 p. m.; socks from house nearly opposite Dunn's; towel from next to the sock place; brush and key from railway. All were taken by a Melbourne profligate for a lark between 5 and 6 p. m. He is now converted, and, having collected the articles, restores them through the police." What a humorist, in his unregenerate days, this Melbourne profligate must have been!—Westminster Gazette.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

A CLEVER FORGER.

Man Who Victimized Iowa People in the Toils in Wisconsin.

DAVENPORT, June 19.—Chief of Police Kessler, of Davenport, is in receipt of a letter from W. A. Pinkerton, of Chicago, announcing the fact that a man named Chapman, alias F. Farley, Charles T. Ash and Jos. F. Neimeck, had been arrested at Eau Claire, Wis., on the charge of forgery. Accompanying this letter was a photograph of the man under arrest. Several business men called during the day at the police station and identified the picture as that of a likeness of the man who had passed checks on them in Davenport during the first week of May, securing several hundred dollars. Chapman, whom the man arrested is said to be, is regarded as one of the best known experts in forgery in the west. He never drew a check without the endorsement of the cashier of the bank on which it was drawn, consequently had little difficulty in getting them cashed, and in case the Eau Claire people do not make the charge stick he will be brought to Davenport. Chapman operated successfully in Des Moines and is wanted there badly for victimizing several prominent business houses.

WILL DISMISS BIG CASES.

Probability That Burlington Land Cases Will Be Dropped.

DES MOINES, June 19.—United States District Attorney Fullen announces that in all probability the cases brought against the Burlington road and purchasers from it, to recover for the government several thousand acres of land in the southwest part of the state will be dismissed. The suits were brought under a Kansas case, to recover lands turned over to the railroad company, on which there were prior claimants. A decision has been rendered in the Winona & St. Peter road, in which it was held that the government has no recourse as against purchasers of the railroad title, and this has been affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. An act was also passed by the last congress, affirming the title of the purchasers, so there is little left in the cases. He says the only recourse is to dismiss the present suits and bring actions against the railroad company alone for the value of the lands. He does not know whether this step will be taken or not.

ESCAPED CONVICTS CAPTURED.

Good Work of Guards Succeeds in Their Capture.

ANAMOSA, June 21.—Two convicts, Dunn and Ryan, who escaped recently, have been captured. When their escape was discovered a large force of guards, under the personal supervision of Warden Madden, were set watching the cross roads for miles around where they were supposed to be in hiding. About 10 o'clock at night a guard who was watching one of the cross roads saw in the darkness two men approaching and called to them to throw up their hands and halt, at the same time giving a signal for the other guards that were in hailing distance. Ryan gave bimself up, but before the other guards could get there Dunn had escaped in the rain and darkness. The next morning, however, Dunn was overhauled and captured, although he had been to a farm house and demanded and received some citizen's clothes.

FATHER AND SON FIGHT.

Inhuman Act of a Father Residing at Colon.

COLON, June 21.—Jno. Logan, the hackman of this place, got into a fight with his stepson Ed, which came near resulting in a tragedy. Becoming enraged the old man grabbed the boy by the head and with his pocket knife slashed his left face from ear to chin, laying wide the jaw bone. An Oskaloosa physician was called and found it necessary to take twenty stitches to sew up the wound. Though an ugly wound, the doctor says the fellow will recover.

DIED IN BED.

Wm. Barroll, an Old Resident of Adel, Passes Away.

ADEL, June 19.—Wm. Barroll, one of the oldest residents of Adel, was found dead in his bed. He lived alone and the neighbors failing to see him all day became suspicious that something was wrong. The doors were locked and the deputy sheriff was called on to force them open. Quite a sum of money was found sewed in the lining of the dead man's vest.

DAVIS GOES TO CHICAGO.

Will Open a Branch of the Boies Literary Bureau.

CRESTON, June 19.—S. A. Brewster, chairman of the Boies Literary bureau, which has its headquarters in Creston, has sent Judge S. R. Davis to Chicago for the purpose of opening Boies headquarters at the Palmer house. A conference of the Boies leaders decided on this move. The effort will be made to promote Iowa's candidate at that point.

YETZER GOES TO PRISON.

Fraudulent Banker Taken From a Sick Bed to the Penitentiary.

ATLANTIC, June 20.—After a most desperate legal fight of nearly two years, from the time sentence was pronounced upon J. C. Yetzer, president of the defunct Cass county bank, he has been taken to Fort Madison to serve a sentence of five years, upon the charge of fraudulent banking. The appeal to the supreme court delayed his being taken until April, when they affirmed the decision of the lower court. His attorney asked that a rehearing be given, on the ground that one of the state's lawyers was seen taking drinks with a juryman; also that owing to his extreme age and physical condition they reconsider their decision and let him spend his few remaining days with his family. This gave him nearly three months more outside the penitentiary walls; but finally word came that a rehearing would not be granted. At the time, he was in bed with acute inflammatory rheumatism. The district judge, upon certificate of the attending physician, instructed the sheriff to take him and deliver him at Fort Madison in two weeks; but his bondsmen gave him up, and he was taken away, much to the surprise of many of his friends. It was a pitiful sight, as he had to be carried to the train, and a physician accompanied him.

WALNUT IS FIRE SWEPT.

WALNUT, June 22.—Fire, supposed to be of incendiary origin, destroyed fifteen business houses, the entire east side of the main street being consumed. The loss on buildings alone is estimated at about $15,000, while the loss on merchandise swells the total to about $50,000. The buildings destroyed consist of the postoffice, Bluhm & Hellman's saloon, Mick's restaurant and bakery, Mrs. Griffith's millinery store, Flesen's meat market, Voss' shoe shop, Moritz's butcher shop, Howard's billiard hall, Peters' billiard hall, Enke's saloon, Enke's tailor shop, Grantz & Gloe's agricultural implement warehouse and office, Seiffert & Wise's lumber office, and two ice houses containing about 200 tons of ice belonging to the local butcher shops.

FAIRFIELD BANK ROBBERS.

One Seriously and One Badly Wounded.

OTTUMWA, June 22.—Watchman Fry, at Fairfield, surprised two men endeavoring to gain an entrance to the vault of a bank. They opened fire on him with revolvers. He returned fire, seriously wounding one and inflicting a bad wound on the other, who escaped to the woods. He says he will not be taken alive. Evidence found on the person of the man seriously wounded proves him to be a noted criminal.

KIDNAPPED A YOUNG LADY.

Sensational Crime Reported From a Farm Near Remsen.

SIOUX CITY, June 20.—Sheriff Davenport has received word from Sheriff Herron, of LeMars, saying that a girl named Clara Deiterman has been kidnapped from a farm two miles from Remsen. The girl is a German, but talks fairly good English. She is described as being 19 years of age, and when she left wore a red and blue calico dress and no stockings.

Charged With Forgery.

CEDAR RAPIDS, June 20.—Joseph Kasper was arrested on a charge of uttering a forged note in the sum of $105. He has been held in bonds of $1,000 for preliminary hearing.

BREVITIES.

The great shows of Adam Forepaugh and Sells Bros. have been combined into one monster aggregation, which will visit several cities in Iowa shortly. Des Moines will be visited on June 23, while Fort Dodge will be favored on July 11. The show has been doing an excellent business this season.

Grinnell dispatch: Two daughters of Frank Phipps living six miles west, near Rock Creek Grove, committed suicide by taking strychnine. The oldest was married but had separated from her husband last spring. The youngest was only 16 years old, the married one a few years older and leaves a child a year and a half old. They had gone to work in a field near the house in the morning and at ten o'clock took poison and died in an hour.

Lee Phillips, a Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern conductor, while engaged in switching at Iowa City, in some manner missed his footing, falling beneath the wheels, which passed over his legs and body in a diagonal direction. He was also dragged some distance before the train could be stopped. It was found that his left leg was hanging by a shred at the knee. Besides this, he had several scalp wounds, and his arms and face were badly bruised. He was taken to Mercy hospital, where he died.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

CUBA.

MADRID, June 17.—With a view to preventing a duel between Marshal Martinez de Campos and General Borrero, the government has decided to employ the former in active service. The marshal, however, declares that he will not accept a command except in Cuba.

HAVANA, June 21.—The event of the week has been Gomez's splendid victory at Najasa, Puerto Principe. The details thus far are meagre. General Jiminez Castellanos left Puerto Principe with 2,114 men, 342 horses and five mounted pieces of artillery. They encamped at a cattle ranch called Saratoga, where the attack commenced by a charge of 1,000 rebel cavalrymen with machetes. For two days the insurgents continued harrassing the troops, killing and wounding many. The actual losses on both sides have not been ascertained yet. It is only known that the Spaniards brought with them 320 wounded from the field of action, and if any were left behind it is not known. Report has it that the total Spanish loss in killed, wounded and missing was over 1,000.

WANT RHODES PROSECUTED.

Another Move by Kruger That May Embarrass Mr. Chamberlain.

CAPE TOWN, June 21.—The secretary of state for the Transvaal has telegraphed to the British high commissioner here saying that, having in view the welfare and peace of South Africa, the Transvaal government is convinced that the proofs in its possession, and which are at the disposal of Great Britain, now completely justify and compel the bringing to trial of Cecil Rhodes, Alfred Beit and Dr. Harris, all of the British South Africa company, and connected with the raid into the Transvaal. The secretary adds that the Transvaal republic is obliged to press this step on Great Britain and also to urge that all control of the British chartered South Africa company be transferred to Great Britain.

THOUSANDS STARVE.

Terrible Condition Existing in Tonkin, China.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 20.—The most terrible famine which threatens to plunge the most prosperous portion of Tonkin, China, into the direst misery is desolating that country. The harvest has been a failure, and the natives throughout the whole country are in a most miserable condition. In Hanoi, the other day, a mother offered her three infants for 8 cents, preferring to hand them over to an European rather than see them perish from hunger in her arms. The inhabitants emigrate from the country en masse to cities to beg for sustenance, while many others go about pillaging and perpetrating acts of the grossest violence. Several cases of cholera are reported from the provinces where the famine has been felt most severely.

VENEZUELA ANGERS ENGLAND.

LONDON, June 20.—In the house of commons the secretary of state for the colonies, Joseph Chamberlain, confirmed the report that Venezuelan troops had entered the territory in dispute between Venezuela and British Guiana, and had interfered with a party of British surveyors, who had asked for the support of colonial authorities.

CARACAS, June 20.—A British official with 100 laborers was opening a road from the Barama to the Cuyuni river, within the Schomburg line, when they were stopped by armed Venezuelans. Orders have been sent from Georgetown to the British officials not to offer violent resistance to the Venezuelans, but to withdraw under protest. No excitement has been caused in the country by the incident.

SILVER COMMITTEE.

Democrats Will Move From Washington to Chicago.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The removal of the headquarters of the democratic silver committee to Chicago has been contemplated for some time. The rooms of the committee in Washington will be closed at once and quarters will be opened in the Sherman house at Chicago. After the national convention the committee will no longer exist, but the work will be taken up by the national democratic committee, of which Senator Jones, of Arkansas, expects to be chairman.

Boycott All Off.

MILWAUKEE, June 20.—The boycott which was declared against the street railway, as a result of the late strike, has been declared off by the union. The end of the boycott practically ends the street railway troubles.

Mark Hanna Chairman.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—At a meeting of the republican national committee, Mark Hanna, of Ohio, was elected chairman and empowered to select the other officers of the committee.

STRONG BOX FOR SILVER.

Subtreasury is to Have a Chest That Will Hold 6,000,000 Dollars.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The subtreasury in this city is to be provided with additional storage capacity for about 6,000,000 silver dollars. An immense steel chest is now being built for that purpose, and will be finished next week. The walls of the chest are two inches thick, and it is twelve feet square, with a height of ten feet from floor to ceiling. Its construction was authorized by the secretary of the treasury two or three months ago to meet the demands for storage room for silver, which has been accumulating at this subtreasury in spite of shipments to other depositories. There are now in the subtreasury vaults here 50,000,000 silver dollars and $5,000,000 of subsidiary coin.

EXPLOSION KILLS FOURTEEN.

Yacht Blown to Splinters Kills Many Persons.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., June 20.—At Taylor Cycle Park, this city, where the state meet of the L. A. W. was taking place, a steam yacht, Tirus Sheard, exploded her boiler. Ten were killed outright, one died on the way to the hospital and three are fatally injured and six seriously injured. The boat was blown to splinters. Three of the bodies have not been recovered and are believed to be in Erie canal. The explosion resulted from a defective working pump connected with the boiler.

SPAIN IS WRATHY.

Hot Because of That Cuban Flag at St. Louis.

MADRID, June 22.—A very bad impression has been made here by the cablegrams received from the United States announcing that the Cuban flag was displayed at the republican national convention in St. Louis. The press, in the comments upon the occurrence, are agreed that the real Cuban question is not in Cuba, but in the United States, and the government is urged by the newspapers to prepare at once for all contingencies.

TEN THOUSAND DROWNED.

Awful Work of Tidal Wave Which Recently Visited Japan.

YOKAHAMA, June 20.—It is now estimated that 10,000 people were drowned by the tidal wave on Yesso island during the series of earthquakes there. Many coast towns were washed away entirely or in part.

Silver Republicans.

ST. LOUIS, June 19.—The twenty-three silver delegates who left the convention adopted an address which declares their principles and proposes Senator Teller as the fusion candidate for all who are opposed to McKinley and a gold standard. It invites all parties or organizations that have their nominees yet to name and their platforms to adopt, to unite on Senator Teller as their standard bearer, and to ignore all other issues in the effort to reform the currency system.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Next week Senator Dubois will open Teller headquarters in this city. It was intended to take all of the bolting delegates to Chicago from St. Louis, but the plans were changed. Early next week thousands of Teller buttons will be distributed.

The Matabelian Uprising Again.

LONDON, June 21.—Telegrams received from Buluwayo indicate that the Mashonas have joined the Matabele uprising and the situation is much more grave. There are numerous cases of isolated settlers being massacred. The people around Salisbury and Fort Charter have been ordered into laager. The whole Mazoe district is full of revolt. A dispatch from Buluwayo says the situation is so serious that the Cape mounted infantry has been ordered to Mashonaland and the imperial troops have been ordered up from Mafeking.

TERSE NEWS.

The Goodrich reservoir, located fifteen miles from Baker City, Ore., collapsed a few nights since and the great volume of water wrecked everything in its path. Many bridges were destroyed and the family of R. French, consisting of seven persons, were drowned.

Yokohama dispatch: Shocks of earthquake, accompanied by a tidal wave, have ravaged the northern part of Japan. The entire town of Kamaishi has been destroyed and 1,000 persons were killed. During twenty hours there were 159 distinct shocks of earthquake.

Emperor William, of Germany, granted an imposing audience to Li Hung Chang in the Knights' Hall of the old castle. Li Hung Chang was conveyed thither in the royal carriages, escorted by uhlans. Emperor William and Empress Augusta were seated upon thrones, surrounded by the royal princes. Chancellor von Hohenlohe and Freiherr Marschal von Bierberstein, the minister of foreign affairs, were also present. Short speeches were made by Li Hung Chang and Emperor William.

THE FATAL GLOVE.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER VIII.—[CONTINUED.]

Mr. Trevlyn had the diamonds, which were the wonder of the city, richly set, and Margarie was to wear them on her bridal night, as a special mark of the old man's favor. For, next to the diamonds, the sordid man loved Margie Harrison.

Linmere's gift to his bride was very simple, but in exquisite taste, Mrs. Weldon decided. A set of turquoise, with his initials and hers interwoven. Only when they were received, did Margie come out of her cold composure. She snapped together the lid of the casket containing them with something very like angry impatience, and gave the box to her maid.

"Take them away, Florine, instantly, and put them where I shall never see them again!"

The woman looked surprised, but she was a discreet piece, and strongly attached to her mistress, and she put the ornaments away without comment.

The tenth of October arrived. A wet, lowering day, with alternate snatches of rain and sunshine, settling down toward sunset into a steady, uncomfortable drizzle. A dismal enough wedding-day.

The ceremony was to take place at nine o'clock in the evening, and the invited guests were numerous. Harrison Park would accommodate them royally.

Mr. Linmere was expected out from the city in the six o'clock train, and as the stopping place was not more than five minutes' walk from the Park he had left orders that no carriage need be sent. He would walk up. He thought he should need the stimulus of the fresh air to carry him through the fiery ordeal, he said, laughingly.

The long day wore slowly away. The preparations were complete. Mrs. Weldon, in her violet moire-antique and family diamonds, went through the stately parlors once more to assure herself that everything was au fait.

At five o'clock the task of dressing the bride began. The bridesmaids were in ecstacies over the finery, and they took almost as much pains in dressing Margie as they would in dressing themselves for a like occasion.

Margie's cheeks were as white as the robes they put on her. One of the girls suggested rouge, but Alexandrine demurred.

"A bride should always be pale," she said. "It looks so interesting, and gives every one the idea that she realizes the responsibility she is taking upon herself—doesn't that veil fall sweetly?"

"Yes, everything is as perfect as any one could desire," said Alexandrine. "How do you feel, Margie, dear?"

"Very well, thank you."

"You are so self-possessed. Now I should be all of a tremble! Dear me! I wonder people can be so cold on the eve of such a great change! But then we are so different. Will you not take a glass of wine, Margie?"

"Thank you, no. I do not take wine, you know."

"I know, but on this occasion. Hush! that was the whistle of the train. Mr. Linmere will be here in a few minutes! Shall I bring him up to see you? It is not etiquette for the groom to see the bride on the day of their marriage, until they meet at the altar; but, you look so charming, dear! I would like him to admire you. He has such exquisite taste."

Margie's uplifted eyes had a half-frightened look, which Alexandrine did not understand.

"No, no!" she said, hurriedly, "do not bring him here! We will follow etiquette for this time, if you please, Miss Lee."

"O well, just as you please, my dear."

"And now, my friends, be kind enough to leave me alone," said Margie. "I want the last hours of my free life to myself. I will ring when I desire your attendance."

Margie's manner forbade any objection on the part of the attendants, and they somewhat reluctantly withdrew. She turned the key upon them, and went to the window. The rain had ceased falling, but the air was damp and dense.

Her room was on the first floor, and the windows, furnished with balconies, opened to the floor. She stood looking out into the night for a moment, then gathered up her flowing drapery, and covering herself with a heavy cloak, stepped from the window. The damp earth struck a chill to her delicately shod feet, but she did not notice it. The mist and fog dampened her hair, unheeded. She went swiftly down the shaded path, the dead leaves of the linden trees rustling mournfully as she swept through them. Past the garden and its deserted summer-house, and the grapery, where the purple fruit was lavishing its sweets on the air, and climbing a stile, she stood beside a group of shading cypress trees. Just before her was a square enclosure, fenced by a hedge of arbor vitae, from the midst of which, towering white and spectral up into the silent night, rose a marble shaft, surmounted by the figure of an angel, with drooping head and folded wings.

Margie passed within the enclosure, and stood beside the grave of her parents. She stood a moment silent, motionless; then, forgetful of her bridal garment, she flung herself down on the turf.

"Oh, my father! my father!" she cried, "why did you doom me to such a fate? Why did you ask me to give that fatal promise? Oh, look down from heaven and pity your child!"

The wind sighed mournfully in the cypresses, the belated crickets and katydids droned in the hedge, but no sweet voice of sympathy soothed Margie's strained ear. For, wrought up as she was, she almost listened to hear some response from the lips which death had made mute forever.

The village clock struck half-past eight, warning Margie that it was almost time for the ceremony to take place. She started up, drew her cloak around her, and turned to leave the place. As she did so, she felt a touch on her hand—the hand she laid for a moment on the gate—as she stood giving a last sad look at the mound of earth she was leaving; a touch light and soft as a breath, but which thrilled her through every nerve.

She turned her head quickly, but saw nothing. Something like the sound of receding footsteps met her ear, nothing more, but she was convinced that there had been a human presence near her. Where? Her heart beat strangely; her blood, a moment before so chilled and stagnant, leaped through her veins like fire. From whence arose the change?

She reached her chamber without meeting any one, and unlocking the door, rang for her attendants. The house was in a strange confusion. Groups were gathered in the corridors, whispering together, and some unexplained trouble seemed to have fallen upon the whole place.

After a little while, Alexandrine came in, pale and haggard. Margie saw that her white dress was damp, and her hair uncurled, as if by the weather.

"Where have you been, Alexandrine?" she asked; "and what is the matter?"

The girl turned from white to crimson.

"I have been in my room," she replied.

"But your clothes are damp, and your hair uncurled."

"The air is wet, and this great house is as moist as an ice-shed," returned the girl, hurriedly. "It is no wonder if my hair is uncurled. Margie, the—the—Mr. Linmere has not arrived."

"Not arrived! It must be nine o'clock."

As she spoke, the sonorous strokes of the clock proclaiming the hour, vibrated through the house.

"We have been distracted about him for more than two hours! he should surely have been here by half-past six! Mr. Trevlyn has sent messengers to the depot, to make inquiries, and the officekeeper thinks Mr. Linmere arrived in the six o'clock train, but is not quite positive. Mr. Weldon went, himself, to meet the seven-thirty train, thinking perhaps he might have got detained, and would come on in the succeeding train, but he did not arrive. And there are no more trains to-night! Oh, Margie, isn't it dreadful?"

CHAPTER IX.

ALEXANDRINE'S manner was greatly flurried and ill at ease, and the hand she laid on Margie's was cold as ice. Margie scrutinized her curiously, wondering the while at her own heartless apathy.

Something had occurred to stir the composure of this usually cool, self-possessed woman fearfully. But what it was Margie could not guess.

Mr. Trevlyn burst into the room, pale and exhausted.

"It is no use!" he said, throwing himself into a chair, "no use to try to disguise the truth! There will be no wedding tonight, Margie! The bridegroom has failed to come! The scoundrel! If I were ten years younger, I would call him out for this insult!"

Margie laid her hand on his arm, a strange, new feeling of vague relief pervading her. it was as if some great weight, under which her slender strength had wearied and sank, were rolled off from her.

"Compose yourself, dear guardian, he may have been unavoidably detained. Some business—"

"Business on his wedding day! No, Margie! there is something wrong somewhere. He is either playing us false—confound him!—or he has met with some accident! By George! who knows but he has been waylaid and murdered! The road from here to the depot, though short, is a lonely one, with woods on either side! And Mr. Linmere carries always about his person enough valuables to tempt a desperate character."

"I beg you not to suppose such a dreadful thing!" exclaimed Margie, shuddering; "he will come in the morning, and—"

"But Hayes was positive that he saw him leave the 6 o'clock train. He described him accurately, even saying that he had a bouquet of white camelias in his hand. Margie, what flowers was he to bring?"

She shook her head.

"Mrs. Weldon knows. I do not."

Alexandrine spoke.

"White camelias. I heard Mrs. Weldon ask him to fetch them."

Mr. Trevlyn started up.

"I will have out the whole household, at once, and search the whole estate! For I feel as if some terrible crime may have been done upon our very threshold. Margie, dear, take heart, he may be alive and well!"

He went out to alarm the already excited guests, and in half an hour the place was alive with lanterns, carried by those who sought for the missing bridegroom.

Pale and silent, the women gathered themselves together in the chamber of the bride, and waited. Margie sat among them in her white robes, mute and motionless as a statue.

"It must be terrible to fall by the hand of an assassin!" said Mrs. Weldon, with a shudder. "Good heavens! what a dreadful thing it would be if Mr. Linmere has been murdered!"

"An assassin! My God!" cried Margie, a terrible thought stealing across her mind. Who had touched her in the cypress grove? What hand had woke in her a thrill that changed her from ice to fire? What if it were the hand of her betrothed husband's murderer?

Alexandrine started forward at Margie's exclamation. Her cheek was white as marble, her breath came quick and struggling.

"Margie! Margie Harrison!" she cried, "what do you mean?"

They searched all that night, and found nothing. Absolutely nothing. With the early train, both Mr. Trevlyn and Mr. Weldon went to the city. They hurried to Mr. Linmere's room, only to have their worst fears confirmed. Pietro informed them that his master had left there on the 6 o'clock train; he had seen him to the depot, and into the car, receiving some orders from him relative to his rooms, after he had taken his seat.

There could be no longer any doubt but that there had been foul play somewhere. The proper authorities were notified, and the search began afresh. Harrison Park and its environs were thoroughly ransacked; the river was searched, the pond at the foot of the garden drained, but nothing was discovered. There was no clue by which the fate of the missing man could be guessed at, ever so vaguely.

Every person about the place was examined and cross-examined, but no one knew anything, and the night shut down, and left the matter in mystery. Pietro, at length, suggested Leo, Mr. Linmere's grayhound.

"Him no love his master," said the Italian, "but him scent keen. It will do no hurt to try him."

Accordingly the next morning Pietro brought the dog up to the Park. The animal was sullen, and would accept attentions from no one save Margie, to whom he seemed to take at first sight. And after she had spoken to him kindly, and patted his head, he refused all persuasions and commands to leave her.

Mr. Darby, the detective, whose services had been engaged in the affair, exerted all his powers of entreaty on the dog, but the animal clung to Margie, and would not even look in the direction of the almost frantic detective.

"It's no use, Miss Harrison," said Darby, "the cur won't stir an inch. You will have to come with him! Sorry to ask ye, but this thing must be seen into."

"Very well, I will accompany you," said Margie, rising, and throwing on a shawl, she went out with them, followed by Mrs. Weldon, Alexandrine, and two or three other ladies.

Leo kept close to Margie, trotting along beside her, uttering every now and then a low whine indicative of anticipation and pleasure.

Fate of 350 Persons on Board Unknown

LONDON, June 18.—A dispatch reports that the British steamer Drummond Castle, which sailed from Table bay May 28, for this port, with 250 persons on board, has been sunk near Ushant, the most western of the islands, off the coast of Britany, France. Two of the ship's company have been picked up by a fishing vessel. Nothing is known of the fate of the others on board.

LONDON, June 19.—Late advices from Brest state the Drummond Castle was making the passage from Plymouth to the east of Ushante island when the accident occurred. A slight haze hung over the water and the steamer crashed upon a rock and foundered in three minutes. The British warship Sybyll, which was near at hand, lowered her boats and did all possible to rescue those on board the steamer, but the efforts of the cruiser's men were in vain. More than 300 were drowned. Among the passengers on the Drummond Castle were some of the persons who were concerned in the recent troubles in the Transvaal.

BECAUSE HE WAS LAZY.

Indiana White Caps Take Arthur Hillars, of Caseyville, in Hand.

BRAZIL, Ind., June 19.—A number of white caps, armed with rawhides, took Arthur Hillars from his home in Caseyville and unmercifully whipped him. It is alleged that Hillars is extremely lazy and would not support his wife and family, who are quite respectable and conspicuous church workers in the community where they live. Hillars called on a physician and had his wounds dressed.

NOTED MARQUIS SHOT.

With Many Others He is Said to Have Met Death Near Tripoli, Africa.

PARIS, June 19.—A dispatch from Tunis announces that a report is current there that the Marquis de Mores, well known in New York and in the western part of the United States, has been killed south of Tripoli. It is added that all of Mores' party, to the number of thirty-five, were massacred. The marquis was on his way, according to report, to the Soudan, in order to enlist Arab chieftains against the British Nile expedition.

POPULISTS FOR TELLER.

Issue an Address Endorsing His Candidacy for President.

ST. LOUIS, June 22.—As a result of a series of conferences between committees appointed by the seceding silver men of the recent republican national convention and a committee composed of prominent populists, an address was issued from the headquarters of the people's party national committee, in St. Louis, advising populists throughout the country to make Henry M. Teller, of Colorado, their national standard bearer.

SENSATION IN ROME.

Sensational and Scandalous Bank Failure in Italy's Capital.

ROME, June 22.—The Societa Immobilliere is declared to have failed to meet its engagements. Of the capital stock, 38,000,000 francs were held in Germany and Switzerland, and 20,000,000 in Italy. The failure was owing to grave irregularities and other disorders of the books. This, with the absence of important documents, will, it is believed, be likely to be followed by a scandal which may rival the Banca Romania.

LITERARY NOTES.

"Your Money or Your Life," by Edith Carpenter, has been issued from the press of Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. This is the story which obtained the $1,000 prize in the competition instituted by the New York Herald, in 1895. This fact alone is sufficient recommendation to the reading public, and the sale of "Your Money or Your Life" will doubtless reach immense proportions. The book is tastefully bound and would make a splendid gift.

"Lincoln's Campaign, or the Political Revolution of 1860," by Osborn H. Oldroyd, author of "A Soldier's Story of the Siege of Vicksburg," etc., has recently been published by Laird & Lee, Chicago. This is a valuable history of that memorable campaign and is having a wonderful sale. The work is profusely illustrated and contains fourteen portraits and biographies of presidential possibilities for 1896. After the forthcoming conventions a library edition will be issued containing the biographies of only the republican and democratic nominees.

"Wandering Heath," stories, studies and sketches by Q, comes from the press of Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. The literary excellence of this work is of a superior quality and will prove very entertaining to readers during the hot summer months. The Boston Herald says the story is "wholly charming." The work of the publishers has also been well done and it will please the eye of the most critical.

"Dame Fortune Smiled: The Doctor's Story," has recently been published by the Arena Publishing Co., Boston. The story is by Willis Barnes. It advocates the policy of giving during life and retiring to enjoyment of riches when modest incomes have been secured. Cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

THE STUDIOUS GIRL.

An Interesting Letter From a Young Ladies' College.

Race Between the Sexes for Education. Health Impaired by Incessant Study.

Ambitious girls work incessantly over their studies, and are often brought to a halt, through having sacrificed the physical to the mental. Then begin those ailments that must be removed at once, or they will produce constant suffering. Headache, dizziness, faintness, slight vertigo, pains in the back and loins, irregularity, loss of sleep and appetite, nervousness and blues, with lack of confidence; these are positive signs that women's arch enemy is at hand.

The following letter was received by Mrs. Pinkham in May, one month after the young lady had first written, giving symptoms, and asking advice. She was ill and in great distress of mind, feeling she would not hold out till graduation, and the doctor had advised her to go home.

——— College, Mass.

You dear Woman:—

I should have written to you before, but you said wait a month. We are taught that the days of miracles are past. Pray what is my case? I have taken the Vegetable Compound faithfully, and obeyed you implicitly and, am free from all my ills. I was a very, very sick girl. Am keeping well up in my class, and hope to do you and myself credit at graduation. * * My gratitude cannot find expression in words. Your sincere friend, MARY ———

P. S. Some of the other girls are now using the Compound. It benefits them all.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only safe, sure and effectual remedy in such cases, as it removes the cause, purifies and invigorates the system, and gives energy and vitality.

She Had Been There

Mrs. Nouvo Reesh—She called me a barmaid, and I flew at her and pulled her hair.

Mrs. Toplofty—Oh, how terrible! Still even that did not justify you in fighting her.

Mrs. Nouvo Reesh—Yes, but if you had ever been a barmaid you would understand how mad it made me.

Thoroughly Qualified.

Mrs. Fodder—What is your profession?

Fuller Booze—I'm a linguist.

Mrs. Fodder—A linguist?

THE RIVAL ACTORS.

PAUL Reville and Jean Vernier, two well known and favorite actors hated each other cordially.

By a sort of fatality, as soon as either of these irreconcilable enemies undertook or created a role, he was sure to see the name of his adversary, in bold type, side by side with his own on the poster of the same theater.

Both were always warmly received and applauded. Reville was irresistible in a role requiring personal beauty and noble bearing. Vernier seemed the very incarnation of meanness and treachery—the ideal scoundrel, hardened and impenitent. Regularly, every evening, toward 12 o'clock, he was unmasked and crushed under the heels of the righteous and fascinating Reville.

Always asociated, always receiving together the ovations of an enthusiastic public, always great artists of the old school (so much loved by our fathers), and always leaving on any role they assumed the mark of their masterly conception, they never exchanged a word, save before the footlights, and during the long, laborious rehearsals. Then, entirely ignoring their own individuality, and projecting themselves each into his respective role, each eyeing and measuring the other with the air of a Spanish grandee, and each stimulating the other to his best, they would rise to the full height of their splendid powers, astonishing and delighting their admiring fellow-actors.

Neither had ever taken the hand of the other, and both had openly professed the same antagonism in real life that they exhibited on the stage.

Reville was a widower. Vernier was unmarried. The wife of Reville had died young—of consumption—leaving a little girl, beautiful with the beauty of a Greuze.

When Vernier, who was a good deal of a bear, caught sight of his rival on the street, leading his little girl by the hand, he was half conscious of a softened feeling toward his hated enemy, and he would growl out in his deep voice:

"What a lucky fellow he is!" and his envious eyes would follow the happy father on his way to a "patisserie," to buy a crisp little cake for Cecile.

The Porte St. Martin had announced the reproduction of "The Mysteries of Paris" for a certain date, the principal roles of the Schoolmaster and Prince Rudolph to be filled by Vernier and Reville.

The disgust of Vernier know no bounds. He was to have this vile role—he serve as a mere foil to his rival, who, in his rich robe-de-chambre, with gold girdle and tassels, would have ample opportunity of displaying his manly beauty and "air noble" in full view of all the pretty women, while he, Vernier, in rags and an old fur cap, would be pelted with cabbages and execrations from the upper gallery, the wretch from the "quartier Muffetard" being held in utter detestation by the class frequenting that part of the house.

As the rehearsals proceeded Vernier's indignation became more and more pronounced. Suddenly there came a rumor of Reville's illness. He had contracted a violent cold, attacking the lungs, which were seriously affected, and the poor fellow was on his back in the city hospital.

His place was filled by an understudy, and as all were somewhat eagerly awaiting the expression of Vernier's satisfaction in the new arrangement, he astonished every one by showing himself more dissatisfied than before.

Early in the evening the audience became conscious of something quite unusual—"bizarre." Vernier was not himself; he forgot his lines, passed his cues, stumbled, hesitated.

It was soon masifest to all that he missed his old associate; that he was, in short, lost without Reville, who, by his disdain and overbearing manner, his airs of a "grand seigneur," had irritated him, aroused his temper, and spurred his ambition. Reville had indeed kindled the now sleeping fire of genius in the soul of this veteran of the melodrama.

As all were wondering and talking over this singular "contretemps," and asking, "What does it mean?" it was learned that poor Reville was rapidly becoming worse—his symptoms giving no hope of his recovery—and astonishment reached its climax as soon as it was known that Vernier was on his way to the hospital to see his rival.

When he rang the bell at the door it was with a shaking hand. He was conducted to the chamber, where Reville, with eyes half closed, lay in that partial sleep in which the faintest sound—no louder than the fluttering of a butterfly's wings—is distinctly perceived.

Hearing a gentle step in the room he half raised his head from the pillow, and seeing Vernier, said with a smile:

"Ah, it is you. I knew you would come. I was expecting you."

Vernier, the fierce, treacherous, impenitent rascal of the melodrama, fell, rather than seated himself, in the chair at the head of the bed, saying in his deep bass voice, "My dear old friend!" half sobbing out the words.

"Come," said Reville, "embrace me."

Beautiful "Accolade!" Thirty years of mutual hatred lost in this supreme embrace! They remained closely clasped, each in the other's arms, looking into each other's friendly eyes, full of kindness, and dimmed with tears.

Reville, raising himself on his elbow, said: "You do not know how glad I am to see you. I cannot tell you the pleasure it gives me, for, after my child, have you not been all my life? Do you remember Ruy Blas? 'I have the livery of a lacquey, and you the soul of one?' And to think that all that is finished! To think, my old friend, how many times I have played at burying you on the stage, and that now you are to bury me in good earnest."

"O, yes; I know, it is only a question of time. It is a great comfort to see you here at my side and grieving for me, and I should die content—" Here he was interrupted by a paroxysm of coughing, but after resting a few moments he added:

"No, content is not the word; I am leaving my child, my darling Cecile. It breaks my heart to feel that I shall never again feel her little arms about my neck; never again kiss her soft curls. And when I am gone what will she do? What will become of her? God help my darling! She has no one." And overcome by emotion, he gasped for breath, as Vernier said, gently and tenderly:

"I shall be here——"

"You! Will you?"

"Dear old friend, I am alone in the world. I have no one to love. Give your child to me. I will be a father to her. Rest satisfied. She shall want for nothing. On my honor. By the memory of all our triumphs in the old days, I promise to make her happy. I have means; much more than I need for nourishing the little creature. She shall never forget you; your name and memory shall be dear and sacred to her. I cannot say all I feel, all I mean. Will you trust me? That is right—your hand, old friend!"

Reville's face was radiant through his tears.

"This is the most perfect of melodramas," he said.—A. F., in London Sun.

The Penalty of Publicity.

The true woman, the true man, with a soul sensitive to the delicate influence of that higher soul within the soul, shrinks from publicity. The personality is more sacred than the person. Both would be shielded from the public gaze. When woman chooses a public career, in whatsoever capacity, she is too often compelled to lay bare her very soul to the idle, curious eye of a jeering mob, to cast her finest sensibilities to the earth for the rabble to trample. It may be her duty to make this sacrifice, but it is none the less a sacrifice, and though there is a compensation in added strength there is a loss for which no amount of strength can make amends. Woman must always pay a penalty for publicity. Man had paid the penalty so often and for so long a time that society has ceased to regard it a penalty and only when we find one of those rare, sweet souls, born out of time, that seems like a violet transplanted into snow, do we realize what man has lost. But we seldom fail to see the effects of the penalty in the life of any public woman.—Womankind.

THE PLATFORM.

RESOLUTIONS AS ADOPTED AT ST. LOUIS.

The republicans of the United States, assembled by their representatives in national convention, appealing for popular as well as historical justification of their claims to matchless achievements during thirty years of republican rule, earnestly and confidently address themselves to the awakened intelligence, experience and conscience of their countrymen in the following declaration of facts and principles: "For the first time since the civil war the American people have witnessed the calamitous consequences of full and unrestricted democratic control of the government. It has been a record of unparalleled incapacity, dishonor and disaster. In administrative management it has ruthlessly sacrificed indispensable revenue, entailed unceasing deficit, eked out ordinary current expenses with borrowed money, piled up the public debt by $262,000,000 in time of peace, forced an adverse balance of trade, kept perpetual menace hanging over the redemption fund, pawned American credit to alien syndicates, and reversed all measures and results of successful republican rule. In the broad effect of its policy it has precipitated a panic, blighted industry and trade with prolonged depression, closed factories, reduced work wages, halted enterprise and crippled American production while stimulating foreign production for the American market. Every consideration of public safety and individual interest demands that the government be rescued from the hands of those who have shown themselves incapable to conduct it without disaster at home and dishonor abroad, and shall be restored to the party which for thirty years administered it with unequalled success and prosperity.

PROTECTION AND RECIPROCITY.

We renew and emphasize our allegiance to the policy of protection as the bulwark of American industrial independence and the foundation of American development and prosperity. This true American policy taxes foreign products and encourages home industry; it puts a burden of revenue on foreign goods; it secures the American market for the American producer; it upholds the American standard of wages for the American workingman; it puts the factory by the side of the farm and makes the American farmer less dependent on foreign demand and price; it diffuses general thrift and founds the strength of all on the strength of each. In its reasonable application it is just fair and impartial equally opposed to foreign control and domestic monopoly, to sectional discrimination and individual favoritism.

We denounce the present democratic tariff as sectional, injurious to public credit and destructive to business enterprise. We demand such equitable tariff on foreign imports which come into competition with American products as will not only furnish adequate revenue for the necessary expenses of the government but will protect American labor from degradation to the wage level of other lands. We are not pledged to any particular schedules. The question of rates is a practical question, to be governed by the conditons of time and of production; the ruling and uncompromising principle is protection and the development of American labor and industry. The country demands a right settlement and then it wants rest. We believe the repeal of the reciprocity arrangements negotiated by the last republican administration was a national calamity, and we demand their renewal and extension on such terms as will equalize our trade with other nations, remove restrictions which now obstruct the sale of American products in the ports of other countries, and secure enlarged markets for the products of our farms, forests and factories. Protection and reciprocity are twin measures of the republican policy and go hand in hand. Democratic rule has recklessly struck down both, and both must be re-established. Protection for what we produce; free admission for the necessaries of life which we do not produce; reciprocal agreements of mutual interests which gain open markets for us in return for our open market to others. Protection builds up domestic industry and trade and secures our own market for ourselves; reciprocity builds up foreign trade and finds an outlet for our surplus.

We condemn the present administration for not keeping faith with the sugar producers of this country. The republican party favors such protection as will lead to the production on American soil of all the sugar which the American people use, and for which they pay other countries more than $100,000,000 annually.

To all our products—to those of mine and field as well as those of shop and factory—to hemp, to wool, the product of the great industry of sheep husbandry, as well as to the finished woolens of the mill—we promise most ample protection.

MERCHANT MARINE.

We favor restoring the early American policy of discriminating duties for the upbuilding of our merchant marine and the protection of our shipping in the foreign carrying trade, so that American ships, products of American labor, employed in American shipyards, sailing under the stars and stripes, and manned, officered and owned by Americans, may regain the carrying of our foreign commerce.

FINANCIAL PLANK.

The republican party is unreservedly for sound money. It caused the enactment of a law providing for the resumption of specie payments in 1879; since then every dollar has been as good as gold. We are unalterably opposed to every measure calculated to debase our currency or impair the credit of our country. We are, therefore, opposed to the free coinage of silver except by international agreement with the leading commercial nations of the world, which we pledge ourselves to promote, and until such agreement can be obtained, the existing gold standard must be preserved. All our silver and paper currency must be maintained at a parity with gold, and we favor all measures designed to maintain inviolably the obligations of the United States and all our money, whether coin, or paper, at the present standard, the standard of the most enlightened nations of the earth.

PENSIONS.

Veterans of the union army deserve and should receive fair treatment and generous recognition, and whenever practicable should be given preference in the matter of employment, and they are entitled to the enactment of such laws as are best calculated to secure the fulfillment of pledges made them in the dark days of the country's peril. We denounce the practice in the pension bureau, so recklessly and unjustly carried on by the present administration of reducing pensions, arbitrarily dropping names from the rolls, as deserving of the severest condemnation of the American people.

FOREIGN POLICY.

Our foreign policy should be at all times firm, vigorous and dignified, and all our interests in the western hemisphere carefully watched and guarded. The Hawaiian islands should be controlled by the United States and no foreign power should be permitted to interefre with them; the Nicaraguan canal should be built, owned and operated by the United States; and by the purchase of the Danish islands we should secure a proper and much needed naval station in the West Indies.

The massacres in Armenia have aroused the deep sympathy and just indignation of the American people and we believe the United States should exercise all the influence it can properly exert to bring these atrocities to an end. In Turkey American residents have been exposed to the gravest dangers and American property destroyed. There, and everywhere, Americans citizens and American property must be absolutely protected at all hazards and at any cost.

We reassert the Monroe doctrine in its full extent and we reaffirm the right of the United States to give the doctrine effect by responding to the appeals of any American state for our friendly intervention in case of European encroachment. We have not interfered, and shall not interfere, with the existing possessions of any European power in this hemisphere, but these possessions must not, on any pretext, be extended. We hopefully look forward to the eventual withdrawal of the European powers from this hemisphere and to the ultimate union of all the English speaking part of the continent by the free consent of its inhabitants.

From the hour of achieving their own independence the people of the United States have regarded with sympathy the struggles of other American people to free themselves from European domination. We watch with deep and abiding interest the heroic battle of the Cuban patriots against cruelty and oppression, and our best hopes go out for their full success of their determined contest for liberty. The government of Spain having lost control of Cuba and being unable to protect the property of resident American citizens or comply with its treaty obligations we believe the government of the United States should actively use its influence and good offices to restore peace and give independence to the island.

NAVY AND DEFENSES.

The peace and security of the republic and the maintenance of its rightful influence among the nations of the earth demand a naval power commensurate with its position and responsibility. We, therefore, favor the continued enlargement of the navy and the complete system of harbor and seacoast defenses.

IMMIGRATION.

For the protection of the quality of our American citizenship and of the wages of the workingmen against the fatal competition of low priced labor, we demand that the immigration laws be thoroughly enforced and so extended as to exclude from entrance to the United States those who can neither read nor write.

CIVIL SERVICE.

The civil service law was placed on the statute book by the republican party, which has always sustained it and we renew our repeated declarations that it shall be thouroughly and honestly enforced and extended wherever practicable.

ON THE BALLOT.

We demand that every citizen of the United States shall be allowed to cast one free and unrestricted ballot and that such ballot shall be counted and returned as cast.

ON LYNCHING.

We proclaim our unqualified condemnation of the uncivilized and barbarous practice well known as lynching or killing human beings, suspected or charged with crime, without the process of law.

NATIONAL ARBITRATION.

We favor the creation of a national board of arbitration to settle and adjust differences which may arise between employer and employes engaged in interstate commerce.

FREE HOMESTEADS.

We believe in an immediate return to the free homestead policy of the republican party; and urge the passage by congress of the satisfactory free homestead measure which has already passed the house and is now pending in the senate.

ON THE TERRITORIES.

We favor the admission of the remaining territories at the earliest practicable date, having due regard to the interests of the people of the territories and of the United States. All federal officers appointed for the territories should be elected from bona fide residents thereof and the right of self government should be accorded so far as practicable.

We believe the citizens of Alaska should have representation in the congress of the United States to the end that all needed legislation may be inteiligently effected.

ON TEMPERANCE .

We sympathize with all wise and legitimate efforts to lessen and prevent the evils of intemperance and promote morality.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

The republican party is mindful of the rights and interests of women. Protection of American industries includes equal opportunities, equal pay for equal work, and protection to the home. We favor the admission of women to the wider spheres of usefulness and welcome their co-operation in rescuing the country from democratic and populist mismanagement and misrule.

A PLEDGE.

Such are the principles and policies of the republican party. By these principles we will abide and these policies we will put into execution. We ask for them the considerate judgment of the American people. Confident alike in the history of our great party and the justice of our cause, we present our platform and our candidates in the assurance that the election will bring victory to the republican party and prosperity to the people of the United States.

One Thousand Farmers Wanted

These lands are located in twenty different counties, and are to be had now at prices ranging from $7 to $15 per acre; a few months hence their value will be doubled.

For a home or for investment no luckier chance in the west has ever before been offered. Now is the time to invest. No better farming land exists anywhere. No greater results can be obtained anywhere.

Schools and churches abound everywhere. Nearby markets for all farm products. South and North Dakota are the banner diversified farming and stock-raising states of the west. Everything grows in Dakota except ignorance and intemperance. A new boom is on. Take advantage of the tide which leads to Dakota and to fortune.

Through Yellowstone Park on a Bicycle.

The passenger department of the Burlington Route has issued—and will gladly mail to anyone who will ask for it—a little booklet giving full information about the best way to make the tour of Yellowstone Park on a bicycle. There is nothing experimental about the idea. The trip has been made again and again—to the supreme satisfaction of every one of the dozens of riders who have been bold enough to undertake it. The booklet contains a good map of the park and also tells the reader what the trip costs, what the roads are like, what to take, etc. Write for a copy. J. M'KINLEY AND HOBART

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—The Iowa delegation held a meeting and elected the following: Member national committee, A. B. Cummins; member committee on resolutions, J. H. Gear; on credentials, W. P. Hepburn; to notify presidential nominee, Cal Manning; to notify vice-presidential nominee, C. M. Junkin; on permanent organization, E. C. Roach; on rules, W. H. Macomber; chairman of delegation, D. B. Henderson; vice-chairman, Banks Wilson; secretary, George C. Call.

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—At 12:15 p. m. Chairman Carter of the national committee called the republican convention to order and Rabbi Sayles, of St. Louis, offered prayer. Secretary Manley, of Maine, then read the call, after which C. W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, was introduced as temporary chairman. Mr. Fairbanks spoke for thirty minutes, eulogizing the republican and assailing the democratic management of the tariff, finance and foreign affairs, and pleading for a strong declaration for gold, protection and reciprocity. A resolution was adopted providing that all resolutions in respect to the platform shall be referred to the committee without debate. The states were then called for their selection of delegates as members of the several committees. At 1:47 the convention took a recess until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—Temporary Chairman Fairbanks called the convention to order at 10:46. Committee on permanent organization reported in favor of Senator John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, for chairman and that the other temporary officers be made permanent, and the report was adopted. Senator Thurston took the chair and after a speech lasting but a few minutes asked the pleasure of the convention. The committee on credentials announced that it was not ready to report, and the convention took an adjournment until 2 p. m.

In the afternoon the committee on credentials reported. The majority report was in favor of the Higgins delegates from Delaware and the Grant delegates from Texas being seated. Hepburn presented a minority report opposing the seating of these delegates and favoring the contestants. The majority report was adopted. The report of the committee on rules was then presented and adopted, after which the convention adjourned.

ST. LOUIS, June 18.—At 10:32 Chairman Thurston called the convention to order and prayer was offered by Rev. John R. Scott (colored), of Florida. Senator-elect Foraker, of Ohio, then presented the report of the committee on resolutions and moved that the report be adopted. Senator Teller was recognized and offered the following substitute for the financial plank:

The republican party favors the use of both gold and silver as equal standard money, and pledges its power to secure the free, unrestricted and independent coinage of gold and silver at our mints at the ratio of 16 parts of silver to 1 of gold.

Mr. Teller then advanced to the front and made an address in favor of the substitute, declaring that he would be compelled to leave the republican party if it adopted a gold platform. Foraker moved to lay the substitute on the table. Carried, ayes, 818½; noes, 105½. Senator Cannon read a statement signed by Senator Teller, Senator Dubois, of Idaho; Senator Cannon, of Utah; Congressman Hartman, of Montana; Mr. Cleveland, of Nevada, and Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, in which they announced their withdrawal from the convention.

The vote on the adoption of the gold plank was 812½ to 110½. The following delegates walked out: The delegations from Idaho and Colorado, three from Utah, Pettigrew of South Dakota, Hartman of Montana, and Cleveland and Strother of Nevada. Mantel of Montana said he would refer the gold plank to the republicans of his state. A roll call was ordered for the presentation of candidates for the presidency. John N. Baldwin presented the name of Wm. B. Allison; John Cabot Lodge presented the name of Thomas Reed; Chauncey Depew nominated Levi Morton; and Governor Hastings nominated M. S. Quay. The roll was then called, resulting in the nomination of McKinley by the following vote. McKinley, 661½; Morton, 58; Allison, 35½; Reed, 84½; Quay 61½; Cannon, 1; Blank, 4. On motion of Lodge, seconded by Depew, Platt, Hastings and Henderson the vote was declared unanimous.

The roll call for vice-presidential nominations was then taken up. Wm. G. Bulkeley, of Connecticut; Garrett A. Hobart, of New Jersey; Governor Lippitt, of Rhode Island; Henry Clay Evans, of Tennessee; and James A. Walker, of Virginia, were placed in nomination. The roll was then called and the result announced as follows: Hobart, 553½; Evans, 280½; Bulkeley, 39; Walker, 24; Lippitt, 8; Grant 2, Depew, 2; Morton, 1; Thurston 2. The nomination of Hobart was then made unanimous, and the convention adjourned sine die.

J. H. Brunner, Marshalltown, Iowa, writes: "It is with great pleasure that I recommend Dr. Kay's Renovator, especially for what you claim for it, a remedy for worn-out business men. I have had a tired and languid feeling in my limbs over a year and I concluded to wear it out, but gave it up as I was growing worse. I have now taken two 25cts. boxes and will say I am now entirely free from that feeling. I am confident that your Dr. Kay's Renovator will remove that tired and languid feeling, usually called spring fever, and shall treasure it as a household panacea and recommend it to all afflicted with that malady." The many cures, without a failure, attest the fact that is a positive cure for the worst cases of headache, dyspepsia, constipation, liver and kidney diseases and all nervous and blood diseases, biliousness, despondency, female diseases, etc. AT THIS TIME OF YEAR it is invaluable, as it renovates and invigorates the whole system and purifies and enriches the blood, giving new life and vigor to the whole body. The very best nerve tonic known. Very pleasant and easy to take. IT HAS TWO TO FOUR TIMES AS MANY DOSES AS LIQUID MEDICINES SELLING FOR SAME PRICE. Sold by druggists or sent by mail on receipt of price, 25cts. and $1. THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

France is not of mushroom growth, but she grows $2,000,000 worth of mushrooms each year.

The weather man is reminded that blowing hot and cold is not a habit which conduces to one's popularity.

If Miss Ella Burris of Burlington, Iowa, had not worn big sleeves, she would have been drowned. Girls, here is a pointer.

Plenty of any kind of money is what most of us want. We have seen the time when even a postage stamp would fill a long-felt want.

A Chicago thief killed himself when arrested last week. The mortification of having been so stupid as to get into the hands of a policeman caused the deed.

Up in Neche, N. D., the other day an Uncle Tom's Cabin company struck town with a Little Eva 40 years old; the indignant citizens insisted that the hotel should charge her full rates, and this stranded the troup.

The Carnegie Steel company has decided to build a $1,000,000 plant for the manufacture of cannon and heavy ordnance of all kinds. The plant will be equipped with hydraulic hammers, presses and other machinery of the best class, making the establishment, it is claimed by the company, without a rival in the world.

By a court decision in Kokomo, Ind., a bicycle is placed in the same category as a sand-bag. A pedestrian who had been knocked down charged the offending wheelman with assault and battery, the wheel being designated as the weapon of offense. As a new defense against scorching, the decree of the learned judge will be hailed with joy.

The development of electrical power is making such strides that railroad authorities admit that some of the great systems of the country may within the near future adopt it in place of steam. The master mechanic of the Pennsylvania railroad is quoted as saying that the successful transmission of electrical power over long lines has practically shown that the great culm piles in the Pennsylvania anthrcite regions may be utilized in generating electricity. This opens up an immense field for electrical development. Numerous gentlemen prominent in railway service have confessed quite a change in their opinions during the past few months in regard to the feasibility of the electrical locomotive, and we hear that some of the leading roads are soon to make wide extensions in this direction.

A difference of opinion between Mrs. Riley Hull and five prisoners in the jail over which her husband presides in Boone, has resulted in the five prisoners deciding to remain in captivity. At one time on Wednesday they thought they would leave and completed all arrangements to this end, going so far as to break open the door of their cell and reaching the stairway that leads to the street. Jailer Hull was away, but his wife met his guests as they were coming down the stairs. The conversation appears to have been brief, but to the point—chiefly to the point of a revolver held by Mrs. Hull. The five said they were going out. Mrs. Hull said they were not going out and took careful aim at the leader. Then the five said on reflection they thought they would go back, and Mrs. Hull succeeded in imparting considerable speed to their return movement. Mr. Hull arrived on the scene when the retreat was completed and Mrs. Hull turned over the reins of government to him, while she went down-stairs to enjoy a comforting faint.

Electricity has not entered conspicuously into the construction of bicycles, owing to the fact that anything which adds to the weight is not desirable. A New York man, however, has perfected an electric bicycle having a storage battery, a motor, and a switchboard, and which is regarded with much favor in wheeling circles. The battery, known as the dry chloride, weighs fifteen pounds. This, applied to a wheel with a motor and switchboard, brings the weight of the wheel to sixty pounds, which is much lighter than any of the devices used in previous experiments. The battery and motor are attached to the bars below the saddle, and the switchboard is near the handlebar. It is claimed that this machine is capable of great speed. It is particularly advantageous in ascending hills and riding over rough roads. Means for regulating speed are provided, and if desired the electricity can be used to light an incandescent lamp at night. The apparatus is said to be inexpensive, and can be easily applied or removed without the slightest injury to the wheel.

LINEMAN KILLED.

Thomas McCabe Falls From a Thirty-Foot Pole at Maquoketa.

MAQUOKETA, June 26.—Thomas McCabe, an electric lineman, was instantly killed by falling from a thirty-foot pole. The pole on which McCabe was working stood across the street from the others and his two helpers were stringing a wire and the tension caused by the stretching of the wire broke the guy rod that sustained the pole. The breaking of this guy wire threw the weight of about 30 electric light wires directly at the top of the pole and the strain became so great that the pole broke off like a pipe stem about four feet from the top. McCabe was hurled to the ground with the severed portion of the pole, which struck him squarely on the head, fracturing his skull. Several rushed to his assistance, but they were too late. Life was extinct. Upon examination it was found that the bones of both arms and legs were broken.

DOUBLY FATAL TRAIN WRECK.

OTTUMWA, June 27.—The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul meat train, while running at the rate of eighty miles an hour down the Hayesville hill, jumped the track. Ed Lindquist was killed and Will Kauffman fatally injured. Both men lived in Ottumwa. None of the trainmen were hurt. Thirteen cars were destroyed.

TRAGEDY AT LAKE CITY.

Frank Hipple Shot and Fatally Wounded by Frank Scott.

LAKE CITY, June 26.—Frank Scott and Frank Hipple engaged in a quarrel in Arney Bros. & Crawford's warehouse while no one else was present and Hipple was shot several times, once directly through the stomach. It is hardly probable that he will live. It is said the men quarreled over a woman of shady character named Bird.

EXPLOSION IN CLINTON.

Two Children of William Cortello Burned to Death.

CLINTON, June 27.—William Cortello's two children, aged 10 and 18, were fatally injured by an explosion of powder, which was in an open pan in the house. It became ignited in some manner, burning them terribly. They died soon after the explosion.

FELL OUT OF THE BOAT.

Tom Gallagher Drowned in Clear Lake.

MASON CITY, June 26.—The body of Tom Gallagher, about 35 years old, was found in Clear Lake. He secured a boat and went out fishing and the boat capsized. He had been working for Clark & Sons, livery, but had been discharged. It is thought he was intoxicated and fell out of the boat.

Des Moines Plant to be Sold.

DES MOINES, June 27.—An order has been issued in the district court for the sale of the water power, electric plant and dam. Judgments amounting to about $300,000 have been rendered against the company in favor of the Fort Wayne Company and the American Loan and Trust Company. The court orders that the first $76,000 go to the Fort Wayne Company and that the judgment of the American Loan and Trust Company for $173,000 be satisfied next. The dam is built of solid stone and cement across the Des Moines river and cost in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Suicide at Chapin.

CHAPIN, June 27.—John McCammant, living some two and a half miles southeast of Chapin, shot himself. It is supposed to be a case of suicide. The shooting was done in a grove not far from his residence. He is the same man who lost his barn and three horses by fire a few days ago. The cause of his rash act is not known, but is surmised to be despondency on account of his recent loss, as he had had considerable hard luck.

Storm at Creston.

CRESTON, June 26.—A severe storm struck this city and wrecked a number of public buildings, business blocks and private residences. Outbuildings were leveled, trees blown down, and fences wrecked. The loss is variously estimated at from $5,000 to $10,000. The high school is the most badly damaged. The storm was from the northwest and by far the most severe that ever prevailed here.

Honors for Iowans.

BOSTON, June 26.—C. C. Wallace, of Des Moines, was elected vice-president of the International Sunday School Association and W. H. Blanke, of Davenport, a member of the international executive committee.

Drowned at Clinton.

CLINTON, June 27.—While bathing at an island near this city, Fred, the 16-year-old son of Parker Dexter, a well-known and highly respected resident, was drowned.

FOUND SOME GOOD LAND.

DES MOINES, June 28.—John H. King, of the firm of King & Sterans, land attorneys of Chamberlain, has filed a homestead entry on a quarter section of land in Sioux county, a short distance from Orange City, a prosperous Dutch settlement. The land is located in township 95 and range 46. Mr. King, in going over the records of the office, discovered the land had never been patented, and made application to enter the tract under the homestead laws. Register Evans looked up the description and found it as represented by Mr. King and permitted the entry, accepting the fees tendered. It is not known whether the land has been settled on or not, as Mr. King has not had time as yet to investigate it. He thinks he has a good show to secure the land, as the title is unquestionably still vested in the government, although there may have been some mistake made by which a wrong description was put in the patent of some person intending to take it. The land in that locality, if it is of average quality and unimproved, is easily worth $20 per acre.

TEN YEARS.

S. R. Dawson, Murderer of Walter Scott, Gets a Light Sentence.

DES MOINES, June 27.—Samuel R. Dawson will spend the next ten years in Anamosa penitentiary. Christmas eve he murdered Walter Scott, who but an hour before married Dawson's 18-year-old daughter, Clara. He was tried and convicted of murder in the second degree. Judge Holmes overruled a motion for a new trial and passed judgment as above. He could have given Dawson life imprisonment, but only gave him the minimum sentence, ten years.

AWFUL CRIME AT AURELIA.

Young Girl Murdered by a Drunken Unfavored Suitor.

AURELIA, June 29.—On the farm of Mrs. Elizabeth Mahoney, six miles south of this city, James Mahoney fired three shots at Miss Mary Kane, two passing through her head and the other through her arm. At present she is alive, but probably will not live. Miss Kane is an orphan, 16 years old, and had been living with the Mahoney family for over a year. Mahoney was desperately in love with the girl, who would not allow his attentions.

$70,000 FIRE AT DUBUQUE.

Douglas-Ryan Packing House Entirely Destroyed.

DUBUQUE, June 29.—The Douglas-Ryan packing house in this city was destroyed by fire. Almost everything was burned. The plant was being operated, but not very heavily. It is difficult to approximate the loss, but it will probably reach $60,000 to $70,000, on which there was an insurance of about $30,000.

Will Buy a Railroad.

DUBUQUE, June 27.—The directors of the Dubuque & Sioux City Railway company, at a meeting, enlarged their capital stock for the purpose of absorbing the Cedar Falls & Minnesota.

BREVITIES.

The Iowa College of Law, at Des Moines, seems to be growing faster than any other law school, and is to have a new building this year. Neat catalogues have been prepared by the secretary, Prof. P. S. McNutt.

Alvin Simons and Wm. Dennis, two countrymen living west of Columbus Junction, nursed an old feud over a keg of beer at a fishing party recently, and the result was that Dennis was brought to town with four gashes, two of which are in vital parts. They were inflicted by a knife in the hands of Simons. Simons has some bad bruises inflicted by a neckyoke in the hands of Dennis.

Dubuque dispatch: Benjamin Fern, struck by lightning, seems certain to recover. The bolt tore his hat to shreds, burned the hair off his head, face and breast, passed down his side and split his shoe in twain. His fellow workmen saw him fall, and when they reached him supposed him dead, as he lay motionless on the ground. Finding his heart was beating, they summoned a physician, who arrived in fifteen or twenty minutes and found the man paralyzed and motionless. He proceeded to apply to Fern's feet, hands and head charges from a galvanic battery, which he first tested on himself, the charge being as strong as he could bear. This was applied constantly for fifteen minutes, at the end of which time Fern was resuscitated and able to move his limbs and body. A little later he was able to speak, and was removed to his home. On recovering the sense of feeling he found that he had been painfully burned down one side from head to foot, but he will survive this, as he has quite recovered from the shock. The physician regards Fern's recovery as a triumph for science.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

CUBA.

MADRID, June 25.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says an expedition consisting of 200 Americans and having a quantity of dynamite and a number of Manser rifles, landed a few days ago near Cardenas. They were attacked by a Spanish force and compelled to retreat. The Spaniards captured the munitions of war and are in pursuit of the filibusters.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Reports to the surgeon general of the marine hospital service from the United States sanitary inspectors in Cuba show terrible increases of deaths from contagious diseases in the island. Dr. Caminere, the official at Santiago, writes that "small pox is raging epidemically and the cases which can be counted by the hundreds are increasing daily." The American consul at Sagua la Grande reports that yellow fever is on the increase among the troops at that point, and from Cienfuegos the consul reports forty-nine deaths from small pox and increasing yellow fever for the past week.

NEW YORK, June 26.—The World's Santiago, Cuba, dispatch says: "The failure of Spain to conquer the Cuban patriots, besides being proved by continuous defeats of troops in the field of battle, lack of money in her treasury and the poor credit she enjoys, is also plainly seen by the supreme effort in sending money, men and war material to Cuba since the beginning of the struggle with such poor success. From March, 1895, to March, 1896, Spain has sent to Cuba a total of $19,321,000. From March, 1895, to April 10, 1896, Spain has sent to Cuba forty generals, 562 chiefs, 4,768 captains and sub-lieutenants, 112,560 corporals and soldiers, 143 cannon, 150,100 rifles, 5,000 bayonets, 23,000 cases of canister shot, 61,879,000 cartridges and 72,000 kilograms of powder. These figures are taken from El Liberal, one of the first newspapers of Madrid."

HAVANA, June 29.—The period within which, according to Weyler's edict, countrymen of the Pinar del Rio must go into towns or to the insurgent camp, has expired, and hereafter all found in the country will be held as enemies.

NEARLY SIX HUNDRED.

Strength of the 16 to 1 Forces Has Been Summed Up at Chicago.

CHICAGO, June 27.—The Tribune publishes a canvass of delegates of the states and territories on the currency question. It shows that of the delegates to the democratic national convention, either by instruction or by personal preference, 578 favor the free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1, against 328 instructed for or favoring a continuation of the present gold standard. The estimate is based on an observation of the unit rule by delegates from states which are so instructed.

PEACH CROP NOT A FAILURE.

Excellent Fruit Being Gathered Ahead of Time in Michigan.

NILES, Mich., June 27.—The first peaches for this year have just been brought in from a large orchard near Fairland. They were fully ripened and above the average in size. The peaches are fully four weeks ahead of time. The crop will be the largest ever known. Many thousands of bushels of half ripened peaches have been taken from the trees to save the trees.

LI HUNG CHANG AT MOSCOW.

Arranges a Close Military Alliance Between Russia and China.

LONDON, June 29.—In diplomatic circles it is no longer doubted that Li Hung Chang, during his visit to Moscow, arranged a close military alliance between China and Russia, including the construction of a railway to connect the existing Russian Siberian railway with Port Arthur.

Cornell Won the Boat Race.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 27.—The Harvard, Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania four-mile straighaway boat race on the Hudson was won by Cornell's eight in the phenomenal time of 19 minutes 29 seconds; Harvard second, Pennsylvania third and Columbia fourth. Cornell won the freshman race three days ago, in which the order of finishing was strangely the same.

Four Killed in a Wreck.

ROCKFORD, Ill., June 26.—In a collision between the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Chicago, Burlington & Quincy trains at Davis Junction, thirty-five loaded freight cars were piled up and burned. Thomas Moran, fireman, was killed; Fred Bair, brakeman, of Elgin, fatally hurt, and Engineer Daly hurt. Two tramps are supposed to be under the debris.

Henry M. Stanley Ill.

LONDON, June 26.—Henry M. Stanley, M. P., the African explorer, is ill in London with inflammation of the stomach. He has been unable to take food for several days and his condition is serious.

LOOKS LIKE BOIES.

Senator Gorman Forecasts the Chicago Convention.

BALTIMORE, June 27.—Senator Gorman will positively not go to Chicago for the national convention. He does not think there is any chance at this late hour to stem the free silver tide, but believes that a free silver candidate will be nominated. When asked whom he thought the democrats would nominate he replied: "It looks like Boies." Mr. Gorman does not think Teller stands much show with the democracy.

Sheriff Shot by Tramps.

ST. PAUL, June 26.—Sheriff Rogers of McLeod county, met death in a most sensational manner. Two tramps shot a farmer's dog near Glencoe. The farmer secured a warrant for their arrest. The sheriff and a deputy overtook the tramps and demanded that they surrender. The vagrants opened fire, shooting the sheriff four times, death resulting in a few minutes. A large posse is scouring McLeod county for the miscreants, and if caught they will certainly be lynched.

Flag Law Unconstitutional.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., June 28.—In the circuit court Judge Wright decided that the state flag law requiring the national flag to be displayed over every school house in the state during school hours was unconstitutional and void. In doing so he quashed the indictments which were recently returned by the grand jury against Governor Altgeld, the trustees of the University of Illinois, and the officials of the city schools for violation of the law.

Tried to Assassinate the Shah.

TIFLIS, June 29.—It is reported here that an attempt has just been made upon the life of the shah at Terehan. The attempt was unsuccessful, the assassin being arrested on the spot. He proved to be a member of the Babi Mohammedan secret society.

TERSE NEWS.

In the suburban handicap race at New York, Henry of Navarre won in 2:07.

It is now claimed that the advocates of free silver will have almost two-thirds of the delegates at the Chicago convention.

A London grand jury has indicted Dr. Jameson and his fellow raiders into the Transvaal for violation of the neutality laws.

At Damascus recently the Druses revolted, annihilated four companies of Turkish troops and captured several guns. Twelve battalions of troops will be immediately dispatched to the scene.

During a political rally at Chatham, Ont., recently, a balcony of the Royal Exchange Hotel collapsed, while a crowd stood underneath. Fourteen persons were severely and probably fatally injured.

Ex-Governor William E. Russell, of Massachusetts, has issued a statement on his position relative to the democratic presidential nomination. In it he positively says that his name will not be presented to the Chicago convention.

Notices are posted on all colleries of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre coal companies of Pennsylvania, that work will be discontinued until further notice. This, the officials say, means until July 1. Eight thousand men and boys are thus made idle.

The czar of Russia has issued an order that the inquiry into the causes that lead to the terrible disaster on the Hodyinsky plain during the coronation fetes at Moscow, when upwards of 2,500 persons were crushed or trampled to death, be dropped for the reason that a number of exalted personages have been shown to have been implicated. The disaster will therefore be ascribed to an act of God.

In a New York court David Belasco received a judgment for $16,000 against N. K. Fairbank, the Chicago millionaire, for training Mrs. Leslie Carter for the stage, Interest at 5 per cent from 1890 was allowed by the court, and a motion by Fairbank for a new trial was denied. The court also allowed the jury extra compensation under the law. The case had been on trial for three weeks. Mr. Fairbank claimed that he owed Belasco nothing and set up a counter claim for $53,000.

Havana dispatch: It is reported on good authority that Captain General Weyler is pleased with the aspect of military affairs in the island, and that the government has expressed its approval of his plan of campaign. He is confident that with the reinforcement of 40,000 men promised him by the minister of war he will be able to crush the rebellion and that he will return triumphant to Spain in June next. It is his intention to send 20,000 of the new troops, when they arrive, to the province of Pinar del Rio, where they will be employed in crushing Maceo, and the other 20,000 will be used to strengthen the Jucaro trocha. These reinforcements will enable Captain General Weyler to dispense with the services of the volunteers, who are at present doing garrison duty.

THE FATAL GLOVE.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER IX.—(CONTINUED.)

Darby produced a handkerchief which had belonged to Mr. Paul Linmere, and which he had found in his rooms, lying on his dressing-table. He showed this to the dog; Leo snuffed at it, and gave a sharp grunt of displeasure.

"We want you to find him, Leo, good dog," said the Italian, stroking the silky ears of the dog; "find your master."

Leo understood, but he looked around in evident perplexity.

"Take him to the depot!" said Mr. Trevlyn, "he may find the trail there."

They went to the station; the dog sniffed hurriedly at the platform, and in a moment more dashed off into the highway leading to Harrison Park.

"Him got him!" cried Pietro; "him find my master!"

CHAPTER X.

THE WHOLE COMpany joined in following the dog. He went straight ahead, his nose to the ground, his fleet limbs bearing him along with a rapidity that the anxious followers found it hard to emulate.

At a brook which crossed the road he stopped, seemed a little confused, crossed it finally on stepping stones, paused a moment by the side of a bare nut tree, leaped the fence, and dashed off through a grass field. Keeping steadily on, he made for the grounds of the Park, passed the drained pond, and the frost-ruined garden, and pushing before the inclosure where slept the Harrison dead, he lifted his head and gave utterance to a howl so wild, so savagely unearthly, that it chilled the blood in the veins of those who heard. An instant he paused, and then dashing through the hedge, was lost to view.

"He is found! My master is found!" said Pietro, solemnly, removing his cap, and wiping a tear from his eye. For the man was attached to Mr. Paul Linmere, in his rough way, and the tear was one of genuine sorrow.

His companions looked at each other. Alexandrine grasped the arm of Margie, and leaned heavily upon her.

"Let us go to the house—" she faltered, "I cannot bear it."

"I will know the worst," said Margie, hoarsely, and they went on together.

It was so singular, but no one had thought to look within the graveyard enclosure; perhaps if they had thought of it, they judged it impossible that a murderer should select such a locality for the commission of his crime.

Mr. Darby opened the gate, entered the yard, and stopped. So did the others. All saw at once that the search was ended. Across the path leading to the graves of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, lay Paul Linmere. He was white and ghastly; his forehead bare, and his sightless eyes wide open, looking up to the sun of noonday. His right hand lay on his breast, his left still tightly grasped the turf upon which it had fixed its hold in the cruel death agony. His garments were stiff with his own blood, and the dirk knife, still buried to the hilt in his heart, told the story of his death.

Leo crouched a little way off, his eyes jubilant, his tail beating the ground, evincing the greatest satisfaction. All present knew that the dog rejoiced at the death of his master.

Alexandrine took a step toward the dead man, her back to the horror-stricken group by the gate. She stopped suddenly, and lifted something from the ground.

Darby, alert and watchful, was by her side in a moment.

"What have you there?" he demanded.

"My glove which I dropped," she answered, quietly, holding up the dainty bit of embroidered kid.

The detective turned away satisfied; but Margie saw the girl's hand shake, and her lips grow pale as marble, the moment Darby's keen eye was removed from her face.

The discovery of the remains was followed by a long and tedious investigation. There was an inquest, and a rigid examination of every person who could by any possibility be imagined capable of throwing any light on the murder, and after all was over, the mystery was just as dark as it was at first.

Nothing was found to furnish the slightest clue to the assassin, except a white cambric handkerchief just inside the graveyard, marked with the single initial "A" in one corner. This handkerchief might have belonged to the murderer, and it might have belonged to Mr. Linmere—that could not be determined. The article was given into the keeping of Mr. Darby; and after three days lying in state at Harrison Park, the body of Mr. Linmere was taken to Albany, where his relatives were buried, and laid away for its last sleep.

Mr. Trevlyn offered a large reward for the apprehension of the murderer, or for information which would lead to his apprehension; and the town authorities offered an equal sum. Mr. Darby was retained to work upon the case, and there it rested.

Margie uttered no word in the matter. She was stunned by the suddenness of the blow, and she could not help being painfully conscious that she felt relieved by the death of this unfortunate man. God had taken her case into his hands in a manner too solemnly fearful for her to question.

Three months after the death of Paul Linmere, Margie met Archer Trevlyn at the house of Alexandrine Lee. He was quite a constant visitor there, Mrs. Lee told her, with a little conscious pride, for young Trevlyn was being spoken of in business circles as a rising young man. He was to be admitted to partnership in the firm of Belgrade & Co., in the spring. And this once effected, his fortune was made.

There was a little whist party at Mrs. Lee's that evening, and Margie was persuaded to remain. After a while the company asked for music. Whist, the books of engravings, and the bijoux of the center table were exhausted, and small talk flagged. Margie was reluctantly prevailed upon to play.

She was not a wonderful performer, but she had a fine ear, and played with finish and accuracy. But she sang divinely. To oblige her friends, she sang a few new things, and then pausing, was about to rise from the instrument, when Mr. Trevlyn came to her side.

"Will you play something for me?" he asked, stooping over her. His dark, passionate eyes brought the blood to her face—made her restless and nervous in spite of herself.

"What would you like?" she managed to ask.

"This!" He selected an old German ballad, long ago a favorite in the highest musical circles, but now cast aside for something newer and more brilliant. A simple, touching little song of love and sorrow.

She was about to decline singing it, but something told her to beware of false modesty, and she sang it through.

"I thank you!" he said, earnestly, when she had finished. "It has done me good. My mother used to sing that song, and I have never wanted to hear it from any other lips—until now."

Alexandrine glided along, as radiant as a humming-bird, her cheeks flushed, her black eyes sparkling, her voice sweet as a siren's.

"Sentimentalizing, I declare!" she exclaimed, gayly; "and singing that dreadful song, too! Ugh! it gives me the cold shudders to listen to it! How can you sing it, Margie, dear?"

"Miss Harrison sang it at my request, Miss Lee," said Trevlyn, gravely, "it is an old favorite of mine. Shall I not listen to you now?"

Alexandrine took the seat Margie had vacated, and glanced up at the two faces so near her.

"Why, Margie!" she said, "a moment ago I thought you were a rose, and now you are a lily! What is the matter?"

"Nothing, thank you," returned Margie, coldly. "I am weary, and will go home soon, I think."

Trevlyn looked at her with tender anxiety, evidently forgetful that he had requested Miss Lee to play.

"You are wearied," he said. "Shall I call your carriage?"

"If you please, yes. Miss Lee, I am sure you will excuse me."

"I shall be obliged to, I suppose."

Trevlyn put Margie's shawl around her, and led her to the carriage. After he had assisted her in, he touched lightly the hand he had just released, and said "Good-night," his very accent a blessing.

CHAPTER XI.

IN February Mr. Trevlyn received a severe shock. His aged wife had been an inmate of an asylum almost since the death of her son Hubert; and Mr. Trevlyn, though he had loved her with his whole soul, had never seen her face in all those weary years.

Suddenly, without any premonitory symptoms, her reason returned to her, and save that she was unmindful of the time that had elapsed during her insanity, she was the same Caroline Trevlyn of old.

They told her cautiously of her husband's old age, for the unfortunate woman could not realize that nearly twenty years had passed since the loss of her mind. The first desire she expressed was to see "John," and Mr. Trevlyn was sent for.

He came, and went into the presence of the wife from whom he had been so long divided, alone. No one knew what passed between them. The interview was a lengthy one, and Mr. Trevlyn came forth from it, animated by a new born hope. The wife of his youth was to be restored to him!

He made arrangements to take her home, but alas! they were never destined to be carried into effect. The secret fears of the physician were realized even sooner than he had expected. The approach of dissolution had dissolved the clouds so long hanging over the mind of Caroline Trevlyn. She lived only two days after the coming of her husband, and died in his arms, happy in the belief that she was going to her son.

Mr. Trevlyn returned home, a changed being. All his asperity of temper was gone; he was as gentle as a child. Whole days he would sit in the chair where his wife used to sit in the happy days of her young wifehood, speaking to no one, smiling sometimes to himself, as though he heard some inner whisperings which pleased him.

One day he roused himself seemingly, and sent for Mr. Speedwell, his attorney, and Dr. Drake, his family physician. With these gentlemen he was closeted the entire forenoon; and from that time forward his hold on the the world and its things seemed to relax.

One morning, when Margie went to take his gruel up to him—a duty she always performed herself—she found him sitting in his armchair, wide awake, but incapable of speech or motion.

The physician, hastily summoned, confirmed her worst fears. Mr. Trevlyn had been smitten with paralysis. He was in no immediate danger, perhaps; he might live for years, but was liable to drop away at any moment. It was simply a question of time.

Toward the close of the second day after his attack, the power of speech returned to Mr. Trevlyn.

"Margie!" he said, feebly. "Margie, come here." She flew to his side.

"I want you to send for Archer Trevlyn," he said, with great difficulty.

She made a gesture of surprise.

"You think I am not quite right in my mind, Margie, that I should make that request. My mind was never clearer, my mental sight never more correct. I want to see my grandson."

Margie despatched a servant with a brief note to Archer, informing him of his grandfather's desire, and then sat down to wait his coming.

It was a wild, stormy night in March; the boisterous wind beat against the old mansion, and like a suffering human being, shrieked down the wide, old-fashioned chimneys.

In a lull of the storm there was a tap at the chamber door. Margie opened it, and stood face to face with Archer Trevlyn.

"Come in," she whispered, "he is asleep."

"No, I am not asleep," said the sick man; "has my grandson come?"

"He is here," said Margie. "I will leave him with you, dear guardian. Let him ring for me when you want me."

"Remain here, Margaret. I want you to be a witness to what passes between us. I have no secrets from you, dear child, none whatever. Archer, come hither."

Trevlyn advanced, his face pale, his eyes moist with tears. For, having forgiven his grandparent, he had been growing to feel for the desolate old man a sort of filial tenderness, and strong in his fresh young manhood, it seemed terrible to him to see John Trevlyn lying there in his helplessness and feebleness, waiting for death.

"Come hither, Archer," said the tremulous voice, "and put your hand on mine. I cannot lift a finger to you, but I want to feel once more the touch of kindred flesh and blood. I have annoyed you and yours sadly, my poor boy, but death sweeps away all enmities, and all shadows. I see so clearly now. O, if I had only seen before!"

Arch knelt by the side of his bed, holding the old man's withered hands in his. Margie stood a little apart, regarding the pair with moist eyes.

"Call me grandfather once, my son; I have never heard the name from the lips of my kindred."

"Grandfather! O grandfather!" cried the young man, "now that you will let me call you so, you must not die! You must live for me!"

The Size of Siberia.

A graphic idea of the immense size of Siberia may be gleaned from the following comparison: All of the states, kingdoms, municipalities, empires, etc., of Europe, except Russia, and all of the United States, including Alaska, could be placed side by side in Siberia and yet but little more than cover that immense territory.

CORBETT AND SHARKEY SIGN.

Will Meet to Fight to a Finish in the Union or Mexico.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—James J. Corbett and Thomas Sharkey signed articles for a fight to a finish to take place in the United States or Mexico before the club or organization offering the best inducements. The contest is for the world's championship and a side bet of $10,000, the winner to receive the $20,000 besides the purse to be offered by the club. Marquis of Queensberry rules will govern the contest and the referee is reminded by the articles that the rules prohibiting clinching and hugging are to be strictly enforced. Neither pugulist is to participate in any contest until after the fight is decided. Lynch, Sharkey's backer, who represented the sailor, objected to the prohibition of clinching, but Corbett insisted and after much wrangling it was finally agreed to by Lynch.

FOUR HUNDRED KILLED.

Turkish Atrocities in Rumania Renewed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 27—Advices received from Van, Asia Minor, say that in the outbreak that occurred there four hundred Armenians were killed, and that the trouble has been renewed. A large number of persons have taken refuge in the British consulate.

The Wheat Crop.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 27.—The Journal prints reports from fifty wheat counties in Minnesota and Dakota, showing no reduction in acreage of spring wheat states of a year ago. All but three counties report the condition of wheat good. The total acreage is placed at 9,000,000, acres 900,000 more than estimated. There is a decrease in Red river valley, but it is compensated for in increases elsewhere. These reports show fron 7,000,000 to 8,000,000 of last year's crop is still in the farmer's hands. On this basis the crop will not exceed 190,000,000 bushels, or considerably less than the estimates.

Think Teller Will Get There.

DENVER, June 27.—The friends of Senator Teller are much encouraged by the reception of his presidential boom in the west and south. It is announced his name will be presented to the Chicago convention, and it is hoped the strength he will show in the initial ballot will stampede the convention to him. The nomination will come from the south, it is claimed, from the near friends of Senator Blackburn. Tellers' friends say the populist endorsement is assured if the democrats nominate him.

Bimetallism Coming.

LONDON, June 24.—A dispatch from Paris to the Daily News says that an international commission of husbandry including delegates from France, Germany, Belgium, Austria, Sweden and Switzeriand, met at the ministry of husbandry and adopted a bimetallic resolution. The Daily News says on this: "As M. Melen (the French premier) presided at the meeting, Great Britain is likely to hear shortly from the French government on this subject."

The Powers in Harmony.

LONDON, June 27.—In the house of commons Right Hon. George N. Curzon, parliamentary secretary to the foreign office, stated that the powers at Constantinople were in perfect concord as regarded Crete and had jointly urged the porte to maintain order in that island.

Hammond Coming Home.

NEW YORK, June 27.—A dispatch to the World from Capetown says: John Hammond, the mining engineer, sentenced to death at Pretoria for treason to the Transvaal, but finally liberated by the Boer government on payment of a fine of $125,000, has sailed for Europe.

Corbett and Sharkey.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—In a four-round contest between James Corbett and Tom Sharkey, the sailor, in which Corbett was to knock Sharkey out, the champion failed to keep his contract, and is said to have had the worst of the fight.

Mother Drowns Three Children.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 27.—In Comal county, north of here, Mrs. Bierner, wife of a farmer, drowned herself and her three children, aged 2 4 and 6 years, in the Comal river. The bodies were found tied together with cords. No cause for the act is known.

Spain Takes Action on Us.

MADRID, June 27.—The senate, two to one, rejected the amendment to the royal address demanding that the protocol of '77 with the United States be renounced.

About 27,000 Killed; 8,000 Hurt.

YOKOHAMA, June 27.—It is now said 27,000 were drowned and 8,000 injured in the tidal wave and earthquake in the northern provinces of Japan.

Bayard Honored by England.

OXFORD, Eng., June 25.—The honorary degree of D. C. L. has been conferred on United States Ambassador Bayard.

ALMOST PARALYZED.

INTENSE SUFFERING FOR YEARS

From the Wave, Odell, Nebraska.

A reporter of the Wave having heard of the great faith Mr. and Mrs. I. O. Brace, of Odell, Nebraska, have in the curative properties of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, determined to see the parties in person and ascertain the truth of the reports.

With that purpose in view a drive was taken to their fine farm a few miles west of town, where Mrs. Brace was found busily engaged in assisting her husband make wire fence. No doubt noticing our surprise, she apologized, saying "that the children were old enough to be of much help with the housework, and she thus had time to assist her husband.

"But is it possible that you have recovered so as to do work requiring the constant use of your arms, without suffering?" asked the reporter.

This question elicited the following wonderful story: "I do not wonder that you are surprised, said Mrs. Brace, for as every one in this vicinity knows for several years I was nearly crippled and suffered constantly from rheumatism. When I first felt the attack I got medicine from a local physician, but instead of getting better I grew worse, until I suffered intense agony, which no one who has not had the dread disease can understand. In hopes of relief, leading physicians in other towns were consulted, and they all agreed in pronouncing it a severe case of muscular rheumatism, and as their prescriptions were taken month after month without beneficial results, they ceased to give encouragement, and said that I was gradually becoming paralyzed.

"I had by that time become so crippled that I had to give up all work, and the only way I could carry my right arm was in an upright position. Any attempt to lower it caused excruciating pain. Constant suffering caused general debility, and life seemed too great a burden to bear. It is said a drowning man will catch at a straw, and so it was in my case, as I read a testimonial in a newspaper I happened to pick up, of a case similar to mine, which had been cured by Pink Pills for Pale People, and I determined to give them a trial.

"I admit my faith was weak, for I had always been prejudiced against so-called patent medicines, but by the time I had taken three boxes the relief was so apparent that I determined to continue their use. In a few weeks my general health improved, and I could move my arm without difficuity, and by the time ten boxes had been used I felt better than I had for years, and I can now say with confidence that I am cured. I always keep the pills in the house and take a box of them every spring as a blood purifier, and at any time that I take cold and fear a return of my old trouble."

Continuing, Mrs. Brace said: "I give all the credit of my recovery to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and both my husband and I shall always be ready to speak in their praise. We tell our neighbors on every occasion of their virtues, and if you think this is sufficient interest we will be glad to have this testimonial made public, hoping that it may be of benefit to those who otherwise would be life-long sufferers."

To confirm her story beyond all doubt, Mrs. Brace made affidavit.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, F. R. Joy, a notary public, on this 28th day of March, 1896.

(Seal.) F. R. JOY, Notary Public.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addresing Dr. Williams' Med. Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

These lands are located in twenty different counties, and are to be had now at prices ranging from $7 to $15 per acre; a few months hence their value will be doubled.

For a home or for investment no luckier chance in the west has ever before been offered. Now is the time to invest. No better farming land exists anywhere. No greater results can be obtained anywhere.

Schools and churches abound everywhere. Nearby markets for all farm products. South and North Dakota are the banner diversified farming and stock-raising states of the west. Everything grows in Dakota except ignorance and intemperance. A new boom is on. Take advantage of the tide which leads to Dakota and to fortune.

The advent of the new woman at Mountain Grove, Mo., has caused a big sensation and at present the town is divided. A night or two ago some of the leading society belles of the place appeared in bloomers at a public entertainment. This was enough to shock all the good sisters of the various churches and many denounce the act of the young women as outrageous. The Weekly Hornet took sides with the church people, and, in describing the affair, said it was a miserable attempt to imitate the new woman, as some of the costumes were actually vulgar, closing with an appeal for greater efforts toward modesty on the part of the young ladies. The Advertiser is championing the cause of the young ladies, while the leading minister has shocked his congregation by coming out squarely for the new woman under the plea of dress reform. The best families of the town are strongly arrayed against each other, but who will come out on top remains to be seen,—Ex.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"MIGHTY HUNTERS" WAS LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

"He Was a Mighty Hunter Before the Lord" — Genesis 10:9 — Spiritual Archery and the Arrow of the Gospel.

IN OUR day, hunting is a sport; but in the lands and the times infested with wild beasts, it was a matter of life or death with the people. It was very different from going ont on a sunshiny day with a patent breech-loider, to shoot reed-birds on the flats, when Pollux and Achilles and Diomedes went out to clear the land of lions and tigers and bears. My text sets forth Nimrod as a hero when it presents him with broad shoulders and shaggy apparel and sun-browned face, and arm bunched with muscle—"a mighty hunter before the Lord." I think he used the bow and arrows with great success practising archery.

I have thought if it is such a grand thing and such a brave thing to clear wild beasts out of a country, if it is not a better and braver thing to hunt down and destroy those great evils of society that are stalking the land with fierce eye and bloody paw, and sharp tusk and quick spring. I have wondered if there is not such a thing as Gospel archery, by which those who have been flying from the truth may be captured for God and heaven. The Lord Jesus in his sermon used the art of angling for an illustration when he said: "I will make you fishers of men." And so I think I have authority for using hunting as an illustration of Gospel truth; and I pray God that there may be many a man today who will begin to study Gospel archery, of whom it may, after a while, be said: "He was a mighty hunter before the Lord."

How much awkward Christian work there is done in the world! How many good people there are who drive souls away from Christ instead of bringing them to him! All their fingers are thumbs—religious blunderers who upset more than they right. Their gun has a crooked barrel, and kicks as it goes off. They are like a clumsy comrade who goes along with skillful hunters: at the very moment when he ought to be most quiet, he is crackling an alder, or falling over a log and frightening away the game. How few Christian people have ever learned the lesson of which I read at the beginning of this service, how that the Lord Jesus Christ at the well went from talking about a cup of water to the most practical religious truths, which won the woman's soul for God! Jesus in the wilderness was breaking bread to the people. I think it was good bread; it was very light bread, and the yeast had done its work thoroughly. Christ, after he had broken the bread, said to the people: "Beware of the yeast, or of the leaven, of the Pharisees." So natural a transition it was; and how easily they all understood him! But how few Christian people who understand how to fasten the truths of God and religion to the souls of men. Truman Osborne, one of the evangelists who went through this country years ago, had a wonderful art in the right direction. He came to my father's house one day, and while we were all seated in the room, he said: "Mr. Talmage, are all your children Christians?" Father said: "Yes, all but DeWitt." Then Truman Osborne looked down into the fireplace, and began to tell a story of a storm that came on the mountains, and all the sheep were in the fold: but there was one lamb outside that perished in the storm. Had he looked me in the eye, I should have been angered when he told that story; but he looked into the fireplace, and it was so pathetically and beautifully done that I never found any peace until I was sure I was inside the fold, where the other sheep were.

The archers of olden times studied their art. They were precise in the matter. The old books gave precise directions as to how an archer should go, and as to what an archer should do. He must stand erect and firm, his left foot a little in advance of the right foot. With his left hand he must take hold of the bow in the middle, and then with three fingers and the thumb of his right hand he should lay hold of the arrow and affix it to the string—so precise was the direction given. But how clumsy we are about religious work! How little skill and care we exercise! How often our arrows miss the mark! Oh, that there were more institutions established in all the towns and cities of our land, where men might learn the art of doing good—studying spiritual archery, and known as 'mighty hunters before the Lord!"

In the first place, if you want to be effectual in doing good, you must be very sure of your weapon. There was something very fascinating about the archery of olden times. Perhaps you do not know what they could do with the bow and arrow. Why, the chief battles fought by the English Plantagenets were with the long-bow. They would take the arrow of polished wood, and feather it with the plume of a bird, and then it would fly from the bow-string of plaited silk. The broad fields of Agincourt, and Solway Moss, and Neville's Cross heard the loud thrum of the archer's bow-string. Now, my Christian friends, we have a mightier weapon than that. It is the arrow of the Gospel; it is a sharp arrow; it is a straight arrow; it is feathered from the wing of a dove of God's Spirit; it flies from a bow made out of the wood of the cross. As far as I can estimate or calculate, it has brought down four hundred million souls. Paul knew how to bring the notch of that arrow on to that bow-string, and its whirr was heard through the Corinthian theaters, and through the courtroom, until the knees of Felix knocked together. It was that arrow that stuck in Luther's heart when he cried out, "Oh, my sins! Oh, my sins!" If it strike a man in the head, it kills his scepticism; if it strike a man in the heel, it will turn his step; if it strike him in the heart, he throws up his hands, as did the Emperor Julian of old when wounded in the battle, crying, "O Galilean, Thou hast conquered!"

If you want to be a skillful in spiritual archery, you must hunt in unfrequented and secluded places. Why does the hunted go three of four days in the Pennsylvania forests or over Raquette Lake into the wilds of the Adirondacks? It is the only way to do. The deer are shy, and one "bang" of the gun clears the forest. From the California stage you see, as you go over the plains, here and there, a coyote trotting along, almost within range of the gun—sometimes quite within range of it. No one cares for that; it is worthless. The good game is hidden and secluded. Every hunter knows that. So, many of the souls that will be of most worth for Christ and of most value to the church are secluded. They do not come in your way. You will have to go where they are. Yonder they are down in that cellar; yonder they are up in that garret. Far away from the door of any church the Gospel arrow has not been pointed at them. The tract distributor and city missionary sometimes catch a glimpse of them, as a hunter through the trees gets a momentary sight of a partridge or a roebuck. The trouble is, we are waiting for the game to come to us. We are not good hunters. We are standing in some street or highway expecting that the timid antelope will come up and eat out of our hands. We are expecting that the prairie-fowl will light on our church-steeple. It is not their habit. If the church should wait ten millions of years for the world to come in and be saved, it will wait in vain. The world will not come. What the church wants now is to lift its feet from damask ottomans, and put them in the stirrups. We want a pulpit on wheels. The church wants not so much cushions as it wants saddle-bags and arrows. We have got to put aside the gown and kid-gloves, and put on the hunting-shirt. We have been fishing so long in the brooks that run under the shadow of the church that the fish know us, that they avoid the hook, and escape as soon as we come to the bank, while yonder is Upper Saranac and Big Tupper Lake, where the first swing of the Gospel net would break it for the multitude of the fishes. There is outside work to be done. What is that I see in the backwoods? It is a tent. The hunters have made a clearing and camped out. What do they care if they have wet feet, or if they have nothing but a pine branch for a pillow, or for the northeast storm? If a moose in the darkness steps into the lake to drink, they hear it right away. If a loon cry in the moonlight they hear it. So in the service of God we have exposed work. We have got to camp out and rough it. We are putting all our care on the people who come to our churches. What are we doing for the thousands upon thousands that do not come? Have they no souls? Are they sinless that they need no pardon? Are there no dead in their houses, that they need no comfort? Are they cut off from God, to go into eternity—no wing to bear them, no light to cheer them, no welcome to greet them? I hear to-day surging up from the lower depths, a groan that comes through our Christian assemblages and through our beautiful churches; and it blots out all this scene from my eyes today, as by the mists of a great Niagara, for the dash and the plunge of these great torrents of life dropping down into the fathomless and thundering abyss of suffering and woe. I sometimes think that just as God blotted out the churches of Thyatira and Corinth and Laodicea, because of their sloth and stolidity, he will blot out American and English Christianity, and raise on the ruins a stalwart, wide-awake missionary church, that can take the full meaning of that command, "Go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature."

I remark, further, if you want to succeed in spiritual archery you must have courage. If the hunter stand with trembling hand or shoulder that flinches with fear, instead of his taking the catamount, the catamount takes him. What would become of the Greenlander if, when out hunting for the bear, he should stand shivering with terror on an iceberg? What would have become of Du Chaillu and Livingstone in the African thicket, with a faint heart and a weak knee? When a panther comes within twenty paces of you and it has its eye on you and it has squatted for the fearful spring, "Steady there!"

Courage, O ye spiritual archers! There are great monsters in iniquity prowling all around about the community. Shall we not of the strength of God go forth and combat them? We not only need more heart, but more backbone. What is the church of God, that it should fear to look in the eye any transgression? There is the Bengal tiger of drunkenness that prowls around, and instead of attacking it, how many of us hide under the church-pew or the communion table! There is so much invested in it that we are afraid to assault it; millions of dollars in barrels, in vats, in spigots, in corkscrews, in gin palaces with marble floor and Italian-top tables, and chased ice-coolers, and in the strychnine, and the logwood, and the tartaric acid, and the nux vomica, that go to make up our "pure" American drinks. I looked with wondering eyes on the "Heidelberg tun." It is the great liquor vat of Germany, which is said to hold eight hundred hogsheads of wine, and only three times in a hundred years it has been filled. But, as I stood and looked at it, I said to myself: "That is nothing—eight hundred hogsheads. Why our American vat holds two million, five hundred thousand barrels of strong drinks, and we keep two hundred thousand men with nothing to do but to see that it is filled." Oh! to attack this great monster of intemperance, and the kindred monsters of fraud and uncleanliness, requires you to rally all your Christian courage. Through the press, through the pulpit, through the platform, you must assault it. Would to God that all our American Christians would band together, not for crack-brained fanaticism, but for holy Christian reform. I think it was in 1793 that there went out from Lucknow, India, under the sovereign, the greatest hunting party that was ever projected. There were ten thousand armed men in that hunting party. There were camels and horses and elephants. On some princes rode, and royal ladies, under exquisite housings, and five hundred coolies waited upon the train, and the desolate places of India were invaded by this excursion, and the rhinoceros, the deer, and elephant fell under the stroke of saber and bullet. After awhile the party brought back trophies worth five thousand rupees, having left the wilderness of India ghastly with the slain bodies of wild beasts. Would to God that instead of here and there a straggler going out to fight these great monsters of iniquity in our country, the million membership of our churches would band together and hew in twain these great crimes that make the land frightful with their roar, and are fattening upon the bodies and souls of immortal men! Who is ready for such a party as that? Who will be a mighty hunter for the Lord?

I am sure that there are some here who at some time have been hit by the Gospel arrow. You felt the wound of that conviction, and you plunged into the world deeper; just as the stag, when the hounds are after it, plunges into Scroon Lake, expecting in that way to escape. Jesus Christ is on your track today, impenitent man! not in wrath, but in mercy. O ye chased and panting souls! here is the stream of God's mercy and salvation, where you may cool your thirst! Stop that chase of sin today. By the red fountain that leaped from the heart of my Lord, I bid you stop. Is there in all this house anyone who can refuse the offer that comes from the heart of the dying Son of God? Why, do you know that there are, in the banished world, souls that, for that offer you get today, would fling the crown of the universe at your feet, if they possessed it? But they went out on the mountains, the storm took them, and they died.

There is in a forest in Germany a place they call the "deer-leap"—two crags about eighteen feet apart, between them a fearful chasm. This is called the "deer-leap" because once a hunter was on the track of a deer; it came to one of these crags; there was no escape for it from the pursuit of the hunter, and in utter despair it gathered itself up, and in the death agony attempted to jump across. Of course, it fell, and was dashed on the rocks far beneath. Here is a path to heaven. It is plain, it is safe. Jesus marks it out for every man to walk in. But here is a man who says, "I won't walk in that path; I will take my own way." He comes on until he confronts the chasm that divides his soul from heaven. Now his last hour has come, and he resolves that he will leap that chasm from the heights of earth to the heights of heaven. Stand back, now, and give him full swing, for no soul ever did that successfully. Let him try. Jump! Jump! He misses the mark and he goes down, depth below depth, "destroyed without remedy." Men! angels! devils! what shall we call that place of awful catastrophe? Let it be known forever as the sinner's death-leap.

Love.

When we love, we should love that which is worthy of our love; and who could be more deserving of our love than God Himself? We are placed on earth to love God and then to be happy with Him in the next.—Rev. Father Powers.

VENEZUELA.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—British Ambassador Pauncefote, called on Olney and conferred with him touching the arrest by Venezuelan troops of British Surveyor Harrison on the British-Venezuelan boundary. It is understood Pauncefote, under instructions, requested the friendly intervention of the United States to secure Harrison's release. The course was necessary, as diplomatic relations do not exist between Great Britain and Venezuela. The action is similar to our request to Great Britain to look after the interests of John Hays Hammond at Pretoria, South Africa, where we had no representative.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Venezuelan Minister Andrade received a telegram from his government announcing that British Crown Surveyor Harrison, whose arrest caused strained feelings between the two governments, has been released by order of the Venezuelan authorities. It is undoubtedly true that the prompt action of the Venezuelan government was in a measure due to Olney's interference through our minister of war, and it is believed that the main issue between Great Britain and Venezuela will be even more easy of settlement now that the latter government has been so prompt to disavow an act she could not justify.

TUPPER OVERTHROWN.

The Conservative Government Defeated in the Canadian General Election.

TORONTO, Ont., June 26.—In the general election for the Dominion parliament the contest was perhaps the most hotly contested and in some respects the most bitter in the history of Canada. The result is the complete overthrow of the conservative government, led by Sir Charles Tupper.

TORNADO CYCLONE.

So far this year tornadoes, cyclones, high winds and lightning have been more prevalent than for the past ten years. Hence, all those having property ought to have it insured against these hazards. And when insuring property the owner should always secure the best.

We now assert, without fear of contradiction, for it cannot be truthfully contradicted, that the Hawkeye Insurance Company, of Des Moines, is the strongest of all the state companies. It possesses the largest surplus, the largest amount of assets, is doing the largest amount of business, is patronized by the best people in the state of Iowa. What better endorsement can any company have? Be sure and have your property insured in the Hawkeye. Then you will be safely insured and can rely upon getting your money in case of loss—and that right promptly.

The record of the Hawkeye Insurance Company of paying losses is, all losses since the organization of the company have been paid on an average of ten days from date of loss. And in insuring in this strong state company you keep your money at home and it is used to build up the state of Iowa.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, June 26.—Patents have been allowed to Iowa inventors, but not yet issued, as follows: To L. I. Bunker, of Webster City, for a support specially adapted for his sheet metal radiator for heating buildings. A series of radiator loops made of steel plate are readily clamped together to produce a radiator and the supports readily clamped to the outside loops to retain the radiator in proper position. To G. W. French, assignor of an undivided half to Dr. J. R. Ryan, both of Colfax, for an automatic corn planter and marker that has been successfully used in doing the work for which it is designed, viz.: Plant two rows simultaneously as the carriage is advanced and as required to produce check rows. To A. W. Hollingsworth, of West Liberty, for a canopy for vehicles that is provided with a series of automatic rollers and curtains and means for adjusting and holding the curtains at various angles. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address. Printed copies of the drawings and specifications of any United States patent sent upon receipt of 25 cents. Our practice is not confined to Iowa. Inventors in other states can have our services upon the same terms as the Hawkeyes.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

MRS. GOOLD'S GRATITUDE

Her Story of How She Was Restored to Health.

Condition Before and After the Birth of Her Child.

From every city, town and hamlet on this vast continent, come letters from suffering women; from those whose physicians have been unable to assist them, or from that numberless class whose confidence in Mrs. Pinkham's advice and the curative properties of her Vegetable Compound is unbounded.

Every letter received from women is recorded, and hundreds of volumes of cases treated aid in furnishing practical information for the women of to-day. No letters are published without the request of the writer. The strictest confidence is observed. The following letter represents thousands:—

"I always enjoyed good health until six months before the birth of my babe. Then I was very weak; my back ached all the time. My physicians said I would be all right after the birth of the child, but I was not, although at that time I had the best of care. The pains in my back were almost unbearable. I had leucorrhœa in its worst form; menstruations were painful.

"Any work or care would entirely unnerve me. When my babe was 11 months old, friends persuaded me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I had taken one bottle I felt the effects. My back did not ache so badly, and I felt stronger. After taking four bottles I felt well. My ambition returned, menstruations were painless, leucorrhœa entirely cured, and I could take care of my babe and do my housework. I shall always recommend your Vegetable Compound for all women, especially for young mothers."—MRS. H. L. GOOLD, Oregon, Wis.

If Mrs. Goold had been well before the birth of her child, subsequent suffering would have been avoided. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should always be taken before and after birth, in order that the system may withstand the shock.

Remarkable Case of Cancer Cured.

C. E. Brooks, now and for the past fifteen years a resident of Yankton, S. D., his former friends and acquaintances throughout Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin, will be glad to learn, has been cured, after thirty years of worry and suffering caused by an epithelial cancer which involved both lips, also part of the left cheek, having entirely eaten away the corner of the mouth and extended inside. Mr. Brooks has, in the past ten years, visited several of the eastern cities, having had five different operations performed, without receiving any benefit, expending in professional services and other expenses connected with the case, over four thousand dollars. Dr. J. H. Keyes, the cancer specialist now connected with the Des Moines Cancer Cure Co., did the work which has resulted in a cure. The Cancer, or ex-crescence may be seen at the company's office in Des Moines. Des Moines Cancer Cure Company, 305 Observatory Building.

HAD THE WAITER'S SYMPATHY

Man Who Suffered from More Things Than Dyspepsia.

They came into the breakfast room of an uptown hotel, says the New York Journal. It was as evident that the hollow-eyed, thin-faced, yellow man was a dyspeptic as it was that both were from the country and that she was boss. She was tall and spare and resembled an animated vinegar cruet in more ways than one. They seated themselves at a table and consulted a bill of fare.

"What are you going to have?" asked she, with just a suspicion of a sneer.

"Well, I'm feelin' pretty good today and I guess I'll take two boiled eggs and a cup of coffee."

"I thought so. Well, I guess you'll have one poached egg and a cup of hot water."

The dyspeptic sank into himself and said mildly: "I feel considerably better today and two boiled eggs would taste good."

"But one egg poached is all you get. If I didn't look after your stummick you wouldn't have any," said she, with a baleful glare.

"But I'm hungry. Can't I have two poached?"

"What's the use of arguing, Henry? I try to speak plain, and one poached egg and a cup of hot water is what I said."

Here a light came into the eye of the unfortunate, like the last glimmer of the spark in a dying match, and he turned to the waiter. In a voice trembling with moral courage the dyspeptic said: "Two boiled eggs and a cup of coffee for me."

His better half looked at him dumbfounded for a moment, and then she said decisively: "Waiter, you bring him one poached egg and a cup of hot water, and I'll have a steak with fried potatoes and two boiled eggs and a side dish of hash and a plate of corn bread—oh, and some oranges to start with."

The waiter walked toward the kitchen in deep abstraction, while the lady glanced triumphantly at her lord and master, who fell to reading a newspaper with much attention. When the waiter came back with the order there was a look of grim determination on his face. He first put the beefsteak, fried potatoes, the oranges, the corned-beef hash and eggs and corn bread before madam. Then he defiantly placed at the dyspeptic's place the forbidden boiled eggs and the coffee.

"Didn't I tell you to bring him one poached egg and a cup of hot water?" demanded the lady, with austerity. "You take them things back and bring what I told you to."

"Beg pardon, mum! What did you say? Wheat cakes? Certainly, mum," and the waiter fled toward the kitchen.

The dyspeptic ate the two boiled eggs and drank his cup of coffee triumphantly; but he did not look, when he left the table, as if he expected a pleasant fifteen minutes immediately following.

The Alaskan Boundary Question.

The development of the goldfields near Juneau adds interest to the question of the boundary line between southern Alaska and British Columbia. As there is a rich gold region, the Cassiar district, just east of Juneau in British Columbia, it is probable that all the intervening country is gold-bearing. Prospecting has thus far been hampered by forest growth so dense that the most experienced woodsman can only make four miles a day. This wealth in lumber, however, must eventually add to the value of the country and render its possession more desirable. Certain Canadian maps, subsequent to 1884, show a boundary line which would cut off twenty-eight thousand five hundred square miles of territory hitherto considered as belonging to the United States. The dispute (if it may be so called) rests on the terms of the convention between Great Britain and Russia, according to which the boundary line, commencing at the southernmost point of Prince of Wales Island, "shall ascend to the north along the channel called Portland Channel," etc. As the mouth of Portland Channel is sixty miles east of that cape, the Canadian mapmakers contend that the line, in order to ascend north from its commencement, must run through the channel immediately east of Prince of Wales Island. A glance at the map suffices to show that this contention is a mere quibble. —From "The Goldfields of Alaska,"

A Veteran Brandy Drinker.

A London paper says that the coroner of Islington held an inquest the other day on the death of Sarah Glendenning, 95 years old, a woman of independent means, who died from syncope. It was stated in evidence that this ancient dame had had good health, was extremely active and "was an excessive brandy drinker, sometimes taking as much as a bottle and a half a day."—Exchange.

Indignant Citizen—That story is a rotten lie. A newspaper would rather lie about a man than tell the truth. Dignified Editor—I regret to say that your son supplied us the information.

Several Ways.

"England has made up its mind that we are a portion of the human race that it ought to elevate," remarked one benighted native.

"Well, there are several ways of doing that," replied another.

"Yes. But unfortunately the quickest way is to blow us up."

If Remote from Medical Help,
Doubly essential is it that you should be provided with some reliable family medicine. Hostetter's Stomach bitters is the best of its class, remedying thoroughly as it does such common ailments as indigestion, constipation and biliousness, and affording safe and speedy help in malarial cases, rheumatism and inactivity of the kidneys.

"A Scorcher."

BattleAx PLUG

Tobacco Dealers say, that "BATTLE AX" is a "scorcher" because it sells so fast. Tobacco Chewers say, it is a "scorcher" because 5 cents' worth goes so far. It's as good as can be made regardless of cost. The 5 cent piece is almost as large as the other fellows' 10 cent piece.

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

There is so much preaching that is only preaching.

It takes some dark days to tell us what sunshine means.

Nobody wants the second place on the presidential ticket because it is a vice.

A wolf in sheep's clothing may look like a sheep, but he betrays himself whenever he comes in sight of a bone.

Some one has been caught purloining the property of the Williams College baseball nine. Such is the pernicious effect of the example of stealing bases.

Miss Marion Larsen, California's camp-meeting prophetess, says that the world is coming to an end August 15. She received the revelation in a trance a few days ago.

White Birch, Wis., known far and wide as a "tough place," has changed its name to Solon Springs, and hereafter will be eminently respectable. It is never too late to mend.

If the unfortunate accident at Springfield last Wednesday shall have any effect toward putting a stop to the fashionable imbecility known as "the society circus" it will not be without its compensations.

The public has been told that when a clergyman, opening a political convention with prayer in a neighboring state, asked divine protection for the president of the United States "ominous grumblings were heard." The politicians who did the grumbling must be clean daft. Sane men cannot object to prayer for a president, no matter how much they may dislike him personally or politically.

A Connecticut man was fined $50 and costs the other day for kissing a pretty girl against her will. He paid the fine promptly, and, like a true philosopher, remarked, that he would like another at the same price. He was informed, however, that others would come higher, when, like a true financier, he remarked that fifty was his limit. Observe that this occurred in Connecticut.

Cecil Rhodes and Barney Barnato, the South African mining kings, are said to have turned their attention to the newly discovered gold fields in the region lying west and southwest of Lake Kootenai, in British Columbia, just north of the international boundary line. They have sent experts to investigate the prospects. These experts declare the richness of the Rossland and Trail creek mountain regions far surpasses anything South Africa ever dreamed of. This report, it is thought, will be followed by the investment of a large amount of capital in that section by those mining magnates and other wealthy Englishmen who follow their lead in such enterprises.

The bicycle trust does not seem to have been a success. The sudden cessation in the demand for wheels has caused several failures among bicycle manufacturers and a big drop in prices. Bicycle agents and manufacturers say there is no possibility of a trust, as the smaller manufacturers would not become parties to it, but the rumors have had the effect of precipitating a war of rates, and the result is that wheels are now selling at from $32 to $48, where $75 and $100 were formerly the prices. This does not apply to all makes. It is said the actual cost of labor, material, and freight charges in a bicycle ranges from $32 to $38, so manufacturers, jobbers and agents have apparently had a handsome margin of profits to divide.

There is much discussion among those concerned in the reorganization of the Northern Pacific Railroad as to the form of the charter the company is to have or whether it is advisable to foreclose the property at present, in view of the fact that the present Congress has failed to give the company a new charter. A story is afloat in Wall Street to the effect that the failure of Congress to pass the expected legislation was partly due to the efforts of the bondholders of the Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern Railroad, who are said to have a $5,000,000 claim the Northern Pacific refuses to adjust. The sale of the road is advertised to take place next month, but as no action in regard to the new charter was taken at this session of Congress it is considered likely that the sale will be postponed. A charter might be obtained from one of the states, but it would lack many of the valuable rights that are enjoyed by the old company under its present charter.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

POPULIST RAILROAD PLANNED.

It Is to Connect Iowa Towns and Be Run on Original Ideas.

SIOUX CITY, July 3.—Articles of incorporation of the Western Iowa railway company, an organization backed by the populists in this locality, have been filed at Primghar, O'Brien county. It is planned to run the line between Sioux City and Hartley, with Paulina and Sutherland as intermediate stations. Its headquarters will be at the latter town. Among the peculiar provisions included in the articles are clauses that no interest-bearing debt may be created, no salary in excess of $2,400 paid, nor dividend of over 5 per cent declared. No stockholder is allowed more than one vote, however many shares he may own. The capital stock is fixed at $750,000. Shares are $20 each, payable at $2 when issued and $2 per month thereafter until the total is paid.

RIOT AT MARSHALLTOWN.

A Bad Man With a Knife and Pistol Roughly Handled.

MARSHALLTOWN, July 3.—A serious riot was narrowly averted here during the progress of a band concert at the fair grounds. A man named Ashellman, who is an employe of the Pilgrim hotel, gained the ill-will of a crowd of young fellows and a free-for-all fight ensued, in which Ashellman was pounded unmercifully and driven to the hotel. He afterwards appeared with a knife and pistol, whereupon the crowd took hold of him and battered him in a frightful manner. Ashellman was drunk. He has long shown a tendency to do injury to youths. A tremendous crowd gathered and he would probably have been killed but for the interference of a batallion of police, as the excitement ran high.

MURDER AT BURLINGTON.

An Eighteen-Year-Old Boy Charged With the Crime.

BURLINGTON, July 3.—John J. Crowder, a lad of 18 years, stabbed and probably killed Charles Lyons, aged 30. The fight originated over abuse of Lyons' young child by Crowder. Both families live in a tenement. Lyons and Crowder began fighting in a dark hallway, from which Crowder shortly emerged with a badly battered face, and was followed shortly by Lyons, who staggered to the street and fell in a pool of blood coming from a knife wound between his ribs. He will die. Crowder is in jail.

DANGERS OF FLIRTATION.

Young Lady Loses $235 by Indulging in the Article.

DUBUQUE, July 5.—A young lady from Chicago, who had become acquainted with a nice appearing young man while on the train into the Illinois Central depot, gave him her purse with the request to buy her a sandwich. He was very willing and left for the purpose, but he failed to return. The purse contained $235. He was subsequently arrested and most of the money was found on him, after he had attempted to escape.

LOVED WEBSTER CITY.

Kendall Young Gives His Wealth to Found a Library.

WEBSTER CITY, July 4.—Kendall Young, a pioneer resident of Webster City, and president of the First National bank, died recently at Battle Creek. His will provides for a handsome memorial, in the way of a public library Practically his entire fortune—estimated at between $150,000 and $200,000—is to be devoted to the purpose.

Suicide Near Oskaloosa.

OSKALOOSA, July 4.—Mott Lee, a well-to-do and popular farmer living south of Lacey, committed suicide. He took a 32-caliber revolver from the house, and walking past his wife and son, went out into the barn yard, behind some corn cribs, and placing the revolver to the left side of his head, pulled the trigger. Lee was about 50 years of age. He seemed cheerful enough at breakfast, did not complain, and apparently had no reason for committing the act.

Rev. Nelson Found Guilty.

KEOKUK, July 3.—The Keokuk Presbytery concluded the trial of Rev. William P. Nelson, late pastor at Montrose, which had been in progress for several days. He was found guilty of unministerial financial dealings and questionable moral conditions. He remains suspended until he shall give satisfactory evidence of having reformed.

Hager Renominated.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, July 2.—Ninth district republicans renominated Congressman Hager on the eighty-ninth ballot. McPherson was the first candidate to withdraw, and Montgomery county cast the votes necessary for a choice.

WILL APPEAL.

Suel J. Spaulding Case to Come Before the Supreme Court.

DES MOINES, July 3.—James A. Howe, district attorney, filed a bill of exceptions in the case of the state vs. Suel J. Spaulding, charged with stealing $14,000 while secretary of the state pharmacy commission. Spaulding was indicted as a public official, under the meaning of the law, and tried. The defense objected, claiming he was not a state official, and Judge Holmes held the objections good and turned Spaulding loose. Attorney Howe claims he is sure he was right and that Spaulding is guilty as a public official. On this point he makes his appeal. No matter how the case is decided Spaulding cannot be again tried under the same statute. It will simply establish a precedent.

CHILD SMOTHERED BY OATS.

Sucked Beneath the Surface of the Grain in an Elevator.

FORT DODGE, July 3.—While an oat bin twenty feet deep was being emptied by chutes from the elevator to the cars at Callender, Ida Bollinger, 11-year-old daughter of Samuel Bollinger, who was playing over the bin, slipped and fell in. She was stunned by the fall, and although help was soon at hand, she was sucked into the oats and found smothered ten feet below the surface.

Court House Bonds Sold.

CLINTON, July 3.—The county board of supervisors opened bids for the $75,000 court house bonds, drawing 4½ per cent interest and maturing $25,000 each in eight, nine and ten years. The only local bid received was that of the People's Trust and Savings bank at a premium of $75. Bidders were present from New York, Cincinnati, Toledo, Cleveland and Chicago, no less than nine bids being made by different parties. A Chicago banker was the successful bidder, and the bonds were awarded on his bid of $75.310 and accrued interest for the entire series. This is considered a very good bid, especially for the times. The bonds will be paid for shortly, so that the work on the court house will undoubtedly begin within a few weeks.

Stabbed in a Saloon.

CEDAR RAPIDS, July 2.—William Shuell, of Parnell, was stabbed near the heart during a drunken saloon row. Five men have been arrested and are in custody. It is not known how seriously Shuell is injured.

CEDAR RAPIDS, July 4.—Sam Smith, who stabbed William Shuell during a drunken quarrel, inflicting a wound that proved fatal, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $1,500 on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder. Frank Williams and Frank Powers have been held in bonds of $1,000 each on the same charge for preliminary hearing.

Lost His Sight.

JAMES, July 5.—While mixing quick silver and nitric acid as a medicine for horses, John Barrels lost both his eyes by the explosion of the bottle. His mother was also terribly burned about the face.

Palmer Wins Easily.

Charged With Boodling.

SIOUX CITY, July 3.—Alderman H. H Johnson has been removed from office by the unanimous vote of the council on the charge of boodling. He will fight the case in court.

One Boy's Hand Comes Off.

SIOUX CITY, July 5.—A boy named Earl Darling, living at Leeds, held too long to a big fire cracker and his hand was torn to shreds. The hand had to be cut off.

BREVITIES.

Gov. Boies decided not to attend the Chicago convention.

The Iowa Epworth League have arranged to hold a summer assembly and training school at Storm Lake, Iowa, July 8 to 22.

L. F. Gemmett, city assessor of Fort Madison, who was recently injured by the accidental discharge of his gun while out hunting, is dead. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his death.

John Hall, proprietor of the Creston Daily News, and Peter Boessen, his editor, were arrested recently by Sheriff Davenport, charged with publishing articles maliciously slandering the character of the latter. They were released on bail. The extreme penalty is $1,000 fine and one year in jail.

Chariton dispatch: Clarence Morton, a 17-year-old boy living near Chariton, has been arrested by the federal authorities because, as he admits, he manufactured three counterfeit nickels as playthings for his baby brother. He denies having attempted to pass any of the spurious coin. If convicted he will probably escape with a nominal sentence.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

CUBA.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Several Cubans who have just arrived from Havana on the steamer Saratoga brought with them copies of the warning circular addressed to the Cubans, informing them that during the summer there would be many explosions in the towns of the island, caused by dynamite. The circular advised all Cubans to abandon the threatened region while this campaign of destruction was in progress. The circulars were in Spanish, dated June 15, and printed upon white tissue paper. Many thousands of these were said to be in circulation in and about Havana when the steamer left the port. At the Cuban junta headquarters it was said the destruction of Havana in this way has been under contemplation for a long time and that private buildings and property owned by the Spaniards who opposed the independence of Cuba would be sacrificed as well as the public edifices occupied by the Spanish.

RECEPTION FOR TELLER.

Thousands Greet the Bolting Republican On His Return.

DENVER, July 3.—Senator Henry M. Teller, on arriving in Denver, was met by a great outpouring of people from all parts of the state. The demonstration was non-partisan, and it is doubtful if the scenes of enthusiasm have have been paralleled in western history. The run from Cheyenne to Denver was marked by a succession of ovations at the towns which the trains passed. An immense parade formed from the depot at Denver. The carriage in which Teller was seated was drawn by six white horses, but it had gone but a short distance when it was descended upon by 500 young men, who detached the animals, tied a rope to the pole and dragged the vehicle the remainder of the way themselves. His address was listened to by 30,000 people.

SENSATIONAL MANIFESTO.

Silver Republicans of Minnesota Refuse to Support McKinley et al.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 4.—The most sensational manifesto in Minnesota's history is that issued by the silver republicans, who refuse to support McKinley for president, Clough for governor, or any of the republican candidates for congress. The prominence of the men signing it attracts widespread attention. Among them are Lieutenant-Governor Frank A. Day, Congressman Charles A. Towne, ex-Congressman John Lind, State Senators Morgan, Sanborn, Howard and Smith.

FORTY-TWO KILLED.

Terrible Explosion in a German Arsenal.

BERLIN, July 2.—An explosion of ammunition during a fire in the arsenal near Fort Moselie, in the province of Lorraine, proves to have been more disastrous than was at first reported. It was learned that forty-two men were killed instead of seven, and that 100 others were badly injured.

SIXTY PERSONS DROWNED.

Awful Disaster to the Star Packet Boat Raimaneih.

SUAKIN, June 2.—The Star Packet boat Raimaneih, bound from Suakin for Suez, broke her shaft and drifted upon a rock, where she was foundered. Sixty persons were drowned. The most of them were Greeks.

Teller or Nothing.

ST. LOUIS, July 3.—Hon. H. E. Taubeneck, chairman in the people's party national executive committee, will entertain no proposition for a compromise with the democratic party which does not include Senator Teller for president. Taubeneck denied he had ever stated that Mr. Bland would be acceptable to the populists. "If the democrats can't meet us half way on a man like Senator Teller, then that party is responsible for a division of the silver forces in the coming campaign. Bland would, perhaps suit us better than any other democrat or old party man, but there is an irreconciliable conflict between populism and the old parties in America, and principles cannot be compromised."

Two Hundred Turks Killed.

ATHENS, July 4.—The Cretan insurgents defeated the Turks between Kissam, on the northern coast of the island of Crete, and Solino, on the southern coast, killing 200 of them and capturing three of their cannon. The Turks were advancing to raise the siege of Kaudane, in which 1,600 Turkish troops are besieged by the rebels.

Swindler Addison Found Guilty.

SANTA FE, N. M., July 4.—The jury in the case against James Addison, charged with attempting to defraud the government with an alleged Spanish grant covering 12,000,000 acres of land in Arizona, returned a verdict of guilty. The judge postponed the sentence till July 18, at which time he will hear the arguments for a new trial.

SERIOUS STRIKE IN OHIO.

Riot in Which Many Shots Are Exchanged.

WEST VIEW, Ohio, July 2.—Over 100 shots were exchanged by deputy sheriffs and strikers at the Berea stone quarries. No one was killed so far as is known, but many have sore heads as the result of hand to hand conflicts. The strikers approached the quarry with the intention of driving out the non-union men at work. The sheriff, with forty deputies, ordered them to stop. The strikers began firing and the fight became general. The strikers were repulsed. Later the sheriff called upon the governor for troops. He was authorized to call out the troops in the county, and one company is now under arms and another is under orders to stand in readiness to move. The strikers have sworn out warrants for the arrest of several deputies charging them with shooting with intent to kill.

AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, July 6.—It has been officially announced that 30 out of 48 delegates from Illinois have declared their intentions to vote for the nomination of Bland. It is semi-officially announced that 30 out of 48 delegates will give their support to John R. McLean for second place on the ticket. It is probable that Senator Hill will be made temporary chairman of the convention unless voted down by the convention.

DENVER, July 6.—Senator Teller has declared there is not a word of truth in the report circulated at Chicago that he has written Governor Altgeld that he will not permit his name to go before the democratic convention.

No Hope.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 6.—"Still digging at the cave" is the only news from the Twin shaft. During the night there were indications of another squeeze, and men were sent back to timber the weak spot. The third fall has been struck by the rescuers, the other two having been cleared away. The advance toward the supposed location of the bodies of the unfortunate miners very slow and there is absolutely no hope entertained that any of the men are alive.

Tried to Kill "Lucky."

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—Miss Lillian Ashley, of Boston, whose case against "Lucky" Baldwin for seduction under promise of marriage has been on file several weeks, created a sensation in court by walking over to Baldwin, drawing a revolver and firing at his head. A bystander knocked the weapon aside, so the ball merely grazed his scalp. It is believed the woman's mind is unbalanced.

Egyptian Cholera.

LONDON, July 3.—A dispatch from Cairo to the Daily News says the Cholera returns for June show 4,419 cases and 3,598 deaths.

Russia Gets Chinese Reward.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 3.—The Novosti announces that Russia has obtained absolute freedom of trade in northern China.

TERSE NEWS.

The republicans of Nebraska have nominated J. H. Maccoll, of Dawson county, for governor.

It is now positively assured that Brigadier General Melquizo, notorious for his activity in the Cuban campaign, will be promoted as major general. It was at his order that Dr. Delgado was shot. He is the most inhuman butcher in command of a Spanish army.

The British steamer Santarense, from Penarth for Para, was recently sunk by collision with the British bark Dundonald. The Dundonald proceeded in a leaky and otherwise damaged condition, with the crew of the Santarense on board. The passengers who were on board the Santarense were landed at Para by the Norwegian bark Hiawatha.

At Canton on the 29th the committee, consisting of one member from each state and territory, which was selected at the St. Louis convention to convey to Major McKinley the official notification of his nomination, called at the home of Mr. McKinley and Senator Thurston delivered a short address formally notifying the major of his nomination at St. Louis. McKinley responded in an address accepting the nomination and thanking the party for the honor conferred upon him.

Hutchinson, Minn., dispatch: Two tramps are looking for oil with which to rid themselves of the coats of tar and feathers administered by citizens. The tramps had attempted to make a farmer named Austin cook them a meal and one who was drunk hit Austin and was promptly knocked down. Because of the late murder of Sheriff Roberts by tramps, the citizens decided to make an example of these two, one of whom had committed no offense at all, and tarred them thoroughly.

THE FATAL GLOVE.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER XI.—(CONTINUED.)

"The decree has gone forth. There is from it no appeal. I am to die. I have felt the certainty a long time. O, for one year of existence, to right the wrongs I have done! But they could not be righted. Alas! if I had centuries of time at my command, I could not bring back to life the dear son my cruelty hurried out of the world, or his poor wife, whose fair name I could, in my revenge for her love of my son, have taken from her! O Hubert! Hubert! O my darling! dearer to me than my heart's blood—but so foully wronged!"

His frame shook with emotion, but no tears came to his eyes. His remorse was too deep and bitter for the surface sorrow of tears to relieve.

"Put it out of your mind, grandfather," said Arch, pressing his hand. "Do not think of it, to let it trouble you more. They are all, I trust, in heaven. Let them rest."

"And you tell me this, Archer? You, who hated me so! You, who swore a solemn oath to be revenged on me! Well, I do not blame you. I only wonder that your forbearance was so long-suffering. Once you would have rejoiced to see me suffer as I do now."

"I should, I say it to my shame. God forgive me for my wickedness! But for her"—looking at Margie—"I might have kept the sinful vow I made. She saved me."

"Come here, Margie, and kiss me," said the old man, tenderly. "My dear children! my precious children, both of you! I bless you both—both of you together, do you hear? Once I cursed you, Archer—now I bless you! If there is a God, and I do at last believe there is, he will forgive me that curse; for I have begged it of Him on my bended knees."

"He is merciful, dear guardian," said Margie, gently. "He never refuses the earnest petition of the suffering soul."

"Archer, your grandmother died a little while ago. My cruelty to your father made her, for twenty long years, a maniac. But before her death, all delusion was swept away, and she bade me love and forgive our grandson—that she might tell your father and mother, when she met them in heaven, that at last all was well here below. I promised her, and since then my soul has been at peace. But I have longed to go to her—longed inexpressibly. She had been all around me, but so impalpable that when I put out my hands to touch her, they grasped only the air. The hands of mortality may not reach after the hands which have put on immortality."

He lay quiet a moment, and then went on, brokenly:

"Archer, I wronged your parents bitterly, but I have repented it in dust and ashes. Repented it long ago, only I was too proud and stubborn to acknowledge it. Forgive me again, Archer, and kiss me before I die."

"I do forgive you, grandfather; I do forgive you with my whole heart." He stooped, and left a kiss on the withered forehead.

"Margie," said the feeble voice, "pray for me, that peace may come."

She looked at Archer, hesitated a moment, then knelt by the bedside. He stood silent, and then, urged by some uncontrollable impulse, he knelt by her side.

The girlish voice, broken, but sweet as music, went up to Heaven in a petition so fervent, so simple, that God heard and answered. The peace she asked for the dying man came.

Her pleading ceased. Mr. Trevlyn lay quiet, his countenance serene and hopeful. His lips moved, they bent over him, and caught the name of "Caroline."

Trevlyn's hand sought Margie's and she did not repulse him. They stood together silently, looking at the white face on the pillows.

"He is dead!" Archer said, softly; "God rest him!"

CHAPTER XII.

AFTER the funeral of John Trevlyn, his last will and testament was read. It created a great deal of surprise when it was known that all the vast possessions of the old man were bequeathed to his grandson—his sole relative—whom he had despised and denied almost to the day of his death. In fact, not a half dozen persons in the city were aware of the fact that there existed any tie of relationship between John Trevlyn, the miser, and Archer Trevlyn, the head clerk of Belgrade & Company.

Arch's good fortune did not change him a particle. He gave less time to business, it is true, but he spent it in hard study. His early education had been defective, and he was doing his best to remedy the lack.

Early in the autumn following the death of his grandfather, he went to Europe, and after the lapse of a year, returned again to New York. The second day after his arrival, he went out to Harrison Park. Margie had passed the summer there, with an old friend of her mother for company, he was told, and would not come back to the city before December.

It was a cold, stormy night in September, when he knocked at the door of Miss Harrison's residence; but a cheery light shone from the window, and streamed out of the door which the servant held open.

He inquired for Miss Harrison, and was shown at once into her presence. She sat in a low chair, her dress of sombre black relieved by a white ribbon at the throat, and by the chestnut light of the shining hair that swept in unbound luxuriance over her shoulders. She rose to meet her guest, scarcely recognizing Archer Trevlyn in the bronzed, bearded man before her.

"Miss Harrison," he said, gently, "it is a cold night; will you not give a warm welcome to an old friend?"

She knew his voice instantly. A bright color leaped to her cheek, an embarrassment which made her a thousand times dearer and more charming to Arch Trevlyn, possessed her. But she held out her hands, and said a few shy words of welcome.

Arch sat down beside her, and the conversation drifted into recollections of their own individual history. They spoke to each other with the freedom of very old friends, forgetful of the fact that this was almost the very first conversation they had ever had together.

After a while, Arch said:

"Miss Harrison, do you remember when you first saw me?"

She looked at him a moment, and hesitated before she answered.

"I may be mistaken, Mr. Trevlyn. If so, excuse me; but I think I saw you first, years and years ago, in a flower store."

"You are correct; and on that occasion your generous kindness made me very happy. I thought it would make my mother happy, also. I ran all the way home, lest the roses might wilt before she saw them."

He stopped and gazed into the fire.

"Was she pleased with them?"

"She was dead. We put them in her coffin. They were buried with her."

Margie laid her hand lightly on his.

"I am so sorry for you! I, too, have buried my mother."

After a little silence, Arch went on.

"The next time you saw me was when you gave me these." He took out his pocketbook, and displayed to her, folded in white paper, a cluster of faded blue-bells. "Do you remember them?"

"I think I do. You were knocked down by the pole of the carriage?"

"Yes. And the next time? Do you remember the next time?"

"I do."

"I thought so. I want to thank you, now, for your generous forbearance. I want to tell you how your keeping my secret made a different being of me. If you had betrayed me to justice, I might have been now an inmate of a prison cell. Margie Harrison, your silence saved me! Do me the justice to credit my assertion, when I tell you that I did not enter my grandfather's house because I cared for the plunder I should obtain. I had taken a vow to be revenged on him for his cruelty to my parents, and Sharp, the man who was with me, represented to me that there was no surer way of accomplishing my purpose than by taking away the treasures that he prized. For that only I became a house-breaker. I deserved punishment. I do not seek to palliate my guilt, but I thank you again for saving me!"

"I could not do otherwise than remain silent. When I would have spoken your name, something kept me from doing it. I think I remembered always the pitiful face of the little street-sweeper, and I could not bear to bring him any more suffering."

"Since those days, Miss Harrison, I have met you frequently—always by accident—but to-night it is no accident. I came here on purpose. For what, do you think?"

"I do not know—how should I?"

"I have come here to tell you what I longed to tell you years ago! what was no less true then than it is now; what was true of me when I was a street-sweeper, what has been true of me ever since, and what will be true of me through time and eternity!"

He had drawn very near to her—his arm stole round her waist, and he sat looking down into her face with his soul in his eyes.

"Margie, I love you! I have loved you since the first moment I saw you. There has never been a shade of wavering; I have been true to you through all. My first love will be my last. Your influence has kept me from the lower depths of sin; the thought of you has been my salvation from ruin. Margie, my darling! I love you! I love you!"

"And yet you kept silent all these years! Oh, Archer!"

"I could not do differently. You were as far above me as the evening star is above the earth it shines upon! It would have been base presumption in the poor saloon-waiter, or the dry goods clerk, to have aspired to the hand of one like you. And although I loved you so, I should never have spoken, had not fate raised me to the position of a fortune equal to your own, and given me the means of offering you a home worthy of you. But I am waiting for my answer. Give it to me, Margie."

Her shy eyes met his, and he read his answer in their clear depths. But he was too exacting to be satisfied thus.

"Do you love me, Margie? I want to hear the words from your lips. Speak, darling. They are for my ear alone, and you need not blush to utter them."

"I do love you Archer. I believe I have loved you ever since the first."

"And you will be mine? All my own!"

She gave him her hands. He drew the head, with its soft, bright hair, to his breast and kissed the sweet lips again and again, almost failing to realize the blessed reality of his happiness.

It was late that night before Archer Trevlyn left his betrothed bride, and took his way to the village hotel. But he was too happy, too full of sweet content, to heed the lapse of time. At last the longing of his life was satisfied. He had heard her say that she loved him.

And Margie sat and listened to the sound of his retreating footsteps, and then went up to her chamber to pass the night, wakeful, too content to be willing to lose the time in sleep, and so the dawn of morning found her with open eyes.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE ensuing winter was a very gay one. Margaret Harrison returned to New York under the chaperonage of her friend, Mrs. Weldon, and mingled more freely in society than she had done since the season she "came out." She took pleasure in it now, for Archer Trevlyn was welcome everywhere. He was a favored guest in the most aristocratic homes, and people peculiarly exclusive were happy to receive him into their most select gatherings.

His engagement with Margie was made public, and the young people were overwhelmed with the usual compliments of politely expressed hopes and fashionable congratulations.

The gentlemen said Miss Harrison had always been beautiful, but this season she was more than that. Happiness is a rare beautifier. It painted Margie's cheeks and lips with purest rose color, and gave a light to her eyes and a softness to her sweet voice.

Of course she did not mingle in society, even though her engagement was well known, without being surrounded by admirers. They fairly took her away from Arch sometimes; but he tried to be patient. Before the apple-trees in the green country valleys were rosy with blossoms, she was to be all his own. He could afford to be generous.

Among the train of her admirers was a young Cuban gentleman, Louis Castrani, a man of fascinating presence and great personal beauty. He had been unfortunate in his first love. She had died a few days before they were to have been married—died by the hand of violence, and Castrani had shot the rival who murdered her. Public opinion had favored the avenger, and he had not suffered for the act, but ever since he had been a prey to melancholy. He told Margie his history, and it aroused her pity; but when he asked her love, she refused him gently, telling him that her heart was another's. He had suffered deeply from the disappointment, but he did not give up her society, as most men would have done. He still hovered around her, content if she gave him a smile or a kind word, seeming to find his best happiness in anticipating her every wish before it was uttered.

Toward the end of March Alexandrine Lee came to pass a few days with Margie. Some singular change had been at work on the girl. She had lost her wonted gayety of spirits, and was for the most part subdued, almost sad. Her eyes seldom lighted with a smile, and her sweet voice was rarely heard.

She came, from a day spent out, one evening, into Margie's dressing room. Miss Harrison was preparing for the opera. There was a new prima donna, and Archer was anxious for her to hear the wonder. Margie had never looked lovelier. Her pink silk dress, with the corsage falling away from the shoulders, and the sleeves leaving the round arms bare, was peculiarly becoming, and the pearl necklace and bracelets—Archer's gift—were no whiter or purer than the throat and wrists they encircled.

WANT TO GET AWAY.

Not Enough Steamers to Accommodate the Stranded Gold Hunters.

TACOMA, Wash., July 2.—William Hutchinson has arrived from Cook Inlet, Alaska, where he spent two months. He came down on the steamer Norma, which left Kodiak June 16, with thirty-two passengers, all she could carry, though ninety wanted to come. Hutchinson says there are 1,700 people on Six Mile creek, and about as many on Resurrection creek. About 750 are making from $2 to $15 per day at placer mining, but the remainder are absolutely helpless, unable to find enough to keep them alive. As a rule, the gold consists of such light flakes that the breeze blows it away. Many prospectors would like to go to the Yukon country. That, however, is 200 miles away, and it is currently reported that the Copper river Indians, who live between, are on the war-path. Hutchinson thinks there will not be enough steamers to accommodate the people who want to leave Cook Inlet this summer. Prospectors are still pouring in there, the steamer Dora landing 125 from Sitka June 8.

GLASSWORKS SHUT DOWN.

Pennsylvania and New Jersey Glass Factories Temporarily Suspended.

MILLVILLE, July 2.—Scores of glass factories in southern New Jersey have shut down for the summer, throwing 5,000 men out of employment. The first part of the seasom was a failure, but since January all the fires have been in full blast. Trade has fallen off, to a certain extent, the result of foreign competition. Indications are that the men will ask for higher wages on resumption.

PITTSBURG, July 2.—All the union green glass bottle factories and some departments of the union flint glass factories have shut down for the annual sixty days' vacation. The suspension in the green glass branch is with the prefunctory consent of the manufacturers, but in the flint glass trade the manufacturers were as willing to stop as the workers. About 17,000 men and boys are affected by the suspension.

TREASURY STATEMENT.

The Deficit for the Fiscal Year Exceeds $25,000,000.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The treasury official statement shows that receipts from all sources for the fiscal year of 1896 approximate $326,500,0000 and the expenditures for the like period $252,000,000, making the deficit for the fiscal year $25,500,000. For 1895 the deficit was $42,000,000, and for 1894 $70,000,000, so that the deficit for the past three years aggregates $137,500,000. For the month of June the receipts were $25,500,000 and the expenditures $25,000,000, making an excess of receipts of $1,150,000. Because of the heavy interest payments in July, the payment of the sugar bounty claims which will be commenced this month and also because of appropriations made available by congress, it is estimated that the deficit for July will foot up nearly $10,000,000.

BLOODY WORK GOES ON.

A Non-Union Man Shoots and Kills an Assailant at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, July 4.—Bloodshed again marked the trouble at the Brown Hoisting works. One man was shot dead by a non-union man who had attempted to leave the works on his bicycle and was attacked by a portion of the mob. The police managed with great difficulty to rescue him, and the police detail was besieged in a shop, and had great difficulty in preventing the lynching of their prisoner. Finally a call for troops was made, and two of the four companies under arms were hurried to the scene. The prisoner was finally loaded into a patrol wagon and locked up in the central police station. The troops remain on guard.

MRS. STOWE DEAD.

Author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Passes Away at Hartford, Conn.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 2.—Harriet Beecher Stowe, well known as the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," who was stricken with congestion of the brain and paralysis on the 26th, died yesterday at noon. She had been unconscious for forty-eight hours.

8,000 MEN THROWN OUT.

All the Mills in Mahoning Valley Shut Down.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, July 2.—Every mill in the Mahoning valley has closed down pending the settlement of the rate per ton for smelting. The manufacturers offer $4, but the Amalgamated association wants $4.50. Over 8,000 men are made idle.

Five Men Hanged.

FORT SMITH, Ark., July 2.—Rufus Buck, Louie Davis, Lucky Davis, Naomi July and Sam Sampson, comprising what is known as the Buck gang, were hanged here, President Cleveland having refused to interfere with the sentence. The gang was convicted of murder and criminal assault.

NINETY MINERS BURIED.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 29.—Ninety miners are buried in the Red Ash vein of the Twin shaft at Pittston. Not one is expected to come alive out of the mine's mouth, around which 7,000 shrieking, weeping, praying men, women and children are gathered. The roof at the vein caved in while the men were putting in timbers to prevent a collapse, of which they had been warned. Not a single body, living or dead, has been recovered. Superintendent Lnthrop, of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, an authority on mine disasters, says the bodies cannot be recovered inside of ten days. Many of the buried miners were Poles and Huns. Their families speak no English and their names cannot be ascertained. For several days the men had been at work trying to prevent the cave-in. Several times there had been a bad fall of earth, but each time the men had resumed their labors. Suddenly the roof fell with a tremendous crash. The shock of the collapse was like a convulsion of nature. The earth trembled. In houses near the mine the inhabitants were tumbled from their beds. The dull roar in the earth's bowels was heard for miles around. The foundations of every building in Pittston were shaken. Doors and windows rattled and falling glass crackled as if the town were in a tornado's grip. Thousands rushed into the streets, fearing the roofs and walls would come toppling down. Shortly it dawned upon the people that the trouble was in the mines and then the work of rescue began.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 30.—It is now almost a settled fact that of the small army of men which was at work in the ill-fated Twin shaft at Pittston not one survived. Not only is every approach to their dark tomb barricaded by enormous masses of rock and debris, but it is known that in the mine there is a large quantity of water, which is increasing in volume every minute. Thus the chances of recovering their bodies are more remote than ever. Prominent officials say that weeks and months may be consumed in clearing away the fallen coal in order to reach the bodies of the victims.

Another Chicago Robbery.

CHICAGO, July 3.—Three robbers entered the Canal street depot of the Metropolitan Elevated railroad, situated in the heart of the city, and while one of them guarded the ticket agent with a revolver, the others carried off all the money. The robbery was committed while trains were passing through the depot every three minutes.

LITERARY NOTES.

Whoever cares to know how Rudyard Kipling composes one of his spirited barrack-room ballads, will be interested in the opening paper in McClure's magazine for July. Written by Mr. E. Kay Robinson, with whom Kipling was intimately associated in the editorship of a newspaper in India, the paper is full of interesting facts about Kipling.

The Ladies' Home Journal for July—an artistically attractive and interesting issue—opens with a sumptuously illustrated article on Joan of Arc and her home, by Ella Asband Hopkins, who entertainingly writes of the childhood and religious life of the maid. Apropos of the approaching centenary of Burns, Arthur Warren presents the "Other Side of Robert Burns," revealing the better side of the poet.

Those who appreciate the value of seasonable recreations will find a mine of wealth in Outings' charming summer number. The spice of pure sport flavors every page, yet the sport is every as it should be—clean, wholesome and beneficial.

The leading articles in the Atlantic Monthly for July are "The Real Problems of Democracy;" "A Century's Progress in Science;" "Arbitration and Our Relations With England," and "The United States and the Anglo-Saxon Future."

Marion Crawford will have a paper on "St. Peter's" in the July Century, with striking illustrations by Castaigne. This is one of four articles by Mr. Crawford devoted to Rome and its life. Mr. Crawford has already written one paper on Rome, one on Pope Leo and his household, and will follow the present article with one on the vatican.

Crane & Co., Topeka, Kansas, have recently issued the fifth edition of "Some of the Rhymes of Ironquill," Eugene Ware. The songs of this Kansas poet reach the heart as do those of James Whitcomb Riley and Eugene Field. They are full of everyday life, and seem to bring the reader near to the singer and to love the heart that can prompt such tender word paintings. The "Rhymes of Ironquill" will live long to cheer the heart of the toiler and the traveler in the humbler paths of life. The following "Adieu" shows the style of his work:

Oft the resonance of rhymes,
Future hearts and distant times
May impress;
Shall humanity to me,
Like my Kansas prairies, be Echoless?

ADDRESS,

H. J. KLEMME, Belmond, Iowa.

Country roads in China are never bounded by fences, but are entirely undefined. While the farmer has a right to plow up any road, drivers of vehicles have an equal right, and they exercise it, to traverse any part of the country at large.—Ex.

In an interview with a farmer yesterday we learned he was hauling oats eleven miles to town and selling them at 10c per bu. New oats could be contracted at only 7c. Upon our suggestion that he would find dairying more profitable, he said he was milking 20 cows and taking the milk to a cooperative separator creamery and getting 12c per pound for his butter, and that a cow could not be bought in his neighborhood for less than $30. With stock steers selling off grass at $3.50, cows at $30 and butter at 12c per pound, the farmer should not be slow to grasp the situation. Exclusive grain raising always, and in all states has been unprofitable, while cattle raising and dairying on the creamery system always bring sure and fair remuneration. The successful farmer of the future will convert everything produced upon his farm into meat and butter.—E. G. E.

A peculiar case has come to light in New Orleans. Charles Faber, 16 years of age, who has for some time been associated with some very bad boys, was in possession of a secret which his companions were afraid he might divulge. So they threatened him that if he did not promise never to tell they would bleed him to death. To add realism to their threat they placed him in a dark room and, scratching his leg so that he would think that they were opening a blood vessel, they left him as they said to bleed to death. The boy actually thought that was what had been done and he was so frightened that he died, although no bodily harm had been done to him.—Ex.

Natures greatest germicide, its action being rapid and effective. A few drops, or at most a few ounces, will permanently cure the most stubborn cases of Blood and Skin disorder. Cures Diphtheria in a few hours; Canker Sore Mouth in ten minutes; Catarrh, short course of treatment; Granulated Eyelids, four to six days; Sore Throat, one gargling; Rheumatism, short course of treatment; Erysipelas, two or three applications, and so on through the long list of Blood and Skin diseases—Eczema, Acne, Itch, Ringworm, Pimples, Salt Rheum Herpes, Hives, Tetter, Dandruff, Falling Hair, and all scalp diseases, Open Sores, Tumors, Ulcerated Conditions, Piles and Itching Piles. This is not a "cure-all" but a Guaranteed remedy for above diseases, which are caused by Parasite and impure condition of the blood. Full directions with each bottle.

Dr. H. F. Thompson, of Goodell, Iowa, says: "I applied Compound Liquid Sulphur in several cases of Diphtheria which were becoming formidable. One application entirely removed the membrane, and my patients were discharged on the following day. I consider Compound Liquid Sulphur superior to any other remedy for the successful treatment of diphtheria."

Mrs. S. G. Bunce, Belmond, Iowa, says: "I had suffered with Rheumatism in my right arm for three years and during that time tried almost every known remedy, but got no relief. Three applications of Compound Liquid Sulphur has entirely cured me

"WOMAN SACRIFICED" THE SUBJECT FOR LAST SUNDAY.

"To Bring Vashti, the Queen, Before the King with the Crown Royal; for She Was Fair to Look Upon"—Esther, 1—11.

WE stand amid the palaces of Shushan. The pinnacles are aflame with the morning light. The columns rise festooned and wreathed, the wealth of empires flashing from the groves; the ceilings adorned with images of birds and beasts, and scenes of prowess and conquest. The walls are hung with shields, and emblazoned until it seems that the whole round of splendors is exhausted. Each arch is a mighty leap of architectural achievement. Golden stars, shining down on glowing arabesque. Hangings of embroidered work in which mingles the blueness of the sky, the greenness of the grass, and the whiteness of the sea-foam. Tapestries hung on silver rings, wedding together the pillars of marble. Pavilions reaching out in every direction. These for repose, filled with luxuriant couches, into which weary limbs sink until all fatigue is submerged. These for carousal, where kings drink down a kingdom at one swallow. Amazing spectacle: Light of silver dropping down over stairs of ivory on shields of gold. Floors of stained marble, sunset red and night black, and inlaid with gleaming pearls. Why, it seems as if a heavenly vision of amethyst and jacinth and topaz and chrysoprasus had descended and lighted upon Shushan. It seems as if a billow of celestial glory had dashed clear over heaven's battlefields upon the metropolis of Persia. In connection with this palace there is a garden where the mighty men of foreign lands are seated at a banquet. Under the spread of oak and linden and acacia, the tables are arranged. The breath of honeysuckle and frankincense fills the air. Fountains leap up into the light, the spray struck through with rainbows falling in crystalline baptism upon flowering shrubs—then rolling down through channels of marble, and widening out here and there into pools swirling with the finny tribes of foreign aquariums, bordered with scarlet anemones, hypericums, and many colored ranunculus. Meats of rarest bird and beast smoking up amid wreaths of aromatics. The vases filled with apricots and almonds. The baskets filled up with apricots and dates and figs and oranges and pomegranates. Melons tastefully twined with leaves of acacia. The bright waters of Eulaeus filling the urns and sweating outside the rim in flashing beads amid the traceries. Wine from the royal vats of Ispahan and Shiraz, in bottles of tinged shell, and lily-shaped cups of silver, and flagons and tankards of solid gold. The music rises higher and the revelry breaks out into wilder transport, and the wine has flushed the cheek and touched the brain, and louder than all other voices are the hiccough of the inebriates, the gabble of fools, and the song of the drunkards.

In another part of the palace, Queen Vashti is entertaining the princesses of Persia at a banquet. Drunken Ahasuerus says to his servants: "You go out and fetch Vashti from that banquet with the women, and bring her to this banquet with the men, and let me display her beauty." The servants immediately start to obey the king's command; but there was a rule in Oriental society that no woman might appear in public without having her face veiled. Yet here was a mandate that no one dare dispute, demanding that Vashti come in unveiled before the multitude. However, there was in Vashti's soul a principle more regal than Ahasuerus, more brilliant than the gold of Shushan, of more wealth than the realm of Persia, which commanded her to disobey this order of the king; and so all the righteousness and holiness and modesty of her nature rises up into one sublime refusal. She says: "I will not go into the banquet unveiled;" Of course Ahasuerus was infuriate; and Vashti, robbed of her position and her estate, is driven forth in poverty and ruin to suffer the scorn of a nation, and yet to receive the applause of after generations who shall rise up to admire this martyr to kingly insolence. Well, the last vestige of that feast is gone; the last garland has faded; the last arch has fallen; the last tankard has been destroyed; and Shushan is a ruin; but as long as the world stands there will be multitudes of men and women, familiar with the Bible, who will come into this picture gallery of God, and admire the divine portrait of Vashti the queen, Vashti the veiled, Vashti, the sacrifice, Vashti, the silent.

In the first place I want you to look upon Vashti the queen. A blue ribbon, rayed with white, drawn around her forehead, indicated her queenly position. It was no small honor to be queen in such a realm as that. Hark to the rustle of her robes! See the blaze of her jewels! And yet, my friends, it is not necessary to have palace and regal robe in order to be queenly. When I see a woman with strong faith in God, putting her foot upon all meanness and selfishness and godless display, going right forward to serve Christ and the race by a grand and glorious service, I say: "That woman is a queen," and the ranks of heaven look over the battlements upon the coronation, and whether she come up from the shanty on the commons or the mansion of the fashionable square, I greet her with the shout: "All hail! Queen Vashti." What glory was there on the brow of Mary of Scotland, or Elizabeth of England, or Margaret of France, or Catherine of Russia, compared with the worth of some of our Christian mothers, many of them gone into glory?—or of that woman mentioned in the Scriptures, who put all her money in the Lord's treasury?—or of Jephthah's daughter, who made a demonstration of unselfish patriotism?—or of Abigail, who rescued the herds and flocks of her husband?—or of Ruth, who toiled under a tropical sun for poor, old, helpless Naomi!—or of Florence Nightingale, who went at midnight to stanch the battle-wounds of the Crimea?—or of Mrs. Adoniram Judson, who kindled the lights of salvation amid the darkness of Burmah?—or of Mrs. Hemans, who poured out her holy soul in words which will forever be assciated with hunter's horn, and captive's chain, and bridal hour, and lute's throb, and curfew's knell at the dying day?—and scores and hundreds of women, unknown on earth, who have given water to the thirsty and bread to the hungry and medicine to the sick and smiles to the discouraged—their footsteps heard along dark lane and in government hospital and in almshouse corridor and by prison gate? There may be no royal robe—there may be no palatial surroundings. She does not need them; for all charitable men will unite with the crackling lips of fever-struck hospital and plague-blotched lazaretto in greeting her as she passes: "Hail! Hail! Queen of Vashti."

Again: I want you to consider Vashti the veiled. Had she appeared before Ahasuerus and his court upon that day, with her face uncovered, she would have shocked all the delicacies of Oriental society, and the very men who in their intoxication demanded that she come, in their sober moments would have despised her. As some flowers seem to thrive best in the dark lane and in the shadow, and where the sun does not reach them, so God appoints to most womanly natures a retiring and unobtrusive spirit. God once in a while does call an Isabella to a throne, or a Miriam to strike the timbrel at the front of a host, or a Marie Antoinette to quell a French mob, or a Deborah to stand at the front of an armed battalion, crying out, "Up! Up! This is the day in which the Lord will deliver Sisera into thine hand." And when women are called to such outdoor work and to such heroic positions, God prepares them for it; and they have iron in their souls and lightning in their eye, and whirlwinds in their breath, and the borrowed strength of the Lord Omnipotent in their right arm. They walk through furnaces as though they were hedges of wild-flowers, and cross seas as though they were shimmering sapphire; and all the harpies of hell down to their dungeon at the stamp of her womanly indignation. But these are the exceptions. Generally, Dorcas would rather make a garment for the poor boy; Rebecca would rather fill the trough for the camels; Hannah would rather make a coat for Samuel; the Hebrew maid would rather give a prescription for Naaman's leprosy; the woman of Sarepta would rather gather a few sticks to cook a meal for famished Elijah; Phebe would rather carry a letter for the inspired apostle; mother Lois would rather educate Timothy in the Scriptures. When I see a woman going about her daily duty—with cheerful dignity presiding at the table, with kind and gentle, but firm discipline presiding in the nursery, going out into the world without any blast of trumpets, following in the footsteps of him who went about doing good—I say: "This is Vashti with a veil on." But when I see a woman of unblushing boldness, loud-voiced, with a tongue of infinite clitter-clatter, with arrogant look, passing through the streets with the step of a walking-beam, gayly arrayed in a very hurricane of millinery, I cry out: "Vashti has lost her veil!" When I see a woman of comely features, and of adroitness of intellect, and endowed with all that the schools can do for one, and of high social position, yet, moving in society with superciliousness and hauteur, as though she would have people know their place, and an undefined combination of giggle and strut and rhodomontade, endowed with allopathic quantities of talk, but only homeopathic infinitesimals of sense, the terror of dry-goods clerks and railroad conductors, discoverers of significant meaning in plain conversation, prodigies of badiage and innuendo—I say: "Look! look! Vashti has lost her veil!"

Again: I want you to consider Vashti the sacrifice. Who is this I see coming out of that palace gate of Shushan? It seems to me that I have seen her before. She comes homeless, houseless, friendless, trudging along with a broken heart. Who is she? It is Vashti the sacrifice. Oh, what a change from regal position to a wayfarer's crust. A little while ago, approved and sought for; now, none so poor as to acknowledge her acquaintanceship. Vashti the sacrifice! Ah! you and I have seen it many a time. Here is a home empalaced with beauty. All that refinement and books and wealth can do for that home has been done; but Ahasuerus, the husband and father, is taking hold on paths of sin. He is gradually going down. After awhile he will flounder and struggle like a wild beast in the hunter's net—further away from God, further away from the right. Soon the bright apparel of the children will turn to rags; soon the household song will become the sobbing of a broken heart. The old story over again. Brutal Centaurs breaking up the marriage feast of Lapithae. The house full of outrage and cruelty and abomination, while trudging forth from the palace gate are Vashti and her children. There are homes that are in danger of such a breaking up. Oh, Ahasuerus! that you should stand in a home, by a dissipated life destroying the peace and comfort of that home. God forbid that your children should ever have to wring their hands, and have people point their finger at them as they pass down the street and say, "There goes a drunkard's child." God forbid that the little feet should ever have to trudge the path of poverty and wretchedness! God forbid that any evil spirit born of the wine-cup or the brandy glass should come forth and uproot that garden, and with a lasting, blistering, all-consuming curse, shut forever the palace gate against Vashti and the children!

During the war I went to Hagerstown to look at the army, and I stood in the night on a hill-top and looked down upon them. I saw the camp-fires all through the valleys and all over the hills. It was a weird spectacle, those camp-fires, and I stood and watched them; and the soldiers who were gathered around them were, no doubt, talking of their homes and of the long march they had taken and of the battles they were to fight; but after awhile I saw those camp fires begin to lower; and they continued to lower until they were all gone out, and the army slept. It was imposing when I saw the camp-fires; it was imposing in the darkness when I thought of that great host asleep. Well, God looks down from heaven, and he sees the firesides of Christendom and the loves ones gathered around these firesides. These are the camp-fires where we warm ourselves at the close of the day, and talk over the battles of life we have fought and the battles that are yet to come. God grant that when at last these fires begin to go out and continue to lower until finally they are extinguished, and the ashes of consumed hopes strew the hearth of the old homestead, it may be because we have Gone to sleep that last long sleep,

From which none ever wake to weep.

O, woman! does not this story of Vashti the queen, Vashti the veiled, Vashti the sacrifice, Vashti the silent, move your soul? My sermon converges into the one absorbing hope that none of you may be shut out of the palace gate of heaven. You can endure the hardships and the privations and the cruelties and the misfortunes of this life, if you can only gain admission there. Through the blood of the everlasting covenant, you go through these gates or never go at all. God forbid that you should at last be banished from the society of angels, and banished from the companionship of your glorified kindred, and banished forever. Through the rich grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, may you be enabled to imitate the example of Rachel and Hannah and Abigail and Deborah and Mary and Esther and Vashti. Amen.

Reading His Own Shame.

Brewer Jones, of New Hampshire, has a scrap book, ten inches thick, of clippings from prohibition papers, which he says is to show his grandchildren the crankiness of the present generation. "We have no doubt," says the Midland, "that his grandchildren will be more ashamed of their grandfather's business than amused at the folly of prohibitionists. Not many children to-day are boasting of their father selling slaves before the war. The time is coming when it will be considered as great a disgrace to have kept a saloon or brewery, as to have conducted an auction block for the sale of human beings."

Optimism.

Divorce.

In this country divorce is wickedly common. In Connecticut and Dakota the giving or withholding of divorce is practically in the hands of the judges. There is great need for a universal law of divorce applicable to all states.—Rev. G. C. Jones, Methodist, Pittsburg, Pa.

A MIGHTY DRINK.

Over Three Quarts at One Draught—Saved the Town.

But of all the attractive features of this charming spot, Rothenburg, the annual Festspiel, celebrating the capture of the town by Tilly during the thirty years' war, ranks first, says the Chambers' Journal. At that time, and indeed until 1803, Rohenburg was a free city, taking an active part in the peasants' war of 1525, and in the thirty years' war of the following century. It was in the course of the latter, in 1631, that the celebrated Tilly appeared before Rothenburg and demanded its capitulation. This the citizens refused, with the result that the gallant little town was besieged and taken. Tilly and his generals proceeded to the Rathaus and demanded the municipal keys of the burgomaster. At the same time Tilly imposed a fine of 30,000 thalers and garrisoned the town with his soldiers. The burgomaster pleaded in vain for some mitigation of the penalty—until the victorious general, after remaining for some time unmoved by his entreaties, conceived the extraordinary notion of offering to restore the freedom of the town on condition that one of the inhabitants should come forward and empty at one draught an immense beaker of wine, containing about three and a half liters (over three quarts). This was an unheard-of feat, even in those hard-drinking days, and for some time his offer remained unaccepted. The opportunity of freeing the town from a foreign yoke seemed, however, too important to be lost, and accordingly a patriotic citizen named Nusch resolved to attempt the difficult task imposed by the conqueror. As a matter of fact, he drained the beaker at one draught, and, although tradition relates that a severe illness followed the feat, still he saved the town, for Tilly kept his word and restored the independence of Rothenburg.

Prison Malingering.

A case showing great cunning and perseverance, as well as tolerance of much self-inflicted pain continued for many months, is worth telling. The convict was most determined and resourceful in his efforts at malingering. He began by running a piece of copper wire into his knee, by which he nearly lost his leg. He then produced a number of sores round the knee joint and kept up a great degree of swelling and inflammation by means of rag and thread pushed into the wounds. Upon the discovery of this he took to introducing lime below the skin. On another occasion a bandage was found firmly bound round the man's thigh, the result being, in medical phraseology, 'extensive swelling and lividity of the thigh." The doctor ordered his limb to be enveloped with a large piece of gutta-percha so as to checkmate the prisoner's malpractices. The latter, however, by means of a strip of sheeting and the skewer to which part of his dinner was attached formed a tourniquet and by it compressed his leg so much during the night as to quite neutralize the medical treatment it had received during the day. The imposture was at length detected by an order of the doctor to expose the limb outside the bedclothes to the view of the officer by day and night and from that hour progress was toward complete recovery.—Chambers' Journal.

Dan's Pay Day.

It having been the custom of a certain establishment in the north to pay the workers fortnightly, and the workmen having found the custom somewhat inconvenient, it was decided to send a delegate to the head of the firm to state their grievances. An Irishman, named Dan D——, famed for his sagacity and persuasive powers, was selected for the task. He duly waited on the master, who addressed him thus:

"Well, Daniel, what can we do for you this morning?"

"If ye plaze, sur, I've been sint as a diligate by the workers to ask a favor of ye regardin' the payment of our wages."

"Yes; and what do they desire?" queried the master.

"Well, sur, it is the desire of mesilf, and it is also the desire of ivery man in the establishment, that we receive our fortnight's pay every week."

Sued for a Gold-Capped Toe-Nail.

Dentist W. J. Leeds, of New York, is suing Mlle. Selma, a music hall singer, to recover $5 for fitting a gold cap on the big toe nail of her right foot. The girl had suffered with an ingrowing nail, and asked Leeds to cap it with gold, as he would cap a tooth. He did so, and charged $5 for the job. Her foot was not cured, she says, so she refused to pay the bill.

To do Away With Dams.

William J. Benning of Boone, Ia., has patented a contrivance by which he says the current of streams can be utilized without damming. He uses a series of undershot wheels and develops the full force of the stream, which power he can turn into electrical power.

SCIENTIFIC CORNER.

RECENT DOINGS IN FIELDS OF SCIENCE.

A Bomb for Use of Bicyclists When Troubled by Dogs — Newest Sailing Vessel—A Wonderful Kite—Industrial Notes.

DOGS have troubled bicycle riders to such an extent that an inventive genius in Germany felt that the time had come for a remedy. So he devised one which, while it may prove exceedingly effective in remote country districts, is calculated to more than realize the expectations of the inventor if used in busy thoroughfares.

The invention is a bomb, which explodes with deafening report when hurled at an annoying cur. The bomb is small, but very effective, and is said to accomplish the desired result in a manner perfectly satisfactory to all concerned except the dog.

The riders carry a few bombs in their pockets, but that the practice is not altogether safe is indicated by an occurrence in the postoffice at Berlin. The inventor, anxious that the members of the royal family should know the advantages of his dog annihilator, addressed a package of the bombs to the Empress Frederick. While the postoffice officials were handling it the bombs exploded with such a terrific report that the officials fled under the impression that the explosion was the result of a plot of the anarchists to destroy them.

A Wonderful Kite.

A curious and interesting kite, unlike anything that was ever before sailed in the upper air, was flown for the first time the other day by its inventor, official forecaster W. H. Hammon of San Francisco. To look at this queer thing you would never suspect that it was a kite, and yet it is one of the finest air-boats ever made. Mr. Hammon knows more about kites than most men; he has made a study of them for years, not for the fun of the thing, however, but to find out more about the air currents than is now known by men of science.

Ever since the time of good old Ben Franklin, kites have played an important part in settling disputes about that strange invisible world of air far over our heads. Today the kite has helped scientific folks discover the new facts about the atmosphere which, without these toys of sticks and paper would never have been found out. The Weather Bureau at Washington contains a cabinet of strange kites that would make any boy cry with envy.

The odd-looking kite shown in the illustrations printed here is one of a number of up-to-date affairs of the kind which, for many reasons, are interesting. The chief points of advantage in the new kites are their usefulness in carrying light weights—instruments, cameras and such things—miles above the earth and their steadiness when once in the air. A real scientific kite must not dive about; it must float in the air as easily as a chip floats on the water. No scientific kite has a tail—that is considered an unnecessary weight. Two years ago nobody knew a better kite than the one called a Malay, but now Mr. Hammon's air sailer is believed to be the best kite ever constructed.

The new kite looks like a number of boxes placed together with wings attached to their sides. There's a stick along every edge, and one of these sticks extends far out of the middle of the kite, and to one end of this the string is fastened. This long stick acts as a sort of lever by which the kite is kept steady. Every time the wind veers this wonderful kite changes its shape in very much the same way that the sail of a yacht is blown out when running before the breeze and tacking. When the wind is very strong the Hammon kite becomes almost oval in shape. Just how curiously made the kite is, and just how big it looks when held in the arms of a man you can see by the pictures, which are reproduced from the San Francisco Call. The cost of the Hammon kites makes them very valuable. The inventor has lost many of his pet air-boats, however, but each new one that he makes is an improvement on the one before. Mr. Hammon is now hard at work on a new kite which he thinks will beat everything of its kind ever sailed in the air, and which will be sent up with a complete set of instruments used in finding out the force of the wind, the state of the atmosphere and such things as are of interest to students of the weather.

The Newest Sailing Vessel.

Very few patents are taken out on the rig of sailing vessels for the reason that most of the improvements have been thought out. Sailors are likewise very conservative and opposed to new-fangled devices.

Here, however, is a newly-devised vessel, with radical and novel improvements both above and below the water line. The various devices have been patented by Mr. William King of New Orleans. Under his plan the stability of the vessel is increased by providing it with a telescopic centerboard, which consists of a main centerboard within which is a double centerboard, an amidship centerboard carried by the double centerboard, a port and starboard centerboard respectively carried on each side of the double centerboard, and within the main centerboard.

The spar plan and sail plan are also formed so that they may be enlarged or decreased at pleasure. This is accomplished by providing the spinnaker booms, and the gaffs of the mainsail and of the spinnakers with auxiliary spars, sliding within suitable rings or sockets which are fixed near the ends of said gaffs and booms.

These spars are adjusted by means of halyards and blocks, and can be reefed home or run out as desired, and a larger or smaller amount of canvas carried. Two spinnakers are used, and the booms are pivotally mounted on suitable steps which are placed one on each bow of the vessel.

The spinnakers are not hoisted to the topmast, as is usually done, but are provided with extensible gaffs, the heels of the gaffs being pivotally connected with a band, which is clamped upon the mast. This connection has a universal pivotal movement.

The spinnaker booms are sheeted forward to the bowsprit end and aft to the outrigger, and when they are not in use they rest in crutches at the end of the bowsprit.—Ex.

Industrial Notes.

At a factory in Taunton, Mass., there is manufactured what is said to be the finest wire in the country, a cobweb of one-five-hundredth part of an inch in thickness, finer than a human hair. In making it ordinary wire is drawn through holes drilled in diamonds, as ordinary steel plate would not answer.

Five hundred tons of light steel rails were recently sent from a Milwaukee steel works to Japan by way of Buffalo and New York. British experts say their pull with Japan is lessening.

Crude rubber is one material that has not suffered from the world-wide fall in prices. So much of it is used in bicycle tires that the price ranged higher in '96 than for some time.

Southern newspapers are advocating the establishment of bicycle factories in the South. Although as many wheels in proportion are used South as North, it is said that only one of the more than 200 bicycle factories in the country is in any Southern State.

Corea is a shut-in nation no longer. A Yankee trader named Morse has obtained from the Corean government a concession for a railroad between Seoul and Chemulpo, its seaport.

In former days a very large part of the world's sulphur supply came from Sicily. The industry is now in a very bad way, and it is proposed by the Italian government that the export duty of 20 per cent be stopped, though it is hard for Italy, in her present bankrupt condition, to give up revenue.

One of the grievances of the Uitlanders in the Transvaal is the monopoly granted by the Government to the manufacturers of dynamite. It is said that the price is 150 per cent higher than it would be under free competition, and that the difference to the three leading mining companies is about $170,00 a year.

Prof. Brouardel of the Paris Municipal Laboratory has made a report to the Academy of Sciences on the use of the Roentgen photographic process in investigating bombs and infernal machines. It is no longer necessary to run any risks in discovering what these trick boxes may contain.

Consul-General Judd, from Berlin, sends a report regarding the recent cloakmakers' strike, in which he quotes Herr Timm as stating that a woman of twenty years' experience in the cloakmaking business earned in 1893, in forty-three weeks, $100.28, and the next year, in forty-nine weeks, $129.

The man who is charitable to himself will listen to the mute appeal for assistance made by his stomach, or his liver, in the shape of divers dyspeptic qualms and uneasy sensations in the regions of the glands that secrete his bile. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, my dear sir, or madam—as the case may be—is what you require. WE have satisfied ourselves that McCormick Machines are the lightest draft, most durable and most reliable grain and grass cutters built by any manufacturer. We believe they are the cheapest machines a farmer can own—if experience has proven anything, it has proven this. We believe a careful examination of them will convince any man that they are planned with a mechanical nicety and put together with a degree of care far ahead of that shown in any other make of harvesting machinery. We want all interested parties to come and see them. Guaranteed to work where others fail.

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

The bloomer fad has almost entirely given away to skirts, and fewer men are driven to drink.

General Weyler has been good to General Campos. He has fully vindicated him by contrast.

Where is the women's candidate for president? Isn't Belva Lockwood still available? And what is the matter with Anna Shaw or Mary Lease or Susie Anthony?

General Weyler has heralded another great victory. "The Spanish troops on Saturday captured three rebel camps." The "rebels" were all gone when the capture was made.

The exclusion of men from jury duty because they have read reports of cases in newspapers is preposterous. It has resulted in making the intelligence of the average juror a byword. It is an unwarranted assumption that reporters do not tell the truth. As a matter of fact, they have no reason for not telling the entire and exact truth as far as it can be ascertained by human power.

Imagine the surprise of Mr. H. P. Wood of Youngstown, O., when he entered his stable the other morning and discovered that somebody had painted his horse green. He said nothing, and the night after he had removed the green paint somebody whitewashed the nag. This was more than he could stand, and now during their moments of anguish the four young painters and whitewashers are calcimining the inside walls of the county jail.

Nothing ever excites and interests New York so much as a red hot criminal trial. The "cause celebre" of Mrs. Fleming has provided this morbid metropolitan public with a "bonne bouche" in this direction which has seldom been equaled in the criminal records of the great city, and it has been thoroughly appreciated by those degenerates of all clasess of society who delight in all forms of crime, especially when the criminal be a woman.

There are about 7,000,000 of Jews in the world, about one-half of whom live in Russia. It is not certain that the numbers of the race have increased since the time of Christ. There is no reason to believe that there are more Jews now in England, France, Germany and Spain than there were in the days of the persecution. There were, in 1890, 130,000 Jews in the United States. It is impossible on public credulity to predict that they will dominate 70,000,000 of Christians.

If it is true that Mrs. Drayton is actually responsible for the sale of "Astor relics" now in progress in New York, this is only one more indication of the bad form of which the New York aristocracy are capable. It is disgusting and disgraceful that the members of great families cannot behave more decently with regard to their private affairs. Among other things included in the inventory are the toys used by the grandchildren of Mrs. William Astor when very little; in other words, the present Astors, Draytons and Livingstons, and a number of similar articles.

The Siberian railway is being gradually extended and brought into use. From Tscheljabinsk a distance of about 1,280 miles is now being used for traffic, and the favorable effect of the railway upon industry and commerce is already perceptible. The towns along the line increase in size and number of inhabitants, and the imports already comprise articles which were previously unknown. In the principal streets of Tomsk electric light has been, or is just about to be, adopted, and the journey from Moscow to Tomsk can now be compassed in eight days.

The Germans are pushing their commercial enterprises into all parts of the world, much to the annoyance of British investors, who up to this time, have seemed to have a monopoly of the trade and enterprise of the world. Not only is German money being invested in enterprises in South America, but the German companies are obtaining valuable concessions in Asia, especially Persia. One German has obtained a concession of seventy-five years for the construction of a railway between Teheran and Bagdad. The same interests have secured for ninety years the right to establish electric or steam railways between Teheran and villages north of it. The rapid progress of the Germans in Persia is further indicated by the establishment of a steamboat service between Bremen and Bushire, on the Persian gulf. A German bank has also been established at Bushire.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

A MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

The Victim a Beautiful Girl Whose Home Was at Bellevue.

DUBUQUE, July 8.—Bellevue, thirty-two miles below Dubuque, has a murder mystery. The victim is Minnie Keil, eighteen years old, the beautiful daughter of a widow living on a farm four miles below the town. She left home alone to go to Joseph Ginter's farm, two miles away, and thence, with the younger members of the Ginter family, to a dancing party at Peter Huff's house, two miles beyond. She did not appear, and search was made for her. Her body was found lying in a meadow with the market basket she carried, its contents undisturbed, resting five feet away. Her face was badly mutilated and a report that she had been gored by a bull reached town, but it soon transpired that this was impossible, as the meadow contained only yearlings and no footprints of cattle appeared near by. On the contrary, there was present the evidence that the girl had had a terrible struggle with the murderer. The grass for ten feet in one direction was beaten down. Her skull was fractured in several places and the edges of a bloody stone found by her side fitted into the wounds on her forehead and scalp. Lying by her were the broken pieces of the limb of a tree which had been used as a weapon. These pieces bore blood and the hairs of a man and woman, leading the coroner's jury to the theory that Minnie, a powerful girl, had struck the murderer over the head with this weapon and that he had snatched it away from her and broke it over her head. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder by some person unknown.

DUBUQUE, July 9.—Two young men, Chris Eckertebe and Kilborg, son of the man who owns the pasture where the dead body of Minnie Keil was found, were arrested on the charge of murdering the girl. It is proved that Eckertebe was not in Bellevue, as he claims he was, at the time of the murder. It is said the evidence against them is strong.

DUBUQUE, July 11.—The examination of Christian Eckerlebe, charged with the murder of Minnie Keil, was continued in Justice Campbell's court. By request of Eckerlebe's attorney, the examination was continued to July 16. Defendant was refused bail and he was conveyed to the Jackson county jail at Andrew. Spots on his coat sleeve and shirt, supposed to be blood, will be examined by Dubuque chemists. Nobody had been found who saw Eckerlebe on the fatal day from 6 a. m. till after 4 p. m., two hours before the murder. Eckerlebe was one of the party which started out to search for the missing girl, and he piloted the party to the place where she was found.

MINNIE MURRAY OF NASHUA.

Iowa Girl Carries a Boies Banner Through the Convention Hall.

CHICAGO, July 10.—A girl in white, waving "Old Glory" in the southern gallery at the conclusion of the Boies nominating speeches last night, earned an ovation, in which even the delegates participated. A man with a Boies banner stood in the aisle beside her. Acting under the inspiration of the moment, she sprang to his side and, seizing the banner, marched down the aisle into the delegates' pit amid the wildest enthusiasm. Police interference was resented by enthusiastic Iowans and other delegates who admired her pluck and sincere advocacy of the Waterloo candidate. It was fully fifteen minutes before order was restored. The girl was Miss Minnie Murray, a 19-year-old brunette, who hails from Nashua, Iowa, and who is the editor of the Reporter of that place. She was the heroine of the hour.

MISSING BOY FOUND.

Missouri Authorities May Be Sued For Holding the Boy.

ALBIA, July 10.—C. C. Atchison has returned with his son Maurice, who has been missing since May 4. He received this telegram from the authorities in Richmond, Mo.: "Your son is here. Come and get him." For several weeks past Mr. Atchison has been sending cards describing the boy with photos inclosed to officers in all parts of the United States, and liberal rewards were offered. He has been imprisoned in jail in Richmond for ten weeks for carrying a revolver. Under the laws of Missouri, as he was traveling overland, this was no violation of the law, hence a damage suit may ensue.

An Albia Jail Delivery.

ALBIA, July 10.—Three men, named Pierce, Lane and Cavenaugh, confined in jail here for burglary in Marion county, worked their way through the north wall with a brace and bit, and are now at large.

A SERIOUS STABBING AFFRAY.

BRISTOW, July 12.—A desperate hand-to-hand conflict occurred between two hired men on the farm of Burnett Neal, two and a half miles east of Bristow. One of the men is terribly cut up, and his assailant is in custody, and will have his preliminary trial as soon as his victim is able to appear in court, if that time ever comes. The two men, whose names are Fred Wheeler and Cicero Walden, became involved in a quarrel over the right to use a certain pitchfork. They came to blows, and during the fight that followed Wheeler knocked Walden down and threw him out of the barn, where the men were working. Shortly after, Walden returned to renew the attack, this time carrying an open knife. He made two vicious lunges at Wheeler, both times cutting through the clothing and just grazing the flesh over the heart. Wheeler, being unarmed, ran for the house, followed by the now furious Walden, who kept lunging at his victim. He succeeded in cutting a gash about eight inches long, just below the shoulder blade, which fortunately did not enter very deeply into the flesh. When Wheeler succeeded in getting out of reach of the knife, Walden picked up a rock and struck the fleeing man a terrific blow in the right temple, cutting a terrible gash and it was feared fractured the skull. Wheeler bled profusely, but by the use of cobwebs was enabled to check the flow of blood until a doctor could be summoned, who sewed up the wounds. Walden gave himself up to the authorities.

TWENTY SEVEN DEAD.

Awful Railroad Wreck Occurs Near Council Bluffs.

Logan, July 13.—A terrible head-end collision occurred here on the Chicago & Northwestern. The Union Pacific Pioneer excursion train, on which were 1,200 persons who had been picnicking near Logan, had just pulled out to return to Omaha, when No. 58, fast freight, came around a sharp curve and before either train could stop, they crashed together. Twenty-seven people were killed outright and forty more were seriously injured. The wreck occurred as a result of Engineer Montgomery, of the excursion train, mistaking orders. He was ordered to wait at Logan until a fast freight and the east bound passenger train had passed. He waited for the passenger train and then started out, having forgotten about the freight. The trains were going fifty miles an hour when they met three miles west of Logan. Engineer Montgomery jumped and escaped with a broken arm.

TO TEST THE CIGARETTE LAW.

Cedar Rapids Dealer Arrested and Fined —Will Be Appealed.

CEDAR RAPIDS, July 12.—Donald C. McGregor, a leading tobacconist, was arrested on two charges of selling cigarettes. He was arraigned before Justice Rall and fined $25 on each charge. These are the first cases commenced in the state under the anti-cigarette law, which went into effect July 4. W. W. Fuller, general counsel for the American Tobacco Company, is in Cedar Rapids. It is understood that these cases will be settled, and that action will be brought in the United States court to test the constitutionality of the law.

MURDER AT BOONE.

Aged Husband Shoots His Wife's Paramour.

BOONE, July 11.—Caleb Townsend, an old soldier, fatally shot Charles Nelson, a young Swedish clerk, at the home of the former, at midnight. Nelson will die. The men had trouble over Townsend's wife, who is a young woman of bad reputation. She married Townsend, who is 70 years old, but a few months ago.

Blythe Withdraws.

MASON CITY, July 11.—James E. Blythe has written a letter withdrawing from the race for the congressonal nomination on the republican ticket, and Updegraff is now soon to be renominated.

Col. Henderson Renominated.

WATERLOO, July 10.—Col. D. B. Henderson was renominated for congress from the Third congressional district by the republican convention here He had no opposition.

BREVITIES.

The law prohibiting the sale of beer by druggists went into effect on the 4th.

Fire at Dyersville destroyed Schemmel's flouring mill, the jail and several warehouses. Loss, $10,000 to $15,000; covered by insurance.

The Iowa College of Law, at Des Moines, seems to be growing faster than any other law school, and is to have a new building this year. Neat catalogues have been prepared by the secretary, Prof. P. S. McNutt.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

CUBA.

LONDON, July 8.—The broad statesmanship and sagacity of General Martinez Campos were never more forcibly illustrated than in his speech in the Spanish senate defending his policy in Cuba and appealing for peace. If his advice were followed, there would be a quick end of disorders in the island and of friction with the United States. Campos spoke with caution, yet with boldness. He did not directly attack the policy of the Canovas cabinet. But he did say that during the period of his recent captain generalship he had repeatedly urged the government to carry out home rule reforms. "If I did not carry them out myself," he declared, "it was because the government never instructed me to do so." The peroration of the speech was a lofty and pathetic appeal to the cabinet and the nation to make whatever concessions were necessary to bring about peace. "Let us end a war," he exclaimed, in tones of warning and indignation, "which costs 20,000 lives and $100,000,000 annually." It was the speech of a patriot and of Spain's most far-seeing statesman, as well as ablest and most humane soldier. But it did not fall with a pleasant sound upon the ears of ministerialists or military politicians of any school. They were better satisfied with the energetic retort of Canovas, who reiterated, amid the applause of the chamber and the galleries, that, while a complete scheme of reforms was ready, not a single concession would be made until the insurrection had been quelled. "We have no peace offering for rebels," was the text of the premier, and the extraordinary credits for the Cuban war were voted without further debate. In the lobby, afterward, Campos stated that to end the war, as the cabinet proposed, would require the military occupation of the island. This, in his opinion, would mean 400,000 men in the next five years and $1,000,000,000.

HAVANA, July 11.—Merchants of Pinar del Rio, arrived here, say that Antonio Maceo, the famous insurgent leader, died of wounds received in the last engagement with the Spanish troops.

CHALLENGED TO A DUEL.

An American Newspaper Man in Cuba to Fight a Retired Spanish Officer.

HAVANA, July 9.—Bradley Johnson, a newspaper correspondent here, has been challanged to fight a duel by a retired Spanish military officer who was offended by remarks in General Johnson's published correspondence about the Spanish army. The challenger finds himself in a somewhat rediculous position as the officers in active service refuse to recognize him as their champion. General Johnson, who is an ex-officer of the confederate army, has seen much of war, and is in no wise troubled over the vaporings of the self-constructed champion of the honor of Spanish officers. He says if his statements are such as to render necessary a meeting on the field of honor he is perfectly willing to fight when the proper person to meet him is decided upon. News is received that unknown parties have burned the Santa Barbara estate near Baro, province of Matanzas. The estate is owned by Senor Manuel Coronado, editor of La Discussion. The damage is estimated at $300,000.

GOLD DEMOCRATS.

Movement for the Calling of Another Convention.

CHICAGO, July 11.—At a meeting of the state executive committee of the honest money democracy, of Illinois, a resolution was adopted in favor of the calling of a national convention for the democratic party of the United States for the purpose of nominating democratic candidates for the office of president and vice-president upon a democratic platform.

Peru Saves $10,000,000.

NEW YORK, July 12.—The Herald's Buenos Ayres special says: From a trustworthy source it is learned that the solution of the ownership of the disputed provinces of Tacna and Arica, formerly Peruvian territory, has been proposed and probably will be ratified by the governments of Chili and Peru. The provinces are to be surrendered to Peru under certain restrictions as to boundary lines hereafter defined. This means that Chili will cede part of the Pacific to Peru. This will satisfy Bolivia for the division of the of the provinces to which she might have had claim. Peru is to be absolved from the payment of $10,000,000 imposed upon her by the treaty of Anoon.

Frank Hurd Dead.

TOLEDO, Ohio, July 11.—Hon. Frank H. Hurd, ex-congressman, lawyer and one of the most prominent free traders and democrats in Ohio, died in his apartment in the Boody house here, after an illness of five days. The immediate cause of his death was apoplexy.

WORST IN YEARS.

VICTORIA, B. C., July 10.—Additional details of the Japanese wave of last month have been received by the steamer Braemer from Yokohama. The advices are to June 22, and show that the disaster was probably the most fearful of modern times. The death list has been greatly augmented since last advices and will probably go far beyond fifty thousand. Distress among the survivors of the terrible visitation is appalling. Thousands of injured are dying from lack of medical assistance and many are upon the verge of starvation. The wave originated not far from the Japanese coast and appears to have visited an extent of over 300 miles of the coast line. Even in Hokaido it wrought destruction. The most southerly limit of its ravages appears to have been just a little north of the famous archipelago of Matsushima. Had the wave impinged upon the coast south of Kinkasas, it would have worked ruin among the towns and villages of this region, but it missed the promontory and began its devastation with the villages of Unagawa and Okachi, situated across the neck of the peninsula. Fourteen thousand, seven hundred and ninety people were killed in Miyas Gi prefecture and in the Iwate prefecture 22,186 perished, and 1,244 were injured, making a total forthe two prefectures of 37,156 killed and 1,244 injured. A dispatch from Morika says that over 60,000 people were either killed or injured by the wave. In Keseu, in the district of Iwate, one town and eleven villages were destroyed and 6,000 people perished. In Minami Hei district three towns and eight villages were overwhelmed, 5,627 persons being drowned and 332 injured. A full investigation will probably double these figures.

A CRISIS IN ITALY.

Cabinet Resigns on Defeat of the Army Bill.

ROME, July 12.—The cabinet, which was formed by the Marquis di Rudini, just four months ago, has resigned. The cabinet rejected a proposal submitted by General Ricotti, minister of war, for a reduction of the numerical strength of the army, whereupon General Ricotti, minister of war, at once offered his resignation. In view of the action of General Ricotti, Premier Rudini, and the other members of the ministry, placed their resignations in the hands of King Humbert, who has charged the Marquis di Rudini with the formation of a new ministry.

SILVERITES WILL ENDORSE.

Leaders of the White Metal Declare There Will Be Fusion.

CHICAGO, July 12.—The leaders of the national party and populist party who are in Chicago declare unanimously that their organization will endorse Bryan at the convention in St. Louis on July 22. Many of the prominent men of these parties have been in Chicago during the convention, watching the proceedings, and, in an unofficial way, working for silver.

The Cuban Situation.

New York, July 12.—Palma, head of the Cuban Revolutionary party, has a letter from Gomez, dated Camaguey. After reveiwing the development of the rebellion from the beginning, the letter says: "Nothing is left the Spaniards in Cuba, not even the ground where they stand. Their prestige is lost even in Havana. Our army enjoys splendid health. Their cartridge boxes are full of ammunition. We have received lately three valuable expeditions, and as the Spanish generals retire to Spain, ours land here."

Bold Robbery in Chicago.

Alexandrine stood a moment in the door, looking at the lovely picture presented by her young hostess. A pang, vague and unacknowledged, wrung her heart, and showed itself on her countenance. But she came forward with expressions of admiration.

"You are perfect, Margie—absolutely perfect! Poor gentlemen! how I pity them to-night! How their wretched hearts will ache!"

Margie laughed.

"Nonsense, Alex, don't be absurd? Go and dress yourself. I am going to the opera, and you must accompany us."

"Us—who may that plural pronoun embody?"

"Myself—and Mr. Trevlyn."

"Ah! thank you. Mr. Trevlyn may not care for an addition to his nice little arrangement for a tete-a-tete."

"Don't be vexed, Alexandrine. We thought you would pass the evening at your friend's, and Archer only came in to tell me a few hours ago."

"Of course I am not vexed, dear," and the girl kissed Margie's glowing cheek. "Lovers will be lovers the world over. Silly things, always, and never interesting company for other people. How long before Mr. Trevlyn is coming for you?"

Margie consulted her watch.

"At eight. It is now seven. In an hour."

"In an hour! An hour's time! Long enough to change the destiny of empires!"

"How strangely you talk, Alexandrine! What spirit possesses you?" asked Margie, filled, in spite of herself, with a curious premonition of evil.

Alexandrine sat down by the side of her friend, and looked searchingly into her face, her great black eyes holding Margie with a sort of serpent-like fascination.

"Margaret, you love this Archer Trevlyn very dearly, do you not?"

Margie blushed crimson, but she answered, proudly:

"Why need I be ashamed to confess it? I do. I love him with my whole soul."

"And you do not think there is in you any possibility of a change?"

"A change! What do you mean. Explain yourself."

"You do not think the time will ever come when you will cease to love Mr. Archer Trevlyn?"

"It will never come!" Margie replied, indignantly, "never, while I have my reason!"

"Do you believe in love's immortality?"

"I believe that all true love is changeless as eternity! I am not a child, Alexandrine, to be blown about by every passing breeze."

"No, you are a woman now, with a woman's capability of suffering. You ought, also, to be possessed of woman's resolution of a woman's strength to endure sorrow and affliction."

"I have never had any great affliction, Alexandrine. The death of Mr. Linmere was horrible to me, but it was not as if I had loved him; and though I loved Mr. Trevlyn, my guardian, he died so peacefully, that I cannot wish him back. And my dear parents—I was so young then, and they were so willing to go! No, I do not think I have ever had any great sorrow, such as blast people's whole lifetimes."

"But you think you will always continue to love Archer Trevlyn?"

"How strangely you harp on that string! What do you mean? There is something behind all this; I see it in your face. You frighten me!"

"Margie, all people are blind sometimes, but more especially women, when they love. Would it be a mercy to open the eyes of one who, in happy ignorance, was walking over a precipice which the flowers hid from her view?"

"I do not comprehend you. Why do you keep me in suspense?"

"Because I dread to break the charm. You will hate me for it always, Margie. We never love those who tell us disagreeable truths, even though it be for our good."

"I do not know what you would tell me, Alexandrine, but I do not think I shall hate you for it."

"Not if I tell you evil of Archer Trevlyn?"

"I will not listen to it!" she cried, indignantly.

"I expected as much. Well, Margie, you shall not. I will hold my peace; but if ever, in the years to come, the terrible secret should be revealed to you—the secret which would then destroy your happiness for all time—remember that I would have saved you, and you refused to listen!"

Margie caught her arm.

"What is it? You shall tell me! Suspense is worse than certainty."

"And if I tell you, you will keep silent? Silent as the grave itself?"

"Yes, if you wish it."

"Will you swear it?"

"I cannot; but I will keep it just as sacredly."

"I want not only your promise, but your oath. You would not break an oath. And this which I am about to tell you, if known to the world, involves Archer Trevlyn's life! and you refuse to take an oath."

"His life! Yes, I will swear. I would do anything to make his life safer."

"Very well. You understand me fully? You are never to reveal anything I tell you to-night, unless I give you leave. You swear it?"

"I swear it."

"Listen, then. You remember the night Mr. Linmere was murdered?"

Margie grew pale as death, and clasped her hands convulsively.

"Yes, I remember it."

"You desired us, after we had finished dressing you, to leave you alone. We did so, and you locked the door behind us, stepped from the window, and went to the grave of your parents."

"I did."

"You remained there some little time, and when you turned away, you stopped to look back, and in doing so you laid your hand—this one—"she touched Margie's slender left hand, on which shone Archer Trevlyn's betrothal ring—"on the gate post. Do you remember it?"

"Yes, I remember it."

"And while it rested there—while your eyes were turned away, that hand was touched—by something soft, and warm, and sentient—too warm, too passionate, to be the kiss of a disembodied soul. Living human lips, that scorched into your flesh, and thrilled you as nothing else ever had the power to thrill you!"

Margie trembled convulsively, her color came and went, and she clasped and unclasped her hands with nervous agitation.

"Am I not speaking the truth?"

"Yes, yes—go on. I am listening."

"Was there, in all the world, at that time, more than one person whose kiss had the power to thrill you as that kiss thrilled you? Answer me, Margie Harrison!"

"I will not! You have no right to ask me!" she replied, passionately.

"It is useless to attempt disguise, Margie. I can read your very thoughts. At the moment you felt that touch, you knew instinctively who was near you. You felt and acknowledged the presence of one who has no right to be kissing the hand of another man's promised wife. And yet the forbidden sin of that person was sweet to you. You stooped and pressed your lips where his had been! Whose?"

"I do not know—indeed, I do not! Why do you torture me so, Alexandrine?"

"My poor child, I will say no more. Good night, Margie. I trust you will have a pleasant evening with Mr. Trevlyn."

"You shall tell me all! I must know. I have heard too much to be kept in ignorance of the remainder."

"So be it. You shall hear all. You know that Archer Trevlyn was in the graveyard or near it, that night, though you might not see him. Yet you were sure of his presence—"

"I was not! I tell you, I was not!" she cried fiercely. "I saw no one; not a person!"

"Then, if you were not sure of his presence, you loved some other; else why did you put your lips where those of a stranger had been? In that case you were doubly false!"

Margie's cheeks were crimson with shame. She covered her face with her hands, and was silent..

"How many can you love at once, Margie Harrison?"

"Alexandrine, you are cruel!—cruel! Is it not enough for you to tell me the truth, without torturing me thus?"

CHAPTER XIV.

A FLASH of conscious triumph crossed the cold face of Miss Lee, and then she was as calm as before.

"No, I am not cruel—only truthful. You cannot deny that you knew Archer Trevlyn was near you. You will not deny it. Margie, I know what love is—I know something of its keen, subtle instincts. I should recognize the vicinity of the man I loved, though all around me were as black as midnight."

"Well, what then?" asked Margie, defiantly.

"Wait and see. I followed you out that night, with no definite purpose in my mind. Perhaps it was curiosity to see what a romantic woman, about to be married to a man she does not love, would do. I stood outside the hedge of arbor vitae while you were inside. I saw the tall, shadowy figure which bent its head upon your hand, and I saw you when you put your mouth where his had been. When you went away I did not go. Something kept me behind. A moment afterward, I heard voices inside the hedge—just one exclamation from each person—I could swear to that! and then—O heaven!"

"What then!"

"A blow! a dull, terrible thud, a smothered groan, a fall—and I stood there powerless to move—stricken dumb and motionless! And while I stood transfixed, some person rushed past me, breathless, panting, reckless of everything save escape! Margie, it was so dark that I could not be positive, but I am morally certain that the person I saw was Archer Trevlyn!"

"My God!" Margie cowered down to the floor, and hid her face in the folds of Alexandrine's dress.

"Hear me through," Miss Lee went on, relentlessly, her face growing colder and harder with every word. "Hear me through, and then decide for yourself. Let no opinion of mine bias your judgment. I stood there a moment longer, and then, when suspended volition came back to me, I fled from the place. Margie, words cannot express to you my distress, my bitter, burning anguish! It was like to madness! But sooner than have divulged my suspicions, I would have killed myself! For I loved Archer Trevlyn with a depth and fervor which your cool nature has no conception of. I love him still, though I feel convinced, from the bottom of my soul, that he is a murderer!"

Her cheeks grew brilliant as red roses, her eyes sparkled like stars. Margie looked into the bewilderingly beautiful face with suspended breath. The woman's passionate presence scorched her; she could not be herself, with those eyes of fire blazing down into hers.

Alexandrine resumed, "I am wasting time. Let me hurry on to the end, or your lover will be here before I finish."

"My lover!" cried Margie, in a dazed sort of way, "my lover? O yes, I remember, Archer Trevlyn was coming. Is it nearly time for him?"

Alexandrine took the shrinking, cowering girl by the shoulders, and lifted her into a seat.

"Rouse yourself, Margie. I have not done. I want you to hear it all."

"Yes, I am hearing."

It was pitiful to see how helpless and weak the poor child had become. All sense of joy and sorrow seemed to have died out of her.

"I feared so much that when the body of the murdered man should be discovered, there would be some clue which would point to the guilty party! Such a night as I passed, while they searched for the body! I thought I should go mad!" She hid her face in her hand and her figure shook like a leaf in the autumn wind.

"When the dog took us to the graveyard, I thought I would be the first inside— I would see if there was anything left on the ground to point to the real murderer. You remember that I picked up something, do you not?"

"I do. Your glove, was it not?"

"Yes. It was my glove! I defy the whole world to take it from me! I would die before such proof should be brought against the man I love!" she cried wildly. "See here!"

She drew from her bosom a kid glove, stained and stiff with blood.

"Margie, have you ever seen it before? Look here. It has been mended; sewed with blue silk! Do you remember anything about it?"

"Yes; I saw you mend it at Cape May," she answered, the words forced from her, apparently, without her volition.

"You are right. He had torn it while rowing me out, one morning. I saw the rent and offered to repair it. He makes his gloves wear well, doesn't he?"

"O don't! don't! how can you? Alexandrine, wake me, for mercy's sake! This is some horrible dream."

"I would to heaven it were! It would be happier for us all. But if you feel any doubt about the identity of the glove, look here." She turned back the wrist, and there on the inside, written in the bold characters, which were a peculiarity of Arch Trevlyn's handwriting, was the name in full—Archer Trevlyn.

Margie shrank back and covered her eyes, as if to shut out the terrible proof. Alexandrine returned the glove to her bosom, and then continued:

"The handkerchief found near Mr. Linmere was marked with the single letter A. Whose name begins with that lettter?"

"Stop, I implore you! I shall lose my reason! I am blinded—I cannot see! O, if I could only die, and leave it all!"

BAD DIGESTION

REDUCED HIS WEIGHT.

Gained His Digestion and Eighteen Pounds by Proper Treatment—How It Was Cured.

[From the Courier, Ottumwa, Iowa.]

John A. Bliley, a cabinet maker, living at 632 E. Second street, Ottumwa, Iowa, attributes to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People his entire recovery from a serious stomach trouble. For three years he was sadly afflicted, miserable, and unable to enjoy, or even keep on his stomach, the food which he ate. Mr. Bliley tried the first box to please a friend, with little hope of benefit, but the second box and each of the seven boxes, which he afterward took, he used because of the wonderful help derived from the trial box. Pink Pills did all and more for him than even his enthusiastic friend had hoped. The story we give in Mr. Bliley's own words. He said:

"About three years ago I began to have serious trouble with my stomach. I could not enjoy my meals, and usually my stomach threw off the undigested food and much water after I had eaten. I tried a number of treatments. My regular physician gave me medicine and I took a quantity of patent medicines, all to no purpose. I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla until I was satisfied that it did me no good, and I think I bought $20 worth of different sarsaparillas, besides taking a catarrh cure for a long time. None of them benefited me, and I was discouraged, as I was constantly growing worse. While my physician was making regular visits I was called upon by a friend, who asked me if I had ever tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I told him I had never heard of them. He begged me to give them a trial. I was timid, for I had taken so many nostrums, as they proved themselves to be, and did not care to throw away any more money on them, to say nothing of the harm they might do me. He insisted that I should try them, however, and even took me by the arm and walked me down to the nearest drug store, where I purchased a box to please him.

"I noticed an improvement in my condition after using the first box. After taking the second I began to grow stronger and I continued the treatment. My friends soon began to congratulate me on my improved appearance, and how much better and fleshier I was looking. I took nine boxes, and they completely cured me of my disorders. When I began them I had run down from my normal weight of 135 pounds to 117 pounds. I soon got up to 127 pounds, felt as well and strong as ever, and ate what I pleased without discomfort. All of my friends and neighbors know how sick I was and how well I got. One lady called on me a day or two ago and asked what cured me. When she found out she said that she had a friend in Cripple Creek, Colo., who was afflicted the same way. At my instigation she sent him a couple of boxes of the pills. I had the misfortune last November to get a hard fall on the icy pavement while walking to church, and I suffered from that, but I never have any more trouble with my stomach."

PERTAINING TO HEALTH.

A simple and excellent plan to strengthen and preserve the eyes is to follow this rule: Every morning pour some cold water into a bowl; at the bottom of the bowl place a silver coin or some other bright object and then put your face in the water with your eyes wide open and move your face gently from side to side. This will make the eyes brighter and stronger.

A Vienna professor has just made public the fact that the chances of a smoker suffering from diphtheria or throat diseases as compared to the chances of a non-smoker are as one to twenty-eight.

Keep the mouth shut when coming out of heated rooms at night and you will not catch cold.

A curious and slightly known fact is that it is impossible to move the eye while looking at its reflection in the mirror. The eye is the most movable part of the face, yet if you try to look at it and move it a thousandth part of an inch you will be balked in your purpose. The moment you endeavor to perceive the motion of the eye it becomes fixed. This is why a person's expression as he sees himself in the glass is entirely different from the one by which his friends recognize him.

So few men push business. The majority allow business to push them. That is the reason that only a small per cent make anything like a success in the world. The world is full of failures. The successes are few and far between. There are some men in every town who do not advertise. You may not know them—very few people do. They call themselves business men, but they are not. Everybody who is in business is not a business man by any means. "The man who cannot use advertising in his business has no business to be in business and generally is'nt in business." SOME GOOD SHORT STORIES FOR THE OLD SOLDIERS.

ARK, from far off in the distance
Comes a measured, muffled sound
Like a phantom army marching
To the music of the ground.

So the harbinger of battle
Nestled with that measured tread
Came, and called them to their duty;
Went—and left the heroes dead.

On the shining horde advances,
Sparkling with metallic light,
Gleaming guns and shining sabers,
To the eyes a gorgeous sight.

Then without a note of music,
Come the heroes of the war,
Come the soldiers grim and tattered
As the battle flags they bore.

Theirs is not for eyes or splendor,
Theirs no shining metal needs;
Theirs is now a page illumined
With the light of shining deeds.

In those eyes, that time is closing,
Stirring scenes are living yet.
Burned into their lives are battles
That they never can forget.

He with Grant and he with Sherman
Heard the brazen cannon crash.
He with Hancock faced the bullets.
He with Sheridan did dash.

He with Foote and he with Porter
Fought with cutlass, gun and pike.
He with Farragut had shouted
When they saw the colors strike.

On they march and soon the distance
Hides the dusky forms from view.
On to join departed comrades,
Comrades that were tried and true.

On goes time, each day transporting
One unto the other shore.
Soon the army will be tenting
Where all troubles are no more.

"My Old Commission."

I met Captain Richard Carter, the ex-mayor of Dodgeville, at the department encampment, writes J. A. Watrous in Chicago Times-Herald. He was recently appointed a member of Governor Upham's staff, with the rank of colonel. It is not a matter of very great importance, but it makes me recall a pair of young fellows of the long ago. Maybe some of the results of the recall will afford two or three minutes of pleasure to the Times-Herald readers. I'll try them, anyhow.

In 1861, as soon as they could get into the service after Lincoln's first call for troops, a couple of boys, one in Racine, where the encampment met last month, and the other in Grant county, were soldier material in the Second Wisconsin Infantry, the late General Fairchild's regiment. The Racine boy was William H. Upham, now the governor, and the Grant county boy was Richard Carter, now a prominent lawyer and general all-around good citizen of Dodgeville. I congratulate both. Upham left the army at the end of seven or eight months to go to West Point. Carter, Private Carter, stayed until the end of the war and was a captain when he came home. If he is like other colonels and generals on Governors' staffs, he is pleased with his commission, but it means ever so little when compared with the yellowing paper given him in the war days that says he is a captain—that he won the commission by faithful service in actual war. Ask Colonel Carter to trade his old captain's commission—to obliterate all record of his war service—for any kind of a modern commission—that of Governor, Minister to St. James, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme court, or even President—and see how quickly he will place the yellow commission over his thumping old heart and say: "Thank you; not if you were to make me ruler of the world—to give me the Bank of England—not if you were to pass to my keeping the treasures of all the governments of the earth."

Looking Backward.

I have not overstated.

From what I have said does the new generation get an idea of the satisfaction with which soldiers look back upon their service in the war that gave the world its greatest, most promising, best government? I hope so, for that is the object in writing of the old captain and the new colonel.

Ask any volunteer who helped to make up the vast Union army what would induce him to have all knowledge of his soldiership removed from muster rolls and other records in Washington and at his State capitol, so that it might never be known that he had a part in the struggle under Commander-in-Chief Abraham Lincoln, and see what he would do, what he would say.

Our brigade newsboy got hold of some Baltimore and Washington papers and brought them up to the line of battle the third day at Gettysburg. He was sitting on his horse counting out and selling papers as fast as he could take the change. When the great artillery duel that preceded Pickett's famous charge began he happened to be on Cemetery Ridge, near the archway in the cemetery. Solid shot and shell flew about him as thick as Green Bay flies in June. The little fellow threw away his papers, wheeled his horse and pretty nearly outflew the Confederate missiles. When asked why he departed that day so abruptly he said he had forgotten his revolver and went back to hunt for it and that on the way to the front General Meade had halted him and told him to stay in the rear, as his army could not afford to lose any more of its best men.

Silenced the Englishman.

Representative Mercer of Nebraska, according to the Washington Post, met Colonel John A. Cockerill during his trip through Japan about a year ago. Cockerill was then acting as war correspondent. Representatives of all nations gathered at Yokohama, many of them tourists and others on business. It was at this tme that Cockerill ran across a Cockney Briton who was boasting about the great prowess of his country and making rather slighting allusions to the United States. His remarks aroused Cockerill's war spirit and he told the Englishman that inasmuch as the United States had twice whipped England it could probably do so again.

"Oh—ah—my deah sah!" said the doughty Briton, "you ah mistaken, surely. If I remember the history of my country we took yah capitol and burned it, don't you know?"

"Yes," said Cockerill, "you did take the capitol. And if I remember the history of my country you also took Bunker Hill. But you didn't take it very far. You let go of both of them like a red-hot brick, and at last accounts they were still in our possession. But let me tell you what we'll do the next time we have a war with you. We'll go over there, tow your snug little island across the Atlantic and haul it up the bay to New York for a wharf."

The Englishman did not continue the argument.

Story of a Testament.

"I want you to look at this old Testament," said C. B. Aubery. "There is my name written by Lieutenant Leach, Company H, Second Vermont. He bought it in Washington in July, 1861, and presented it to me. What memories that Testament brings back! I remember the hour he gave it to me. How solemn I felt, and how homesick, too! How I wanted to throw my arms about my mother's neck and have her talk to me—the dear mother I ran away from! Lieutenant Leach was a Christian—a real one. There were prayers in his tent every night and morning and on Sunday there was a prayer meeting. I was a boy of 12, who had taken French leave to go to the war, and needed just such care as Lieutenant Leach extended to me. He gave me that Testament at the close of one of the prayer meetings, and, with a hand resting on my head, said: "My lad, read something in that book every day as long as you live and you will never get into serious trouble." I read it daily until I was made a prisoner—until I got into what I thought was mighty serious trouble—when it was impossible for me to read the Bible. Bible agents didn't come to see us at Libby Prison. I guess my too frequently vacant stomach demanded more attention than religious training and Bible reading in those prison days."

Praying in Tents.

Prayers in the soldiers' tents were not infrequent. General Howard always had prayers. General Lee regularly prayed, and Stonewall Jackson several times a day. Probably there was not a company in the war that did not have its praying men. "Go with me tonight through the company street," said Private E. C. Jones, of whom I have spoken in these letters. "We will see what the boys are doing." It was about six months after the company had gone to the seat of war. We went up one side of the street and down the other. In three of the tents that night, just before taps, voices of men in prayer were heard. In seven tents the language of seven-up, euchre and poker came to our ears. In the balance of the tents the soldier statesmen and army commanders were discussing the best way to settle the great family trouble into which the North and South had allowed themselves to be drawn. Jones at that time was a man of piety. He was shocked at the few prayers and much worldliness of the company. Two years later Jones could lose his pay at poker a little quicker than any other man in Company E.

BRYAN AND SEWALL

ONE FROM NEBRASKA, THE OTHER FROM MAINE.

The Convention Spends Almost a Week in Its Deliberations—Free Silver Men Make the Platform.

CHICAGO, July 7.—The sixteenth national democratic convention was called to order at 12:49 p. m. and prayer was offered by Rev. Ernest M. Stires, rector of Grace Episcopal church, of Chicago. The chairman then presented the name of David B. Hill, of New York, for temporary chairman. A minority report from the national committee, signed by twenty-three members, favored the substitution of the name of Senator Daniel, of Virginia. Several addresses were made for each side, and the minority report was finally adopted, 556 to 349. This was a victory for the silver forces. Senator Daniel was then introduced and made a ringing speech for free silver, which was received with enthusiasm. After the completion of the standing committees, the convention adjourned until to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

CHICAGO, July 8.—At 10:50 Senator Daniel called the convention to order. The report of the committee on credentials was called for, but as it was not ready, speeches were made by Governor Hogg, of Texas; Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky; Governor Altgeld, of Illinois; ex-Governor Overmeyer, of Kansas; and Congressman Williams, of Massachusetts. The credentials committee then reported on all contests except that of Michigan, and the report was adopted. Convention then adjourned until 5 p. m.

When the second session was called to order the credentials committee reported, seating four silver delegates for Michigan, which changed the delegation, under the unite rule, from gold to silver. A minority report favored the gold delegation. After a dozen speeches had been made for each side of the question, a vote resulted in a defeat of the minority report, 368 to 558, and the silver delegates were seated. The committee on permanent organization reported in favor of Senator White, of California, for chairman and Thos. J. Cogan, of Ohio, for secretary. Mr. White was escorted to the chair and made a short speech, after which the convention adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

CHICAGO, July 9.—The convention was called to order at 10:55 and Senator Jones, from the committee on resolutions, presented the report. Hill presented a minority report and offered an amendment that free coinage should not effect existing contracts and that if it should prove unsuccessful that after one year free coinage shall be suspended. Tillman made an address favoring the majority report and offering an amendment censuring Cleveland. Jones, of Arkansas, also favored the majority report. Hill, Vilas and Russell spoke for the minority and then Bryan closed the debate. Hill's amendment was defeated, 303 to 627. An amendment by Hill endorsing the democratic administration was defeated, 357 to 564. Tillman withdrew his amendment for censure, saying the vote was equivalent to that. The platform was then adopted, 628 to 301, and the convention adjourned until 8 o'clock.

In the evening the nominating speeches were made. Senator Vest nominated Richard Parks Bland, and the nomination was seconded by Overmeyer, of Kansas, and Williams, of Illinois. Col. H. T. Lewis, of Georgia, nominated Wm. J. Bryan, of Nebraska, and the nomination was seconded by North Carolina, Massachusetts and Louisiana. Governor Matthews, of Indiana, was nominated by Senator Turpie, and seconded by California. Frederick White, of Iowa, nominated Horace Boies, and the nomination was seconded by Minnesota. John Rhea, of Kentucky, nominated Senator Blackburn, and California seconded the nomination. John R. McLean was nominated by A. W. Patrick, of Ohio. At 12:30 a. m. the convention adjourned until 10 o'clock.

CHICAGO, July 10.—Senator White called the convention to order at 10:55. Pennsylvania presented the name of Robert E. Pattison as a candidate for president. Pennoyer, of Oregon, was also placed in nomination. The first ballot resulted: Bland 223, Boies 86, Matthews 37, McLean 54, Bryan 105, Blackburn 83, Pattison 95, Pennoyer 10, Campbell 2, Russell 2, Stevenson 2, Tillman 17, Hill 1, Teller 8. Absent and not voting 185.

Second ballot: Not voting 160; Bland 281, Boies 37, Matthews 34, McLean 53, Blackburn 11, Teller 8, Stevenson 10, Hill 1, Pennoyer 8, Pattison 100, Bryan 197.

Third ballot: Bland 291, Boies 36, Matthews 34, McLean 54, Bryan 219, Blackburn 27, Pattison 97, Stevenson 9, Hill 1, not voting 162. Total 930.

Fourth ballot: Not voting 162; Bland 241, Boies 33, Matthews 36, McLean 46, Bryan 280, Blackburn 27, Pattison 96, Stevenson 8, Hill 1; total 930; necessary to choice, 531.

During the fifth ballot Bryan gained such strength that a general slump to the Nebraska man followed. Illinois cast her forty-eight votes for him. Bland's name was withdrawn, as were also Matthews' and Boies' and upon motion by Turpie, of Indiana, the nomination was made unanimous. During each ballot a number of gold states, headed by New York, refused to vote.

At the evening session, adjournment was almost immediately taken until 10 o'clock to-morrow.

CHICAGO, July 11.—The convention came to order at 10:55 and almost a score of men were placed in nomination for the vice-presidency. Among them were Bland, Boies, Sibley, Sewall, McLean, Teller and Blackburn. During the fifth ballot a general stampede to Sewall occurred and he was declared nominated unanimously. Over 250 declined to participate in the nomination of a vice-president. Whether these seceders will place a third ticket in the field is as yet undecided.

At a meeting of the national committee Senator Jones, of Arkansas, was made chairman.

DILKE FORESEES WAR.

LONDON, July 9.—Sir Charles Dilke has just astonished the British public in a manner that has set diplomats to talking. Probably no other man in England is so well acquainted with the trend of European affairs, and when he seriously predicts that Great Britain is on the eve of a fierce continental struggle, the English public begins to think that a conflict is near at hand. Sir Charles solemnly declares that Great Britain, single-handed, is destined to engage in a terrible struggle with Germany, Russia and France combined. The fight, he asserts, may come at any time within a decade, ostensibly about Egypt, but really on account of jealousy of Great Britain's colonial expansion. Therefore, Sir Charles urges Great Britain to hold herself free from any alliance which might only prove illusive, and to devote herself to the development of her defenses. The publication of this letter has stirred up the editors of England, and, strange to say, they all with singular unanimity take the same pessimistic view of the continental situation that has been taken by the eminent writer of the alarming note. As showing the tension in regard to the Venezuelan question, the Spectator propounds the question as to what role America will play in the event of such an European struggle, leaving it to be implied that the United States would be likely to espouse the cause of the enemies of Great Britain.

CHANG IS COMING.

Will Probably Cross Iowa on His Way Home.

LONDON, July 8.—Li Hung Chang, the "Bismarck of China," will go to the United States in September, to present in person to the president a letter from the emperor of China. He is now in Berlin, but will leave there in a few days for Paris, coming to London the latter part of the month. He had expected to go to Washington the latter part of August, but has postponed the date of his depature from Europe until President Cleveland's return to Washington from Buzzard's Bay. Some concern is expressed at the American embassy as to the plans that Americans will adopt to entertain the distinguished Mongolian, especially as congress makes no provision for such purposes. It is presumed that the state governors and private citizens will assist. Li Hung Chang's route across the continent will probably take him through Chicago, a city he is particularly anxious to see. His reception at Berlin has surpassed, from a spectacular point of view, all ceremonies of like character. It remains to be seen whether France and England will beat Germany at this game.

AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, July 7.—At a meeting of the Iowa delegation the following selections were made: Chairman, S. B. Evans; national committeeman, Charles A. Walsh; committee on resolutions, J. S. Murphy; credentials, Will A. Wells; permanent organization, R. F. Jordan; honorary vice-president, M. H. King; honorary secretary, S. A. Brewster; member of committee to notify nominee for president, L. T. Genung; to notify nominee for vice-president, W. H. Stackhouse; member of committee on rules, F. D. Bayless.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Bolt was the slogan of 150 democrats at a meeting of the gold standard men to-night. Not a bolt from the convention that was decided against, but a bolt from the ticket and the platform that the convention makes. Every suggestion was received with applause. Every contrary suggestion was received in silence. This is the significant resolution suggested by Mr. Irish, of California, and adopted:

That each sound money delegation select a member to return to his state and get the views of his party on the matter and report back to the chairman (Senator Gray) in July, if possible.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, July 9.—John Miller, assignor of one-fourth to E. E. Gatchel, (both of Stuart, Iowa,) has been allowed a patent for hardening copper. The primary object of the patent law is not for individual benefit, but for the public good and a monopoly of any patentable discovery or invention is granted in view of getting it on record so it cannot become a lost art. Mr. Miller's invention consists in a composition and a process for hardening copper, (covered by separate claims) and is an important improvement in metallurgy. A razor and other edge tools exhibited show that ductile copper has been hardened to adapt it for making edge tools that require strength and durability. Mr. Miller claims that his process also prevents oxidation and detoriation, and consequently there will be no verdigris to poison persons who may be wounded by tools made of copper. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address. Printed copies of the drawings and specifications of any United States patent sent upon receipt of 25 cents. Our practice is not confined to Iowa. Inventors in other states can have our services upon the same terms as the Hawkeyes.

WOMAN TO WOMAN.

Women are being taught by bitter experience that many physicians cannot successfully handle their peculiar ailments known as female diseases.

Doctors are willing and anxious to help them, but they are the wrong sex to work understandingly.

When the woman of to-day experiences such symptoms as backache, nervousness, lassitude, whites, irregular or painful menstruation, pains in groins, bearing-down sensation, palpitation, "all gone" feeling and blues, she at once takes Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, feeling sure of obtaining immediate relief.

Should her symptoms be new to her, she writes to a woman, Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., who promptly explains her case, and tells her free how to get well.

Indeed, so many women are now appealing to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, that a score of lady secretaries are kept constantly at work answering the great volume of correspondence which comes in every day. Each letter is answered carefully and accurately, as Mrs. Pinkham fully realizes that a life may depend upon her reply, and into many and many a home has she shed the rays of happiness.

HER AIRY FANCIES.

The smart visiting glove of the season is to be cream-colored French kid sewn with slender black spots. For cyclists the deerskin glove is the rage.

The empress of Russia recently chose a white veil with a fine web-like ground and a black border, consisting of a single row of black chenille spots.

The combination of black and white is to be much worn this summer. It has the advantage of looking cool and being stunning as well.

Some of the pretty veils selected by European royalties soon to be married are crescent-shaped and drawn up to fit the hat. They are of brown with white spots, white with black spots and pure white.

There is no truth in the rumor that black stockings are no longer to be worn. Though brown are often worn for cycling, the black are just as fashionable as ever, and open-work especially so.

Would Hurt His Business.

Doctor—You are fagged out, you must give up all head work.

Patient—Why, that spells ruin! I am a hairdresser.

Same Old Story.

He (impetuously)—For the eighth time I ask you to marry me.

She (composedly)—And for the eighth time I must say this is so sudden.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

W·N.U. D.M.--1253. NO. 29

When answering advertisements kindly mention this paper.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

"We, the democrats of the United States, in national convention assembled, do affirm our allegiance to those great essential principles of justice and liberty upon which our institutions are founded, and which the democratic party has advocated from Jefferson's time to our own—freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of conscience, the preservation of personal rights, the equality of all citizens before the law, and the faithful observance of constitutional limitations.

Founded on the Constitution.

"During all these years the democratic party has resisted the tendency of selfish interest toward the centralization of governmental power and steadfastly maintained the integrity of the dual scheme of government established by the founders of this republic of republics. Under its guidance and teachings the great principle of local self-government has found its best expression in the maintenance of the rights of the states and in the assertion of the necessity of confining the general government to the exercise of the powers granted by the constitution of the United States.

"The constitution of the United States guarantees to every citizen the rights of civil and religious liberty. The democratic party has always been the exponent of political liberty and religious freedom, and it renews its obligations and affirms its devotion to these fundamental principles of the constitution.

Money of the Constitution.

"Recognizing that the money question is paramount to all others at this time, we invite attention to the fact that the federal constitution names silver and gold together as the money metals of the United States, and that the first coinage law passed by congress under the constitution made the silver dollar the monetary unit and admitted gold to free coinage at a ratio based upon the silver unit.

"We declare that the act of 1873, demonetizing silver without the knowledge or approval of the American people, has resulted in the appreciation of gold and in a corresponding fall of the prices of commodities produced by the people (applause), a heavy increase in the burden of taxation and of all debts, public and private; the enrichment of the money-lending class at home and abroad; the prostration of industry and the impoverishment of the people.

Opposed to Monometallism.

"We are unalterably opposed to monometallism, which has locked fast the prosperity of an industrial people in the paralysis of hard times. Gold monometallism is a British policy, and its adoption has brought other nations into financial servitude to London. It is not only un-American, but it is anti-American, and it can be fastened on the United States only by stifling that spirit and love of liberty which proclaimed our political independence in 1776, and won it in the war of the revolution. We demand the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1, without waiting for the consent or aid of any other nation.

We demand that the standard silver dollar shall be a full legal tender, equally with gold, for all debts, public and private, and we favor such legislation as will prevent for the future the demonetization of any kind of legal tender money by private contract.

Against National Banks.

"We are opposed to the policy and practice of surrendering to the holders of the obligations of the United States the option reserved by law to the government of redeeming such obligations in either silver coin or gold coin. We are opposed to the issuing of interest bearing bonds of the United States in time of peace, and condemn the trafficking with banking syndicates which, in exchange for bonds and at enormous profits to themselves, supply the Federal treasury with gold to maintain the policy of gold monometalism.

"Congress alone has power to coin and issue money and President Jackson declared that this power could not be delegated to corporations or to individuals. We therefore denounce the issuance of notes as money for national banks as in derogation of the constitution and we demand that all paper which is made legal tender for public and private debts or which is receivable for dues to the United States shall be issued by the government of the United States and shall be redeemable in coin.

Tariff for Revenue.

"We hold that the tariff duties should be levied for the purpose of revenue, such duties to be so adjusted as to operate equally throughout the country and not discriminate between class or sections and that taxation should be limited by the needs of the government, honestly and economically administered. We denounce as disturbing to business the republican threat to restore the McKinley law, which has been twice condemned by the people in national elections, and which, enacted under the false plea of protection to home industry proved a prolific breeder of trusts and monopolies, enriched the few at the expense of the many, restricted trade and deprived the producers of the great American staples of access to their natural markets.

Must Not Agitate Tariff Revision.

"Until the money question is settled we are opposed to any agitation for further changes in our tariff, except such as are necessary to make good the deficit in revenue caused by the adverse decisions of the supreme court on the income tax. But for the decision of the supreme court there would be no deficit in the revenue under the law passed by a democratic congress in strict pursuance of the uniform decision of that court for nearly 100 years, that court having in that decision overruled what had been previously confirmed by the ablest judges that have sat on that bench. We declare that it is the duty of congress to use all the constitutional powers which remain after the decision, or which may come from its reversal by the court as it may hereafter be constituted, so that the burden of taxation may be equally and impartially laid to the end that wealth may bear its due proportion of the expenses of the government.

Protection for Labor.

"We hold that the most efficient way of protecting American labor is to prevent the importation of foreign pauper labor to compete with it in the home market, and that the value of the home market to our American farmers and artisans is greatly reduced by a vicious monetary system, which depresses the prices of their product below the cost of production, and thus deprives them of the means of purchasing the products of our home manufactories.

Government Control.

"The absorption of wealth by the few, the consolidation of our leading railway systems, and the formation of trusts and pools require a stricter control by the federal government of those arteries of commerce. We demand the enlargement of the powers of the interstate commerce commission, and such restriction and guarantees in the control of railroads as will protect the people from robbery and oppression.

Unequal Taxation.

"We denounce the profligate waste of money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation and the lavish appropriations of recent republican congresses, which have kept taxes high while the labor that pays them is unemployed, that the products of the people's toil are depressed in price till they no longer pay the cost of production. We demand a return to that simplicity and economy which befits a democratic government and a reduction in the number of useless offices, the salaries of which drain the substance of the people.

No Federal Interference.

"We denounce arbitrary interference by federal authorities in local affairs as a violation of the constitution of the United States and a crime against free institutions. We especially object to government by injunction as a new and highly dangerous form of oppression, by which federal judges, in contempt of the laws and the rights of citizens, become at once legislators, judges and executioners. We approve the bill passed by the last session of the United States, and now pending in the house of representatives, relative to contempt in federal courts and providing for trials by jury in certain cases of contempt. No discrimination should be indulged in by the government of the United States in favor of any of its debtors.

"We approve of the refusal of the Fifty-third congress to pass the Pacific railroad funding bill, and denounce the efforts of the present republican congress to enact similar measures.

Favors Liberal Pensions.

"Recognizing the just claims of deserving Union soldiers, we heartily indorse the rule of the present commissioner of pensions that no name shall be arbitrarily dropped from the pension roll, and the fact of enlistment and service should be deemed conclusive evidence against disease and disability before enlistment.

"We favor the admission of the territories of New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma into the union as states, and we favor the early admission of all the territories having the necessary population and resources to entitle them to statehood; and, while they remain territories, we hold that the officials appointed to administer the government of any territory, together with the District of Columbia and Alaska, should be bona fide residents of the territory or district in which their duties are to be performed. The democratic party believes in home rule, and that all public lands of the United States should be appropriated to the establishment of free homes for American citizens.

"We recommend that the territory of Alaska be granted a delegate in congress, and that the general land and timber laws of the United States be extended to said territory.

The Monroe Doctrine.

"The Monroe doctrine, as originally declared and as interpreted by our leading presidents is a permanent part of the foreign policy of the United States, and must at all times be maintained.

"We extend our sympathy to the people of Cuba in their heroic struggle for liberty and independence.

"We declare it to be the unwritten law of this republic, established by custom and usage of 100 years, and sanctioned by the examples of the great and wisest of those who founded and maintained our government, that no man should be eligible for a third term to the presidential office.

National Improvements.

"The federal government should care for and improve the Mississippi river and other great waterways of the republic, so as to secure for interior states easy and cheap transportation to the water. Whenever any waterway of the republic is of sufficient importance to demand aid of the government such aid should be extended upon a definite plan of continuous work until a permanent improvement is secured.

"Confiding in the justice of our cause and the necessity of its success at the polls, we submit the foregoing declaration of principles and purposes to the considerate judgment of the American people. We invite the support of all citizens who approve them, and who desire to have them made affective through legislation for the relief of the people, and the restoration of the country's prosperity."

Faith Cures.

Dr. James Martineau has this to say of some "faith cures" that came under his personal observation: One case came under the doctor's own notice—that of an old woman who had been bedridden for years with rheumatism. Medicine had done her no good, but on hearing of this woman's successful cures she was anxious to see her. An almost instantaneous cure was effected, the old woman leaving her bed and becoming quite active, well and free from pain. Now it happened that there was a strong anti-Jewish feeling at Berlin and one day it came out that this young woman was a Jewess. The result of this discovery was remarkable, for in nearly every case the malady returned. This rheumatic old woman took to her bed instantly on learning the news and the next day was as bad as ever. Dr. Martineau considered that this showed the double working of a faith cure. He did not doubt that the original cures of nervous complaints were genuine but they rested on the belief of the patient, and when this belief was subsequently undermined by the discovery that the healer was a Jewess the disbelief that a Jewess could achieve any good thing proved stronger than the apparent fact that she had done so.

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

The plot to rob the Alton road seems to have been well conductored.

A Philadelphia preacher is now checking wheels free. He says it pays.

There is not a human being on earth that does not hug the delusion that he or she is better than somebody else.

The man who has nerve in tight places generally manages to find enough of them to find they wear him out.

There is still hope that Chicago will some day be rid of its robbers. A Colorado Springs burglar after attempting to enter a building committed suicide.

The Germans, who are lavishly entertaining Li Hung Chang, are said to be disappointed that he does not give out some of the much coveted Chinese orders and decorations, for the obtaining of which captious critics claim the fetes are being given. The wily heathen Chinee, however, has thus far contented himself with merely thanking his various hosts for their hospitality.

A mountain has fallen down in Belgium. This sounds incredible, but appears to be true. It was not much of a mountain, to be sure, only about 150 feet high, but, after rocking and rolling about for several days, it actually fell down, covering the plain with debris and leaving what appears to have been its backbone, a huge thin ridge of jaggged rock still standing. The peasants are much alarmed and unscrupulous people are attempting to play upon their superstition to make them sell their land in the neighborhood.

However much the German correspondents may endeavor to talk away the object of the visit of Prince Ludwig of Bavaria to the emperor to "explain" his Moscow speech, the real truth seems evident that he has had to apologize and make his peace in a more or less humiliating manner. The offending remark was: "I am not a vassal of the emperor, I am his ally." But it seems that this did not go with William, who likes no half measures, and the result is that while the matter is now apparently adjusted with satisfaction to both sides nobody doubts but that the prince had "to take back water."

A carnival of suicide is taking place all over the United States. Statistics on this subject have shown for years that June is par excellence the suicide month of the year, and certainly the frequency with which these sad events have been recorded in the papers during the past month seems to bear out this theory. The remarkable feature of many of these century-end suicides is that they do not proceed from any apparent or definite purpose, but from some mysterious agency which is doubtless the general "tired-of-life" feeling which is so common at the present time of decadence and degeneracy.

The latest fashionable disease is what is called "memory blindness" and is produced by over-mental work. Its victims, while otherwise in perfect health and excellent physical condition, forget everything and when attempting to talk chatter mere nonsense. They try also to concentrate their wandering thoughts by endeavoring to put down on paper what they wish to say, but this also results in mere written nonsense. The attacks, while frequent, are of short duration, sometimes passing away in an hour. The disease is said to differ entirely from paresis, as it is curable, and all that is necessary to relieve the sufferer is to put him beyond the reach of mental work, care or worry for a few weeks. In any case it seems to be one of the undesirable products of our nineteenth century existence, hardly to be called life.

It is announced that Nikola Tesla has "perfected his vacuum tube system of electric lighting without wires, the possibilities of which he first brought to public notice five years ago in a lecture before the American institute of electrical engineers. This light is whiter, more brilliant and more intense than the arc light, and is produced with a much smaller amount of electrical energy. Tesla further states that his apparatus has been greatly simplified, and he will soon have it ready for practical use." Working on different lines, Thomas A. Edison, according to the Electrical Review, has succeeded in developing a new electric lamp or vacuum tube, "by means of which the Roentgen or X rays are turned into pure light. Edison's new lamp is an ordinary Crookes tube, coated on the interior surface with crystals of a new fluorescent substance which he has discovered, similar to tungstate of calcium. The X rays, in passing through this coating of crystals, are changed to light. Very little heat is generated, and nearly the whole of the electrical energy expended is transformed into light. Mr. Edison believes that there are great possibilities in his discovery."

THE NEWS IN IOWA

DOG SAVES HIS MASTER.

Loyal Brute Sacrifices His Own Life in the Attempt.

BURLINGTON, July 19.—His faithful watchdog was all that saved a farmer named Daniel Fritz from death in an awful form, and as it is, the dog is dead and Fritz has a broken arm and is badly hurt. Fritz and his dog were passing through a pasture in which a bull, which was not supposed to be dangerous, was feeding, when they were suddenly charged by the animal. Before he could reach shelter, Fritz was caught on the sharp horns of the bull and tossed high in the air. His arm was broken, and, unable to escape, he shut his eyes just as the bull charged a socond time. His dog, however, sprang at the bull's throat and held on long enough for Fritz to be rescued. The dog was gored and trampled out of shape by the bull.

A REMARKABLE ESCAPE.

Frightful Experience of a Little Child Near Page Center.

CRESTON, July 17.—A peculiar accident took place near Page Center. Glenn Steeves, a 4-year-old child, was playing on a railroad cattle guard. An approaching train came upon the child, and before the engineer could stop his engine the locomotive and one car passed over the boy. The enginemen expected to pick up the mangled body, but were surprised to find the child had escaped uninjured, save from a slight scratch over the eye. He had fallen partially through the cattle guard, and the cow-catcher failed to strike him, which accounts for his rather remarkable escape.

BIMETALLIC LEAGUE.

Meets at Des Moines and Selects Delegates to St. Louis.

DES MOINES, July 15.—The state meeting of the non-partisan bi-metallic league of Iowa, which convened at Flynn Hall proved an agreeable surprise to the friends of the white metal in that the attendance was largely in excess of their expectations and the interest more than had been anticipated. Resolutions were adopted declaring that the money question is the dominant issue and endorsing the candidacy of William J. Bryan and Arthur Sewall. Thirty-five delegates were selected to represent the state at the meeting of the national league at St. Louis.

TRAIN MEN HELD.

Coroner's Jury Decides There Was Criminal Negligence at Logan.

LOGAN, July 17.—After two hours deliberation the coroner's jury in the inquest over the Union Pacific Pioneers excursion train disaster, returned a verdict that the death of the twenty-five passengers was caused by the criminal negligence, carelessness and neglect of the conductor of the excursion train, A. L. Reed, and the engineer, J. D. Montgomery. Coroner MacFarlane at once issued a warrant to Sheriff Eddie to bring the men from Boone. They will be held, unless bail is given, until the grand jury convenes September 8.

PRINTING OFFICE BURNED.

Melbourne Scorched and has a Narrow Escape from Serious Danger.

MELBOURNE July 19.—The printing office of the Cosmopolitan, with contents, was totally destroyed by fire. The fire was beyond control when the alarm was given. The large two-story planing mill and sash factory of D. B. Troxel stood just across the alley, but by the well directed efforts of the fire department, it was saved with small damage of broken glass and from water. The printing office had just been furnished with a large cylinder press and engine. The loss will reach $2,500 to $3,000, with some insurance.

New Electric Line.

MASON CITY, July 18.—Mason City and Clear Lake have granted franchises to the Mason City and Clear Lake Traction company to build electric street car lines between the two towns and through them, in all seventeen and a half miles of track, at a cost of $200,000. Work on the right of way has begun. The principal stockholders are W. E. Brice and L. H. Ong, of Tama, Iowa. The grading will be done this year and they will begin operations early next season.

Released on Bail.

LOGAN, July 18.—Conductor Reed and Engineer Montgomery appeared before 'Squire Norman on a charge of manslaughter, waived, and gave bonds in $5,000 each. The bonds were signed by five citizens of Boone. Each signer qualified in the sum of $10,000. The bonds were accepted and they returned to Boone.

Ex-Senator Jones Dying.

DUBUQUE, July 18.—Ex-Senator Geo. W. Jones is gradually sinking and death must result within the next few days.

INSANE MAN WOUNDS TWO.

Patient at Independence Stabs Two Attendants.

INDEPENDENCE, July 17.—John Skelly and Ernest Bantz, two attendants at the hospital for the insane, were badly slashed at the hospital by a patient named Dunston, who is inclined to homicide. Dunston had been working outside, and by some unknown means had secured a jack-knife. He hid in a bath-room and attacked Skelly when he entered. Two terrible gashes above and below the waist line were made. Bantz was cut on the shoulder and chest in assisting Skelly. Both will live, although Skelly's condition is very serious.

LELIA LONG MURDERED.

Sensational Iowa Falls Case Becomes More Sensational.

IOWA FALLS, July 20.—The coroner's inquest over the body of Lelia I. Long, the daughter of a prominent farmer living north of Iowa Falls, and whose death resulted suddenly and mysteriously Sunday, June 21, resulted in a verdict that the girl came to her death by strychnine poisoning, administered in a single strawberry, both the poison and agent being found in an undigested state in the stomach. The jury was unable to determine by whom the poison was administered.

DOESN'T WANT TO RUN.

Mr. Boies Refuses to Be a Candidate for Congress.

DUBUQUE, July 18.—From a letter received from ex-Governor Boies by a friend in this city, it would appear that he will not be a candidate for congress against Colonel Henderson. The letter as published in the Herald reads as follows: "I hope no effort will be made to bring me out as a candidate for congress. I could not accept the nomination if I knew it would result in my election, and I do not want the notoriety that will result from declining."

Scott and the Girl Arrested.

WATERLOO, July 20.—A telegram received by the authorities states that the Rev. G. E. Scott, pastor of the First M. E. church, has been arrested at Logansport, Ind., with Daisy Dorlan, the 15-year-old girl with whom he eloped from Waterloo, July 7.

BREVITIES.

The rain which visited Iowa on the 17th and 18th was general throughout the state and Nebraska.

Town councils will do well to remember that where sidewalks are laid on streets not yet brought to grade the expense cannot be assessed to the abutting property owners. The Sioux City council made the discovery a short time ago, and, as many property owners have been compelled to make payment for walks laid under such circumstances, resolved to say nothing of the matter outside the committee room. One of them, however, explained the situation as a joke to a friend, who had been one of the sufferers. The latter promptly circulated the report. Now the city will be the defendant in suits aggregating several thousands of dollars, brought by the aggrieved citizens. It is almost certain that they will win.

Waterloo dispatch: On the 6th Rev. G. E. Scott, pastor of the First Methodist church of Waterloo, disappeared. Until recently his departure was attributed to mental derangement, but it now develops that he eloped with Daisy Dorlan, the 15-year-old daughter of P. S. Dorlan, a prominent citizen, whose home affords the comforts and luxuries enjoyed by the average young woman. Daisy is a charming girl, and it is recalled that for months past, at various church gatherings, sociables, suppers and the like, the pair would seldom be found far from each other, and the affection did not seem to be all on the minister's part, Daisy giving him a full share of attention. While these things were noticed by many, not all were suspicious. Scott drew $1,500 from the bank before his departure. He had been in the ministry for twenty years and was a preacher

At Burlington recently two unknown men late at night stopped W. L. Linder, a wealthy merchant, while on his way home, and without a word of warning shot him down and then disappeared down a side street. Either they were waiting for Mr. Linder or they mistook him for some one else, as they allowed others to go unmolested past the position which they had taken on a low stone wall on a fashionable residence street until he arrived. They fired at such short range that his clothing was burned by the powder. A bullet struck him in the center of the chest, making a ghastly wound, from which he can hardly recover. With blood spurting from his breast, Mr. Linder walked a few feet and fell fainting into the arms of neighbors who rushed out at the sound of the shots and his calls for help. The men who shot him only waited long enough to see if he was hit, and then decamped, making no attempt to rob him, and it is not thought that it was their intention to do so. The whole event is clouded in mystery, and the police can discover no clew whatever.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

DISASTROUS CLOUD BURST.

Western Part of Pennsylvania and Pittsburg Flooded.

PITTSBURG, July 17.—A heavy storm, which was practically a cloud-burst, did great damage throughout the city and Allegheny county. Estimates made from reports coming from outlying portions indicate a loss of nearly $1,000,000. All street car lines have been stopped. At Forty-eighth street water is in the second story of the houses, caused by the bursting of a large sewer. Part of the Allegheny cemetery wall has been washed away, and nearly two miles of the Citizens' street railway is torn up. Tons of earth and stones have been washed onto the Fifth Avenue & Duquesne Traction Company's lines at Soho. The sewers in Butcher run and Woods run in Allegheny are reported as having bursted, flooding those sections. No loss of life as yet is reported.

PROTEST TO THE PORTE.

Turkish Soldiers in Crete Must Refrain From Activity.

LONDON, July 18.—In the house of commons, Mr. George N. Curzon, under secretary for foreign affairs, announced that a complaint had been made by the Christian insurgents in Crete that the Turks in that island had further violated the armistice which had been agreed upon between the Turks and the Christian rebels, by making an attack upon the town of Apokorona, where many persons, including women and children, are reported to have been killed. Mr. Curzon said the powers had made a protest to the porte, insisting that the Turkish troops in the island of Crete should remain purely on the defensive, according to the agreement entered into when the armistice was established.

SILVER COINAGE INCREASED.

Three Million Dollars Per Month Will Be Turned Out.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Owing to the fact that the amount of silver dollars in the treasury available for the redemption of treasury notes has become reduced to $10,659,582 and will be further reduced by redemption during the current month, the coinage of silver dollars by the mints will be increased from one and one-half million dollars to three million dollars per month from the first of August, and will probably be continued at that ratio in order that the treasury may have a sufficient stock to redeem treasury notes presented in exchange for silver dollars. The amount of treasury notes redeemed in silver dollars and cancelled from Nov. 1, 1893, to July 14, 1896, was $28,402,285.

MALVERN, ARK., BURNED.

Entire Town Swept Out of Existence by Fire.

MALVERN, Ark., July 20.—The entire town was destroyed by an incendiary fire at 2 o'clock a. m. Only three houses are left standing. Four men are under arrest. Malvern was a city of 6,000 inhabitants, the business portion clustered around the railroad station. All this section was destroyed. The burned buildings include the railroad depot, two hotels and a bank, all the principal business houses. Fire broke out simultaneously in three places at midnight. As there is no fire apparatus, it burned itself out. The incendiaries will probably be dealt with summarily. The loss is estimated at from $200,000 to $400,000, with light insurance.

RECEPTION TO MR. BRYAN.

Lincoln People Turn Out to Welcome the Nominee Home.

LINCOLN, July 18.—Amidst an uproar of booming cannon, pealing church bells, screaming whistles and the shouts of 20,000 people, William J. Bryan, the democratic nominee for president, entered Lincoln. It was an ovation the like of which the people of this part of the country never before witnessed. Half the population, men, women and children, were at the depot to welcome Mr. Bryan home. It was a non-partisan demonstration, for both democrats and republicans participated. The mayor and the council and distinguished citizens of every political belief were at the train. The nominee was escorted to the state house, where a reception was held.

CHICAGO'S CAR BARNS BURN.

A Loss of $500,000; 554 Cars and 14 Horses Destroyed.

CHICAGO July 20.—The car barns of the Chicago City Railway Company, on Cottage Grove, near Thirty-ninth street, were destroyed by fire. The barns were 150 feet long, 400 feet deep and occupied three-fourths of a square. It was filled with cars, being the stable for the entire system. The company lost 554 cars, 160 of them being grip cars, and 14 horses. Not a thing in the building was saved. The loss is estimated at fully $500,000, the building and contents being insured for $311,000.

STRIKE SITUATION.

Three More Companies of Troops Ordered Out at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., July 18.—The strike situation at the Brown Hoisting Works assumed so dangerous a phase that three more companies of troops were hurried to the scene and are now encamped in the works. Early in the afternoon crowds began to assemble and stood about sullenly defiant of police orders to move on. There was so much evidence of a pre-arranged plan, every street leading to the works having its own division of the mob, that the authorities in hot haste sent for more troops. When the sixty-three men who had been at work were placed in vans to be driven home from the works, it was found necessary to charge the mob twice before a passage could be made for the wagons. The drivers had refused to leave the stables with the vehicles and policemen did the driving. During the melee jeers and threats were hurled at the non-union men, police and military, and some stones thrown. The severest fighting was on Hamilton street and in the charges some thirty or forty strikers were pricked by the bayonets. After a passage had been forced the military had all it could do to keep the howling mob from chasing the wagons.

IMMIGRANTS INCREASE.

Large Increase Last Year Over the Previous Year.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—A statement prepared by the commissioner of immigration shows the number of immigrants who arrived in this country during the fiscal year ending June 30, to be 343,267. compared with 258,536 during the fiscal year 1895. The countries from which the immigrants came are as follows: Austro-Hungary, 65,103; Italy, 68,060; Russia, 52,136: Germany, 31,885; United Kingdom, 64,637; all other countries, 61,446. The whole number debarred and returned during the year was 3,037, as follows: Paupers, 2,010; contract laborers, 777; idiot, 1; insane, 10; diseased, 22. Returned within one year because of having become public charges, 238. The number debarred and returned in 1895 was 2,596.

TWENTY-TWO MEN DROWNED.

Boat Overturned at Cleveland With Awful Fatality.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 17.—An ore steamer which had just been loaded at the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad docks, turned over by the shifting of the cargo. It is believed that twenty-two men were drowned. The bodies of fourteen men have been recovered. The steamer, which was over-loaded, was a very small one and the wash of a large one caused the trouble.

CLEVELAND, July 18.—Sixteen dead bodies have been recovered from the river where the ore steamer sank. At least three are still missing.

Teller Endorses Bryan.

MANITOU, Col., July 20.—Teller and his colleagues who bolted the St. Louis convention have issued an address endorsing Bryan and Sewall and urging that all silver forces be brought to the support of the democratic ticket.

Gold Reserve Below $10,000,000.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The treasury yesterday lost $1,184,900 in gold coin and bars, of which $900,000 in gold coin was for export. This leaves the true amount of the reserve $97,355,778.

Sorrow for Ben Tillman.

ABBEVILLE, S. C., July 17.—Miss Addie Tillman, eldest daughter of Senator Tillman, Rev. Robert Lee and a young lady were killed by lightning at Brevard, N. C.

TERSE NEWS.

An attempt was made recently to assassinate President Faure, of France. The president had gone to the Longchamps to review the troops. As he entered the field a man in the crowd fired a revolver at him, missing him. The would-be assassin was at once arrested. He declared he fired a blank cartridge and had no intention of killing the president. The man gave his name as Francois. He is the man who, some time ago, in order to draw a pension through supposed grievances, fired his revolver in the chamber of deputies. He declares the sole purpose of his act was to secure a hearing of his grievances by the president.

Lebanon, Mo., dispatch: Mr. Bland has received many telegrams urging him to become a candidate for governor. He has issued a statement that he will not be a candidate for governor; that he does not want the nomination, and under no circumstances would he enter the gubernatorial race. He made this statement in the most positive and emphatic manner, leaving no doubt that he meant it, and that further effort on the part of his friends to induce him to become a candidate for governor would be useless. In this connection Mr. Bland said he was a candidate for the democratic nomination for congress in this, his old district. He desires to go back to congress to make the fight for free silver in the house.

THE FATAL GLOVE.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER XIV.—(CONTINUED.)

"You will not die, I bore it, and still live; and it is so much harder for me, because I have to bear it all alone. You have your religion to help you, Margie. Surely that will bear you up! I have heard all you pious people prate enough of its service in time of trouble to remember that consolation."

"Don't, Alexandrine. It is sinful to scorn God's holy religion. Yes, you are right; it will help me. God himself will help me, if I ask him. He knows how much I stand in need of it."

"I am glad you are so likely to be supported," returned the girl, half earnestly, half-contemptuously. "Are you satisfied in regard to Mr. Archer Trevlyn?"

"I will not credit it!" cried Margie, passionately. "He did not do that deed! He could not! So good, and noble, and pitiful of all suffering humanity! And beside, what motive could he have?"

"The motive was all-powerful. Has not Mr. Trevlyn, by his own confession, loved you from his youth up?"

"Yes."

"And Paul Linmere was about to become your husband. Could there be a more potent reason for Archer Trevlyn to desire Mr. Linmere's death? He was an obstacle which could be removed in no other way than by death, because you had promised your father to marry him, and you could not falsify your word. All men are weak and liable to sin; is Trevlyn any exception? Margie, I have told you frankly what I know. You can credit it or not. I leave it with you; decide it as you think best. It is eight o'clock. I will go now, for it is time for your lover to come for you."

"O, I cannot meet him—not to-night! I must have time to think—time to collect my thoughts! My head whirls so, and everything is so dark! Stay, Alexandrine, and excuse me to him. Say I have a headache—anything to quiet him. I cannot see him now! I should go mad! Let me have a night to think of it!"

Alexandrine put her hand on the soft hair of the bowed head.

"My poor Margie! it is hard for you. Hark! there is the bell. He has come. Will you not go down?"

"No, no, no! Do what you judge best, and leave me to myself and my God."

Alexandrine went out, and Margie, locking the door after her, flung herself down on the carpet and buried her face in the pillows of the sofa.

Miss Lee swept down the staircase, her dark, bright face resplendent, her bearing haughty as that of an empress. Arch was in the parlor. He looked up eagerly as the door opened, but his countenance fell when he saw that it was only Miss Lee. She greeted him cordially.

"Good evening, Mr. Trevlyn. I am deputized to receive you, and my good intentions must be accepted in place of more fervent demonstrations."

"I am happy to see you, Miss Lee. Where is Margie?"

"She is in her room, somewhat indisposed. She begged me to ask you to excuse her, as she is unable to come down, and of course cannot have the pleasure of going with you to the opera."

"Sick? Margie sick!" he exclaimed, anxiously. "What can be the matter? She was well enough three hours ago."

"O, do not be uneasy. It is nothing serious. A headache, I think. She will be well after a night's rest. Cannot I prevail on you to sit down?"

"I think not, to-night, thank you. I will call to-morrow. Give Margie my best love, and tell her how sorry I am that she is ill."

Alexandrine promised, and Mr. Trevlyn bowed himself out. She put her hand to her forehead, which seemed almost bursting with the strange weight there.

"Guilty or not guilty," she muttered, "what does it matter to me? I love him, and that is enough!"

CHAPTER XV.

THE long night passed away, as all nights, however long and dark they may be, will pass away.

Margie had not slept. She had paced her chamber until long after midnight, utterly disregarding Alexandrine, who had knocked repeatedly at her door, and at last, overcome by weariness, she had sunk down in a chair by the open window, and sat there, gazing blankly out into the night, with its purple heavens, and its glory of sparkling stars.

Nothing could have tempted Margie to have credited such a story of her lover, had it not been for the overwhelming evidence of her own senses. Ever since the night of Paul Linmere's assassination, she had at times been tortured with agonizing doubts. From the first she had been morally sure whose lips had touched her hand that night in the graveyard; she knew that no other presence than that of Archer Trevlyn had the power to influence her as she had been influenced. She knew that he had been there, though she had not seen him; and for what purpose had he been there? It was a question she had asked herself a thousand times!

There could be no doubt any longer. She was forced to that conclusion at last; her heart sinking like lead in her bosom as she came to acknowledge it. In a moment of terrible temptation, Arch Trevlyn had stained his hand with blood! And for her sake!

There was a violent warfare in her heart. Her love for Archer Trevlyn had not sprung up in a day; its growth had been slow, and it had taken deep root. Oh, how hard it was to give up the blissful dream! She thought of his early life—how it had been full of temptation—how his noble nature had been warped and perverted by the evil influences that had surrounded him, and for a while the temptation was strong upon her soul to forgive him everything—to ignore all the past, and take him into her life as though the fearful story she had just listened to had been untold. Marry a murderer!

"Oh, God!" she cried in horror, as the whole extent of the truth burst upon her; "Oh, my God, pity and aid me!"

She sank down on her knees, and though her lips uttered no sound, her heart prayed as only hearts can pray when wrung with mortal suffering. Archer Trevlyn must be given up; from that there could be no appeal. Henceforth he must be to her as though he had never been. She must put him entirely out of her life—out of her thoughts—out of her sleeping and waking dreams.

But she could give him no explanation of her change of mind. She had passed her word—nay, she had sworn never to reveal aught that Miss Lee had told her, and a promise was binding. But he would not need any explanation. His own guilty conscience would tell him why he was renounced.

She took off the rose-colored dress in which she had arrayed herself to meet him, and folded it away in a drawer of her wradrobe, together with every other adornment that she had worn that night. They would always be her painful reminders of that terrible season of anguish and despair. When all were in, she shut them away from her sight, turned the key upon them, and flung it far out of the window.

Then she opened her writing desk, and took out all the little notes he had written to her, read them all over, and holding them one by one to the blaze of the lamp, watched them with a sort of stony calmness until they shrivelled and fell in ashes, black as her hopes, to the floor. Then his gifts; a few simple things. Those she did not look at; she put them hastily in a box, sealed them up, and wrote his address on the cover.

The last task was the hardest. She must write him a note, telling him that all was over between them. The gray light of a clouded morning found her making the effort. But for a long time her pen refused to move; her hand seemed powerless. She felt weak and helpless as a very infant. But it was done at last, and she read it over, wondering that she was alive to read it:

"Mr. Archer Trevlyn, Sir: Yesterday afternoon, when I last saw you, I did not think that before twenty-four hours had elapsed I should be under the necessity of inditing to you this letter. Henceforth, you and I must be as strangers. Not all the wealth and influence of the universe could tempt me to become your wife, now that my eyes are opened. I renounce you utterly and entirely, and no word or argument of yours can change me. Therefore, do not attempt to see me, for with my own consent I will never look upon your face again. I deem no explanation necessary; your own conscience will tell you why I have been forced to make this decision. I return to you with this note everything that can serve to remind me of you, and ask you to do me the favor to burn all that you may have in your possession which once was mine. Farewell, now and forever.

"MARGARET HARRISON."

There remained still something more to be done. Margie knew that Archer Trevlyn would seek her out, and demand an explanation from her own lips, and this must never be. She could not see him now; she was not certain that she could ever see him again. She dared not risk the influence his personal presence might have upon her. She must leave New York. But where should she go? She had scarcely asked the question before thought answered her.

Far away in the northern part of New Hampshire, resided old Nellie Day, the woman who had nursed her, and whom she had not seen for twelve years. Nellie was a very quiet, discreet person, and had been very warmly attached to the Harrison family. She had married late in life a worthy farmer, and giving up her situation in New York, had gone with him to the little out-of-the-way village of Lightfield. Margie had kept up a sort of desultory correspondence with her, and in every letter that the old lady wrote she had urged Margie to visit her in her country home. It had never been convenient to do so, but now this place was suggested to her at once, and to Lightfield she decided to go.

She consulted her watch. It was 5 o'clock; the train for the north, the first express, left at half past six. There would be time. She would leave all her business affairs in the hands of Mr. Farley, her legal adviser and general manager; and as to the house, the maiden aunt who resided with her could keep up the establishment until her return, if she ever did return.

She packed a few of her plainest dresses and some other indispensables, in a trunk, arrayed herself in a dark traveling suit, and rang for Florine. The girl looked at her in silent amazement. Margie steadied her voice, and spoke carelessly enough.

"Florine, I have been obliged to leave home very suddenly. My preparations are all complete. I thought I would not wake you as I had so little to do. Tell Peter to have the carriage at the door at six precisely, and bring up Leo's breakfast, and a cup of hot coffee for me."

At six o'clock—having written a note to Mr. Farley, and one to her aunt, giving no explanations, but merely saying she had been called away—she put on her bonnet, entered the carriage and was driven to the depot. And before nine-tenths of New York had thought of leaving their beds, she was being whirled rapidly northward, her only companion Leo, who, watchful and alert, lay curled up on the seat beside her.

CHAPTER XVI.

ARCHER TREVLYN had not slept that night. Some sense of impending evil, some demon of uneasiness oppressed him strangely. He tossed about until daybreak, then he rose, dressed himself, and went out. Everything was still on the streets except the clatter of the milk carts, and the early drays and huckster wagons. The air was damp and dense, and struck a deadly chill to the very marrow of this unseasonable wanderer. He walked a few squares, and then returned to his hotel, more oppressed than when he went out.

Did ever time move so slowly before? Would the morning never pass? He wrote some urgent letters, read the damp morning paper, without the slightest notion of contents, and went down to his breakfast, to come away again leaving it untasted. Eight o'clock. The earliest possible hour at which it would be proper to call on Miss Harrison was eleven. Three mortal hours first! How could he ever endure it? She might be very ill. She might even be dying! Archer, with the foolish inconsistency of love, magnified every evil until he was nearly beside himself with dread, lest she might be worse than Miss Lee had represented

Nine o'clock struck; he was walking the floor in a state of nervous excitement which would have forced him ere long to have broken all rules of etiquette and taken his way to Harrison House, had not fate saved him the necessity.

A waiter entered, and brought in a letter and a package. He snatched them both, and saw they were directed in Margie's handwriting. For a moment his heart stood still with a deadly fear. Great drops of perspiration covered his forehead, and he dropped letter and package to the floor. Why was she writing to him when she must expect to see him in a few hours? And that package! What did it contain?

He picked it up, and tore off the wrappings. The betrothal ring rolled out and fell with a hollow sound on the floor. The ring he had put upon her finger—the ring he had seen her kiss more than once! He looked over the contents of the box hurriedly; every little thing he had ever given her was there, even to a bunch of faded violets!

But the letter? He had almost forgotten it, in pondering over the dread significance of the return of his presents. He took it up and broke the seal with slow deliberation. It would not tell him any news, but it might contain an explanation. His face grew pale as ashes as he read, and he put his hand to his heart, as though he had received a blow there. Twice he read it through, and at the last reading he seemed to realize its dread portent.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

DOBSON FOR SECRETARY OF STATE, LADD FOR JUDGE.

Conger and James for Electors-at-Large, Dawson for Railroad Commissioner Remley, McCarthy and Herriott Renominated.

For Secretary of State—G. L. DOBSON, of Polk county.

For Auditor of State—C. G. McCARTHY, of Story county.

For Treasurer of State—JOHN HERRIOTT, of Guthrie county.

For Attorney General—MILTON REMLEY, of Johnson county.

For Railroad Commissioner—E. A. DAWSON, of Bremer county.

For Judge of Supreme Court—SCOTT M. LADD, of O'Brien county.

DES MOINES, July 16.—At 11 o'clock yesterday morning the republican state convention was called to order by Chairman McMillan, of the state central committee. Rev. H. H. Green of Decorah offered prayer and the the chairman then announced the illness of Rollin J. Wilson, and introduced Congressman Hepburn as temporary chairman. His address was received with enthusiasm. After naming the committees the convention adjourned. The committee on resolutions was composed as follows: First District, Col. D. G. Palmer, of Washington county; Second, Senator Ellis, of Clinton; Third, J. H. Funk, of Hardin; Fourth, G. N. Haugan, of Worth; Fifth, S. B. Packard, of Marshall; Sixth, W. G. Mieservey, of Jasper; Seventh, A. L. Wood, of Madison; Eighth, J. B. Harsh, of Union; Ninth, Edward Lockwood, of Harlan; Tenth, Geo. E. Roberts, of Webster; Eleventh, E. P. Heizer, of Woodbury.

The districts selected candidates for electors as follows: First district, Felix T. Hughes, of Keokuk county; Second, John Cownie, of Marengo; Third, George H. Richardson, of Wright; Fourth, Dr. Amos Babcock, of Chickasaw; Fifth, Welcome Mowry, of Tama; Sixth, W. A. Nichol, of Monroe; Seventh, E. H. Addison, of Story; Eighth, Paul McLean, of Union; Ninth, D. L. Heinsheimer, of Mills; Tenth, D. E. Chase, of Hamilton; Eleventh, Henry Lindermink, of Sioux.

When the convention was called to order in the afernoon the committee on credentials reported full delegations from each county and the report was adopted. Smith McPherson was made permanent chairman, and addressed the convention briefly. Senator Allison was called for and addressed the convention. He was followed by Senator Gear. The report of the committee on resolutions was presented by Chairman Roberts and adopted by acclamation.

For secretary of state Messrs. Dobson, Chassell, Byrkit and Hanford were in the field. Mr. Dobson was nominated an the third ballot by the following vote. Dobson 642, Chassel 321, Hanford 176, Byrkit 2.

The nominations of C. G. McCarthy as auditor of state, John Herriot as treasurer of state, and Milton Remley as attorney general were made unanimous by acclamation.

For supreme judge Messrs. Weaver, Leggett, Ryan, Waterman, Harvey Burnham, Ladd and Lewis were the candidates. On the sixth ballot Ladd was nominated by a vote of 704 to 430 for Weaver and 4 for Leggett.

Messrs. Campbell, Dawson and Kemble were in the race for railroad commissioner, and Dawson was nominated on the first ballot by the following vote: Dawson 708, Campbell 224, Kemble 202.

Major E. H. Conger, of Polk county, and Hon. Ed. S. James, of Clinton county, were unanimously selected as electors-at-large, and then after the electors of the congressional districts had been approved and ratified by the convention, the convention adjourned sine die.

Following is the new state central committee: First, H. O. Weaver, Louisa; Second, J. M. Kemble, Muscatine; Third, A. M. Shellito, Buchanan; Fourth, T. L. Green, Fayette; Fifth, W. W. Lee, Tama; Sixth, N. E. Kendall, Monroe; Seventh, J. M. Kittleman, Warren; Eighth, John D. Burrows, Page; Ninth, I. M. Treynor, Pottawattamie; Tenth, John Stevenson, Greene; Eleventh, H. G. McMillan, Lyon.

At a meeting of the committee Chairman McMillan and Secretary Treynor were re-elected.

No Dutch Bank in China.

LONDON, July 18.—According to a dispatch from Pekin, the petition of the Duetsch-Asiatische bank for permission to establish a bank at Pekin has been refused. The refusal is attributed to Russian influences. Negotiations are still in progress for the establishment of an American bank at the Chinese capital.

Brazilian-British Imbroglio.

NEW YORK, July 17.—The Herald's correspondent in Rio Janerio telegraphs that a motion was made in the Brazilian house of deputies to suspend diplomatic relations with Great Britian until the Trinidad incident should be settled. The government opposed the motion and it was defeated.

NOTES OF THE DAY.

The city of Jerusalem is becoming modernized. There are now eight printing offices in the city.

There is a lime tree at Nuestadt, Wurtemberg, which is said to be the largest in Europe. It is over 1,000 years old.

In an Eastbourne, England, paper "A Baronet's Grandson" offers to give lessons in bicycle riding at 5 shillings a lesson.

The night watchman in Albany, Mo., rings the big bell when he thinks the clouds indicate the approach of a heavy storm.

According to Leuwenhoek there are animalculae so small that 10,000 of them could be hidden under the finest grain of sand.

The number of horses killed for consumption as food in Paris last year was 23,186, this being exclusive of 43 mules and 383 donkeys.

According to the method which is now adopted for reckoning leap years in England, December, January and February will be the summer months about 720,000 years hence.

Wyoming is to have a new national park. A treaty has been concluded with the Shoshone and Arapahoe tribes for the cession to the government of a section of land ten miles square in one corner of the reservation.

A graphic idea of the immense size of Siberia may be gleaned from the following comparison: All of the states, kingdoms, principalities, empires, etc., of Europe (except Russia), and all of the United States, including Alaska, could be placed side by side in Siberia, and yet but little more than cover that immense territory.

The largest gray wolf killed by dogs, so far as yet heard from, was taken at the Cave hills, Wyoming. The animal measured 5 feet 8 inches from the point of his nose to the root of his tail and stood 34 inches high. From the point of his nose to the top of his head was 12 inches, and his hide alone weighed twenty pounds.

He Was Surprised.

"I," shouted the orator, waiving his hands towards the offended heavens, "am a true friend to labor."

"By Gosh, Bill," rose the voice of the man who had known the orator from boyhood, "that is the fust time I ever knowed you two was acquainted."

Awkward.

Maud—I think you are real mean to refuse. You always promised you would be my bridesmaid.

Marie—True enough, dear. But I did not know you were going to marry a man I had rejected.

Poor Outlook.

"What are you thinking about, little man?" asked a charming hostess of a small boy visitor.

"Mamma told me not to take two oranges," said the little man "and I was thinking I'd be mighty lucky if I got one."

Good Soldier.

Bunson (amazed)—That your uncle! Why, man you told me your uncle had both legs carried away at Bull Run!

Jimson—So he did. He carried them away himself, pretty fast, I tell you.

Travel With a Friend

Who will protect you from those enemies—nausea, malaria, indigestion and the sickness produced by rocking on the waves, and sometimes by inland travelling over the rough beds of ill laid railroads. Such a friend is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Ocean mariners, yachtsmen, commercial and theatrical agents and tourists testify to the protective potency of this effctive safeguard, which conquers also rheumatism, nervousness and biliousness.

Idleness is the burial of a living man.—Jeremy Taylor.

A Child Enjoys

The pleasant flavor, gentle action and soothing effects of Syrup of Figs, when in need of a laxative, and if the father or mother be costive or bilious, the most gratifying results follow its use; so that it is the best family remedy known, and every family should have a bottle on hand.

Mrs. Reed, wife of the speaker, is said to be exceedingly glad that her husband was not nominated for president at the St. Louis convention.

I believe Piso's Cure is the only medicine that will cure consumption.—Anna M. Ross, Williamsport, Pa., Nov. 12, '95.

A little dry corn starch or pulverized soapstone put on the hands in warm weather will prevent any perpiration injuring kid gloves.

Of every man and woman living to-day at the age of 25, one out of every two will live, according to statistics, to be 65 years of age.

The Woman, The Man, And The Pill.

She was a good woman. He loved her. She was his wife. The pie was good; his wife made it; he ate it. But the pie disagreed with him, and he disagreed with his wife. Now he takes a pill after pie and is happy. So is his wife. The pill he takes is Ayer's.

The duel between two locomotive engines will occur at the state fair in September as first advocated by the capital. It will be a great feature. A temporary railroad track will be laid into the fair grounds, and two engines moving at the rate of thirty miles an hour will meet in full view of the people at the amphitheatre. This will be the third exhibition of the kind in the world, got up expressly to amuse the people. The first one was at Columbus Ohio, and the other was at Chicago recently. Both attracted big crowds. The attraction will probably accur Wednesday, Sept. 9th, and as almost everybody will want to see it, the gate receipts will be large on that day.—Ex.

A valuable exchange explains the position of a newspaper as follows: Suppose that a farmer raises 1,000 bushel of wheat a year, and also sells this to 1,000 persons in all parts of the country, a great portion of them saying, "I will hand you a dollar in a short time." The farmer does not want to be small and says, "All right!" Soon the 1,000 bushel are gone, but he has nothing to show for it, and he then realizes that he has fooled away his whole crop and its value to him is due in a thousand little driblets, consequently he is seriously embarrassed in business because his debtors, each owing him one dollar, treat it as a small matter, and think it would not help much. Continue this kind of business year in and year out, as the publisher does, how long will he stand it? A moment's thought would convince anyone that a publisher has couse for persistent dunning, —Newspaper Maker.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhœa set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhœa but kept getting worse. I sent him this remedy, only four doses were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by J. L. Harr.

Hotel Orleans Not to Close.

There is no truth whatever in the report recently published in a number of Iowa newspapers that Hotel Orleans at Spirit Lake is to close on account of alleged trouble with the authorities over the sale of intoxicants. The season is now at its height, the Orleans is well filled with guests and will remain open until Sept. 1st.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

AN OLD FASHIONED MOTHER, SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

"Moreover His Mother Made Him a Little Coat and Brought It to Him From Year to Year"—First Book of Samuel 2:19.

THE stories of Deborah and Abigail are very apt to discourage a woman's soul. She says within herself: "It is impossible that I ever achieve any such grandeur of character, and I don't mean to try;" as though a child should refuse to play the eight notes because he cannot execute a "William Tell." This Hannah of the text differs from the persons I just named. She was an ordinary woman, with ordinary intellectual capacity, placed in ordinary circumstances, and yet, by extraordinary piety, standing out before all the ages to come, the model Christian mother. Hannah was the wife of Elkanah, who was a person very much like herself—unromantic and plain, never having fought a battle or been the subject of a marvelous escape. Neither of them would have been called a genius. Just what you and I might be, that was Elkanah and Hannah. The brightest time in all the history of that family was the birth of Samuel. Although no star ran along the heavens pointing down to his birthplace, I think the angels of God stooped at the coming of so wonderful a prophet. As Samuel had been given in answer to prayer, Elkanah and all his family, save Hannah, started up to Shiloh to offer sacrifices of thanksgiving. The cradle where the child slept was altar enough for Hannah's grateful heart; but when the boy was old enough she took him to Shiloh, and took three bullocks and an ephah of flour and a bottle of wine, and made offering of sacrifice unto the Lord, and there, according to a previous vow, she left him; for there he was to stay all the days of his life, and minister in the sanctuary. Years rolled on; and every year Hannah made with her own hand a garment for Samuel, and took it over to him. The lad would have got along well without that garment, for I suppose he was well clad by the ministry of the temple; but Hannah could not be contented unless she was all the time doing something for her darling boy. "Moreover his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him from year to year, when she came up with her husband to offer the yearly sacrifice."

Hannah stands before you, then, today, in the first place, as an industrious mother. There was no need that she work. Elkanah, her husband, was far from poor. He belonged to a distinguished family; for the Bible tells us that he was the son of Jeroham, the son of Elihu, the son of Tohu, the son of Zuph. "Who were they?" you say. I do not know; but they were distinguished people, no doubt, or their names would not have been mentioned. Hannah might have seated herself in her family, and, with folded arms, and dishevelled hair, read novels from year to year, if there had been any to read; but when I see her making that garment and taking it over to Samuel, I know she is industrious from principle as well as from pleasure. God would not have a mother become a drudge or a slave; he would have her employ all the helps possible in this day in the rearing of her children. But Hannah ought never to be ashamed to be found making a coat for Samuel. Most mothers need no counsel in this direction. The wrinkles on their brow, the pallor on their cheek, the thimble-mark on their finger, attest that they are faithful in the maternal duties. The bloom and the brightness and the vivacity of girlhood have given place to the grander dignity and usefulness and industry of motherhood. But there is a heathenish idea getting abroad in some of the families of Americans; there are mothers who banish themselves from the home circle. For three-fourths of their maternal duties they prove themselves incompetent. They are ignorant of what their children wear, and what their children eat, and what their children read. They entrust to irresponsible persons these young immortals, and allow them to be under influences which may cripple their bodies, or taint their purity or spoil their manners, or destroy their souls. From the awkward cut of Samuel's coat you know his mother Hannah did not make it. Out from under flaming chandeliers, and off from imported carpets, and down the granite stairs, there is coming a great crowd of children in this day, untrained, saucy, incompetent for all the practical duties of life, ready to be caught in the first whirl of crime and sensuality. Indolent and unfaithful mothers will make indolent and unfaithful children. You cannot expect neatness and order in any house where the daughters see nothing but slatternliness and upside-downativeness in their parents. Let Hannah be idle, and most certainly Samuel will grow up idle. Who are the industrious men in all our occupations and professions? Who are they managing the merchandise of the world, building the walls, tinning the roofs, weaving the carpets, making the laws, governing the nations, making the earth to quake and heave and roar and rattle with the tread of gigantic enterprises? Who are they? For the most part, they descended from industrious mothers, who, in the old homestead, used to spin their own yarn, and weave their own carpets, and plait their own doormats, and flag their own chairs, and do their own work. The stalwart men and the influential women of this day, ninety-nine out of a hundred of them, came from such an illustrious ancestry of hard knuckles and homespun. And who are these people in society, light as froth, blown every whither of temptation and fashion—the peddlers of filthy stories, the dancing-jacks of political parties, the scum of society, the tavern-lounging, store-infesting, the men of low wink, and filthy chuckle, and brass breastpin, and rotten associations? For the most part, they came from mothers idle and disgusting, the scandal-mongers of society, going from house to house attending to everybody's business but their own; believing in witches and ghosts, and horseshoes to keep the devil out of the churn, and by a godless life setting their children on the very verge of hell. The mothers of Samuel Johnson, and of Alfred the Great, and of Isaac Newton, and of St. Augustine, and of Richard Cecil, and of President Edwards, for the most part were industrious, hard-working mothers. Now, while I congratulate all Christian mothers upon the wealth and the modern science which may afford them all kinds of help, let me say that every mother ought to be observant of her children's walk, her children's behavior, her children's food, her children's books, her children's companionships. However much help Hannah may have, I think she ought every year, at least, make one garment for Samuel. The Lord have mercy on the man who is so unfortunate as to have had a lazy mother! Again: Hannah stands before you today as an intelligent mother. From the way in which she talked in this chapter, and from the way she managed this boy, you know she was intelligent. There are no persons in a community who need to be so wise and well-informed as mothers. O, this work of culturing children for this world and the next. This child is timid, and it must be roused up and pushed out into activities. This child is forward, and he must be held back, and tamed down into modesty and politeness. Rewards for one, punishments for another. That which will make George will ruin John. The rod is necessary in one case, while a frown of displeasure is more than enough in another. Whipping and a dark closet do not exhaust all the rounds of domestic discipline. There have been children who have grown up and gone to glory without ever having had their ears boxed. O, how much care and intelligence is necessary in the rearing of children! But in this day, when there are so many books on this subject, no parent is excusable in being ignorant of the best mode of bringing up a child. If parents knew more of dietetics, there would not be so many dyspeptic stomachs and weak nerves and inactive livers among children. If parents knew more of physiology, there would not be so many curved spines and cramped chests and inflamed throats and diseased lungs as there are among children. If parents knew more of art, and were in sympathy with all that is beautiful, there would not be so many children coming out in the world with boorish proclivities. If parents knew more of Christ, and practised more of his religion, there would not be so many little feet already starting on the wrong road, and all around as voices of riot and blasphemy would not come up with such ecstacy of infernal triumph. The eaglets in the eyrie have no advantage over the eaglets of a thousand years ago; the kids have no superior way of climbing up the rocks than the old goats taught them hundreds of years ago; the whelps know no more now than did the whelps of ages ago—they are taught no more by the lions of the desert; but it is a shame that in this day, when there are so many opportunities of improving ourselves in the best manner of culturing children, that so often there is no more advancement in this respect than there has been among the kids and the eaglets and the whelps.

Again: Hannah stands before you today as a Christian mother. From her prayers, and from the way she consecrated her boy to God, I know she was good. A mother may have the finest culture, the most brilliant surroundings; but she is not fit for her duties unless she be a Christian mother. There may be well-read libraries in the house; and music in the parlor; and the canvas of the best artists adorning the walls; and the wardrobe be crowded with tasteful apparel; and the children be wonderful for their attainments, and make the house ring with laughter and innocent mirth; but there is something wofully lacking in that house, if it be not also the residence of a Christian mother. I bless God that there are not many prayerless mothers. The weight of responsibility is so great that they feel the need of a divine hand to help, and a divine heart to sympathize. Thousands of mothers have been led into the kingdom of God by the hands of their little children. There are hundreds of mothers today who would not have been Christians had it not been for the prattle of their little ones. Standing some day in the nursery, they bethought themselves, "this child God has given me to raise for eternity. What is my influence upon it? Not being a Christian myself, how can I ever expect him to become a Christian. Lord help me!" O are there anxious mothers who know nothing of the infinite help of religion? Then I commend to you Hannah, the pious mother of Samuel. Do not think it is absolutely impossible that your children come up iniquitous. Out of just such fair brows and bright eyes and soft hands and innocent hearts, crime gets its victims—extirpating purity from the heart, and rubbing out the smoothness from the brow, and quenching the lustre of the eye, and shriveling up and poisoning and putrefying and scathing and scalding and blasting and burning with shame and woe.

Every child is a bundle of tremendous possibilities; and whether that child shall come forth in life, its heart attuned to the eternal harmonies, and after a life of usefulness on earth, to go to a life of joy in heaven; or, whether across it shall jar eternal discords, and after a life of wrong-doing on earth, it shall go to a home of impenetrable darkness and an abyss of immeasurable plunge, is being decided by nursery song and Sabbath lesson and evening prayer, and walk and ride and look and frown and smile. O, how many children in glory! crowding all the battlements and lifting a million-voiced hosanna, brought to God through Christian parentage! One hundred and twenty clergymen together, and they were telling their experience and their ancestry; and of the one hundred and twenty clergymen, how many of them, do you suppose assigned, as the means of their conversion, the influence of a Christian mother? One hundred out of the one hundred and twenty! Philip Doddridge was brought to God by the Scripture lesson on the Dutch tile of the chimney fire-place. The mother thinks she is only rocking a child; but at the same time she may be rocking the destiny of empires—rocking the fate of nations—rocking the glories of heaven. The same maternal power that may lift a child up may press a child down. A daughter came to a worldly mother and said she was anxious about her sins, and she had been praying all night. The mother said: "Oh, stop praying! I don't believe in praying. Get over all those religious notions, and I'll give you a dress that will cost five hundred dollars and you may wear it next week to that party." The daughter took the dress; and she moved in the gay circle, the gayest of the gay that night; and sure enough, all religious impressions were gone and she stopped praying. A few months after, she came to die, and in her closing moments said: "Mother, I wish you would bring me that dress that cost five hundred dollars." The mother thought it was a very strange request; but she brought it to please the dying child. "Now," said the daughter, "mother, hang that dress on the foot of my bed;" and the dress was hung there, on the foot of the bed. Then the dying girl got up on one elbow and looked at her mother and then pointed to the dress, and said: "Mother, that dress is the price of my soul!" Oh, what a momentous thing it is to be a mother!

Again, and lastly: Hannah stands before you today, the rewarded mother. For all the coats she made for Samuel; for all the prayers she offered for him; for the discipline she exerted over him, she got abundant compensation in the piety and the usefulness and the popularity of her son Samuel; and that is true in all ages. Every mother gets full pay for all the prayers and tears in behalf of her children. That man useful in commercial life; that man prominent in the profession; that master mechanic—why, every step he takes in life has an echo of gladness in the old heart that long ago taught him to be Christian and heroic and earnest. The story of what you have done or what you have written, of the influence you have exerted, has gone back to the old homestead—for there is someone always ready to carry good tidings—and that story makes the needle in the old mother's tremulous hand fly quicker, and the flail in the father's hand come down upon the barn floor with a more vigorous thump. Parents love to hear good news from their children. Do you send them good news always? Look out for the young man who speaks of his father as the "governor," the "squire," or the "old chap." Look out for the young woman who calls her mother her "maternal ancestor," or the "old woman." "The eye that mocketh at his father and refuseth to obey his mother, the ravens of the valley shall pick it out and the young eagles shall eat it."

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

The republicans of Iowa, assembled in convention, mindful of their duty in the ventful contest already begun, proud of their past and confident of their future, submit to the people of the state the principles which they deem essential to the welfare of their country.

We heartily approve the platform of the party announced at the national republican convention recently held in St. Louis, and we pledge our fellow republicans throughout the United States to carry all its declarations to triumphant success in the coming election.

We cordially indorse the candidates of that convention, and we hasten to assure our sister states that Iowa, speaking through a magnificent majority, will cast her electoral vote for Wiliam McKinley and Garret A. Hobart.

We recognize the revolutionary character of the convention lately held in Chicago. We appreciate the dangers of its startling doctrines and the immeasurable disasters that would follow their adoption by the government. We have seen the ruin accomplished by the free trade declaration of 1892, and we have now hard a demand that the ruin shall be made complete by the overthrow of our financial system and the substitution of an experiment that can result only in untold misery and incalculable loss.

We believe that every possible fluctuation of money standards between the Iowa producer and his consumer is a marg[illegible] between them. If it is not an advantage to have a common standard with his customer abroad, then it is no advantage to have a common standard with the other communities of this union.

In the interest of our export trade, for the furtherance of the policy of of reciprocity, and for the promotion of our commerce, as well as for the benefit of our silver producers, we pledge support of the Iowa representatives in congress to the promotion of an international agreement to establish the joint standard universally; and from the same considerations to oppose the proposition to carry the United States to silver monometallism.

We are opposed to the change to a single silver standard because it will decrease and not increase the supply of money in the country; because instead of restoring confidence it will destroy credits; instead of inspiring enterprise it will spread alarm; instead of aiding the debtor it will involve him in bankruptcy; instead of furnishing employment to labor it will make more uncertain and unremunerative that which it has, and instead of benefiting the producer and farmer it will injure them, and finally ,because it would do infinite injustice and involve our country in repudiation and dishonor.

We denounce as false the statement of the democratic party that we have contracted or that our policy will contract the volume of our currency; on the contrary, we assert that the principle we advocate is the only principle that will give to the country the money, stable in its purchasing power and adequate in amount, which the prosperity of the people demands.

The republican party, under its policy, assures the people of an ample currency, composed of gold, silver and paper, no one kind preferable to another; none of it subject in the hands of the people to variation of value, but every dollar as good as gold and there held by the real power of the government of the United States.

We stand upon the record which the republican party has made. We recall the prophecies of our antagonists in Iowa in 1878 that specie payments would ruin our state, and we point to the period of never to be equalled prosperity which ensued from 1880 to 1892, with every dollar of our currency kept at the gold standard, without the sale of a bond or a whisper against our credit

We re-affirm our faith in the doctrine of protection to American labor, and the policy which is part of it, the promotion of our foreign trade by reciprocal agreements. Under this consistent and practical policy the development of our limitless resources will be resumed, enterprise will spring into action at a million opportunities, capital will go out seeking for the wage earner, and when the table of the workingman is again covered with plenty the American farmer will know good times once more. We hold that the prices of our farm products can be restored only by the recovery of the markets to which we had access four years ago, and through the return to our home consumers of the buying power which was theirs four years ago. The Iowa farmer needs no other condition to assure this prosperity than those which maintained the level of his prices, increased the value of his farm, and reduced the cost of his purchases during the four splendid years of President Harrison's administration By the restoration of these conditions, by maintaining the stability of our money and not by debasing its value, the republican party promises him relief. The abandonment of the treaties of reciprocity which had opened the market places of Spanish America and Central Europe to the farm products of the United States has resulted in the almost total exclusion of our breadstuffs and meats from countries affected by the reciprocal agreements of 1891. Thus so-called tariff reform, as managed by the Fifty-third congress, instead of opening new markets for the farm, has closed foreign markets to us and stimulates production by our competitors, at the same time causing an unexampled prostration of its nearest and best customers, the wage-earners of our own land.

The republican party appeals with confidence to the people of Iowa to support it in its purpose to establish the industries and all of the varied interests of production and exchange, upon a stable and certain basis, that the genius and energy of this great people may be free to work out the national prosperity, as they did in that marvelous decade following 1880.

"OLD STATE OF PIKE."

THE HOME OF THE STARK BROTHERS' NURSERIES.

One of the Biggest Institutions in the World—Its Trade Extends to Nearly Every Civilized Nation on Earth.

St. Louis Republic, January 7, 1896: One of the largest institutions in Louisiana is the Stark Bro's Nurseries and Orchards company. The trade of the firm extends not only throughout the United States, Canada, Germany, France, Italy, Hungary and other foreign countries, but it has a number of customers both in New Zealand and Australia.

Eighty years ago there came from Kentucky to Pike county the late Judge Stark, then a young man fresh from Old Hickory's New Orleans campaign. He started the nursery and planted the first grafted orchard in the state, having brought the scions on horseback from Kentucky.

The business has descended from father to son, and is now conducted by the third generation, assisted by the fourth. This firm has more than 1,000 traveling solicitors, and employs more people in its offices than would be necessary to run a large manufacturing concern. The extensive packing-houses of the company are adjacent to the city, connected with the railroad by special tracks. From these packing-houses hundreds of carloads of trees are shipped annually. The nursery grounds embrace a number of farms convenient to the city, and even extends to Rockport, Ill., where there is a plant of several million trees.

The peculiarity of the concern is the establishment of large orchards. These orchards in 24 states aggregate nearly 50,000 acres, and more than 3,500,000 trees on the partnership plan. The firm is also interested in as many more trees on the co-operative arrangement. The nurseries have been beneficial not only to their home, but Missouri owes no little of her prestige as a fruit-growing region to the progress and work of development of this firm. The exhibits of this firm, whenever made, attract great attention, and do much to advertise the state. The firm pays large amounts for new varieties of fruit, and conducts the largest business of the kind in America, if not in the world.

Louisiana firms have more traveling men upon the road for them than travel out of any other city of the world of its size. This, of course, is largely due to the large number of men employed by the Stark Bros. Nurseries, who furnish their men the most complete, up-to-date outfit ever issued. They are increasing their force of salesmen daily and room for more.

A Story of Colorado Gold.

The most unique and instructive book yet published about the gold and other features of Cripple Creek district has just been issued by O. W. Crawford, publisher, Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ill. Every page is illustrated with original pictures in three colors, made for this work by Mr. E. S. Rice, the sketch genius of the Rockies. It is a complete exposition of Cripple Creek gold, telling where it is found, how it is found, where it is milled, how it is treated, how it is paid for; all about mines, titles, camping in the mountains and Cripple Park's wonderful Apollinaris Springs, which the Indians called Quleeka, and of which they said, "If you drink the waters always, you will live always." In printing and illustration it is a work of high art. We are not surprised to learn that the second edition is in press, for it is a book from which the oldest miner may get information and entertainment as well. Price, 50c., but if you will send five names and addresses of friends and 25c., stamps or silver, to the publisher, it will be sent postage paid.

Educational,

Attention of the readers is called to the announcement of Notre Dame University in another column of this paper. This noted institution of learning enters upon its fifty-third year with its next session, commencing September 8, 1896. Parents and guardians contemplating sending their boys and young men away from home to school would do well to write for particulars to the University of Notre Dame, Indiana, before making arrangements for their education elsewhere. Nowhere in this broad land are there to be found better facilities for cultivating the mind and heart than are offered at the Notre Dame University.

HER HAPPY DAY.

A CHARMING STORY OF MEDICINE AND MARRIAGE.

Two Open Letters From a Chicago Girl —How Happiness Came to Her.

Among the tens of thousands of women who apply to Mrs. Pinkham for advice and are cured, are many who wish the facts in their cases made public, but do not give permission to publish their names for reasons as obvious as in the following, and no name is ever published without the writer's authority; this is a bond of faith which Mrs. Pinkham has never broken.

Chicago, Jan. 5th, '95.

My dear Mrs. Pinkham:—A friend of mine, Mrs. ——, wants me to write you, because she says: "you did her so much good." I am desperate. Am nineteen years of age, tall, and weighed 138 pounds a year ago. I am now a mere skeleton. From your little book I think my trouble is profuse menstruation. My symptoms are * * * * etc.

Our doctor (my uncle) tells father that I am in consumption, and wants to take me to Florida. Please help me! Tell me what to do, and tell me quickly. I am engaged to be married in September. Shall I live to see the day? * * * * LUCY E. W.

Chicago, June 16th, '95.

My dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

This is a happy day. I am well and gaining weight daily, but shall continue the treatment and Vegetable Compound during the summer, as you suggest. Uncle knows nothing about what you have done for me, because it would make things very unpleasant in the family. I would like to give you a testimonial to publish, but father would not allow it. * * * * I shall be married in September, and as we go to Boston, will call upon you. How can I prove my gratitude? * * * * LUCY E. W.

Just such cases as the above leak out in women's circles, and that is why the confidence of the women of America is bestowed upon Mrs. Pinkham.

Why are not physicians more candid with women when suffering from such ailments?

Women want the truth, and if they cannot get it from their doctor, will seek it elsewhere.

THE LONDON DOGS' HOME.

Bowwows Given Three Days' Grace and Then Destroyed.

Every morning vanloads of canine outcasts stand outside the dogs' home in the Battersea, Park road; and now and again a vanload of calcined bone and ash goes out, says St. James Gazette. There is an interval of five days between the stages. The law requires three. Three days after a dog has been in the hands of the police the original right of ownership in it ceases, and it may be sold or incinerated as convenience dictates. The process is very simple and it goes on in London year in and year out, whether there is a muzzling order in force or not. Every morning a covered van draws up before each of the police stations in the metropolis. On each side are two rows of rings, and at the end is a galvanized iron receptacle. The dangerous dog, if there be one, is brought out of the station and put in the iron box; the harmless wastrels are led from the police yard and tethered one by one to the rings. With the floor-space of the van thus covered with animals, the horse's head is turned toward Battersea. Just now there are not enough of these special vans, and the police have had to requisition vehicles from the green grocer or other local tradesmen. Arrived at the dogs' home, the vans wait their turn to pass into the yard, their occupants filling the air with cries and swelling the greater chorus within the walls of the home. As one van comes out empty another goes in full. The dogs are taken out, their place of origin and description and any marks of identification on the collar entered in a book, and then in groups of tens and twenties are taken into the kennels. There they pass their days of respite, waiting for owners that come not, and spending the hours in incessant barking and in pitiful and friendly appeals to visitors. When the days of grace are past they are led to the lethal chamber. Just now the home is having two clearances a day and is getting a second furnace built for the incineration of the carcasses. Since the 1st of January nearly 12,000 dogs have passed through the gates—the vast majority of them to pass out again in the form of calcined bone and ash, and of these 12,000 nearly half have come in since the issue of the muzzling order. As the home has accommodation for about 2,000 dogs only and is hard put to it to find kennel room, notwithstanding the additional space it has utilized under the railway arch, the rate of destruction can be imagined. The process of destroying the dogs is absolutely painless. The lethal chamber is the invention of Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson, and the writer of this saw it in use recently. It is constructed so as to dispose of 100 animals of the terrier class at a time. The animals are put into a cage divided into two tiers, with light iron bars at the sides. Meanwhile the chamber is filled with narcotic vapor. When the load is made up the doors of the cage are shut, the sliding door of the chamber is raised and the cage is run quickly on the tramrails into the chamber. The death is by anaesthesia, and such a death is death by sleep. The dogs are overcome with drowsiness, the moment they breathe the noxious fumes; in a single minute they are in a deep sleep; in three minutes they are dead. Close by the lethal chamber is the crematorium—a large oven kept at an intense heat by a brick furnace. When the cage is drawn out the carcasses of the animals are cast into it. There is a momentary smell as the hair of their bodies ignites, but that is all. When the process is completed there is nothing but an inodorous ash and incinerated bone.

The Bicycle Inventor.

Nothing can stop the bicycle inventor. His applications are received at the rate of a hundred daily at Washington, and already outnumber the total of washing machines, churns and automatic couplers for railroad cars. He seems to be filled with the idea that a bicycle to be operated by hand instead of foot power is the real, original, long felt want. Such a machine might be operated by the legless wonder of the dime museums, but what any one else would want with it is not clear. Many of the inventions are, however, of merit, and they relate to details in the intricate portions of the machine. There are some new things in the line of package carriers, and in the smooth paved cities a year hence at least 90 per cent of the light delivery of dry goods, millinery, hats, shoes, flowers, confectionery, groceries, provisions, etc., will be through the medium of vehicles operated by boys and young men.—New York Journal.

Profession Escort Duty.

The fact that many riding school professors are called upon every day to accompany young women who are without beaux and want an escort so badly that they are willing to pay $1.50 an hour for one, suggests that herein lies a golden opportunity to turn an honest dollar to the young men who go into society to "entertain" for $5 per evening and supper thrown in, or who do the agreeable to the young ladies at the summer hotels for their board, washing and cigarette money. There is a field for the "professional bicycle escort."—Exchange.

BattleAx PLUG

A GREAT BIG PIECE FOR 10 CENTS

A woman knows what a bargain really is. She knows better than a man. "BATTLE AX" is selected every time by wives who buy tobacco for their husbands. They select it because it is an honest bargain. It is the biggest in size, the smallest in price, and the best in quality. The 5 cent piece is almost as large as the 10 cent piece of other high grade brands.

Everything the farmer sells is low. Who sells low to him? We have repeatedly refused to join, and, therefore, defeated windmill combinations, and have, since '89, reduced the cost of wind power to one-sixth what it was. We believe in low prices, high grades and large sales. No one knows the best pump or prices until he knows ours. We make short hand and long power stroke pumps, with best seamless brass tube cylinder, lower than iron ones—a 2½ x 16 inch at $2.12. Tell your dealer. Buy none other. Aermotor prices and goods are always best. Through gratitude, and because we are price makers, and are safest to deal with, the world has given us more than half its windmill business. Delphi, Indiana, people consider that they were scandalized by Miss Carrie West, the heiress, who became so infatuated with W. T. Harris, the married man of Hammond. Miss West mortgaged a business block for funds to pay for the Harris divorce and as soon as it was obtained the knot was tied by 'Squire Coster and the couple left at once on their honeymoon. It was certainly a rare leap year event.

The most remarkable act yet done by a new woman may be credited to Mrs. Mary Caton, whose husband conducts a large stock farm near Lansing, Mich. She sailed from New York on Saturday in charge of a string of nine trotting horses whose care-taker she will be throughout the entire European trotting circuit. She is said to thoroughly understand horses, and her husband, detained at the farm by business, considered her the only person he could thoroughly trust to manage the horses during their European career.

Some writers strive to put the gist of their subject into the opening sentence, after the manner of the able newspaper head liner. This can be overdone. A lady went to a Louisville hotel to meet her son, whom she had not seen for years. He was not there to meet her, but he had left a letter. The opening sentence read: "I am now in the penitentiary." Then the old mother fainted, and it was three hours before she recovered. Then she discovered by reading the rest of the letter that her boy had a good position with the contractors for the penitentiary labor and had been unable to leave his duties.

However one may regret from patriotic motives the defeat of the Yale crew at Henley, it is refreshing to perceive how thoroughly they have wiped out the remembrance of the disagreeable impression made there last year by Cornell. The great banquet given the Yale men at the Sports club in London after the race was marked by extreme cordiality towards the Americans, and the victorious Leanders have done everything in their power to make the Americans feel as cheerful over their defeat as possible. All of which is entirely different from the events following the defeat of Cornell last year.

German papers discuss the origin of the phrase, "Blood is thicker than water," which Emperor William lately used twice as an expression of good will toward England and, as usual, credit it to the wrong man. It was used first by Captain Ingraham during the British-Chinese war in 1859 and not by Admiral Tatnal, the commander of the American fleet that witnessed the bombardment of the Taku forts by the British gunboat Opossum. Captain Ingraham was already a famous man on account of the share he took in the Martin Koszta affair, when he, at the harbor of Smyrna, had his vessel prepared for action, placing her between two Austrian men-of-war to emphasize his demand for the surrender of Koszta, a political refugee, with a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States in his pocket. The Austrians, of course, yielded.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

ANTI-CIGARETTE LAW INVALID.

So Says the Federal Court Regarding the Iowa Statute

ST. PAUL, July 23.—In the United States Court here the Iowa anti-cigarette law was declared unconstitutional. The grounds given for the decision were the same as in the liquor original package law.

DES MOINES, July 25.—Attorney General Remley has issued the following statement relative to the cigarette case: Judge Sanborn held that a 5-cent paper box containing ten cigarettes shipped into the state without other wrapping or boxing and by itself was an original package and can be lawfully sold in this state under the interstate commerce clause of the constitution. The decision went no further. It will not affect the sales in the state because there are no cigarettes shipped in that manner and from the nature of things they cannot be. The expense of shipping one 5-cent box by itself without other wrapping or other boxes of cigarettes contained with it in a larger package would eat up the profits. Railway and express companies cannot reduce their rates on cigarettes without making like reduction on other articles. I am confident there is not a box of cigarettes in the state which can lawfully be sold under Judge Sanborn's decision.

WAS ALMOST A LYNCHINC.

Eckerlebe's Escape From a Jackson County Mob.

DUBUQUE, July 24.—J. C. Longueville, attorney for Eckerlebe, waived further examination of the accused, and the prisoner will now remain in custody until the September term of court. A posse of forty men had planned to go out to Andrew and lynch the prisoner. By some misunderstanding the leaders and others did not meet the party at the spot designated and the plan failed. This aroused the authorities and Eckerlebe was at once removed to the Anamosa penitentiary. Public opinion at Bellevue and vicinity is now almost unanimously against the prisoner, and is daily increasing. There is also a feeling against one of the girl's brothers, who at the time acted strangely, and while the sheriff and Mr. Longueville do not place much confidence in this rumor, still it may create enough feeling to warrant an investigation before the trial takes place. The man Murphy, to whom Eckerlebe confessed, is not a detective, but a tramp charged with assault with intent to commit great bodily injury.

NEW RAILROAD SCHEME.

DES MOINES, July 26.—The North and South American Transportation Company has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state and county recorder. J. H. Pennington, of Maine, and H. S. Wickes, of Chicago, are the incorporators. The capital stock is $20,000,000, and its issuance is conditioned upon the transfer of certain valuable contracts and concessions from South American republics now held or to be secured by Col. Pennington. The company is incorporated for twenty years. It is understood to be the first step toward a north and south railway to connect with some gulf harbor, but the incorporators are reticent.

DEATH OF GEN. G. W. JONES.

The Historic Old Iowa Statesman and Veteran Passes Away.

DUBUQUE, July 23.—Ex-Senator Geo. W. Jones died at about 8 o'clock last evening, surrounded by his family and a few friends. His death was peaceful and painless. He was taken ill nearly two months ago, while in Chicago, where he took a severe cold. He leaves three children—George, who resides in Chicago, Mrs. Marie J. Hay, and Mrs. Linn Deuss. His wife died some years ago. He had passed his 92nd year, but up to within the past few months had retained his bodily and mental vigor to a remarkakle degree.

ELOPING COUPLE'S RETURN.

Daisy Dorlan Still Sticks to Her Enamored Pastor.

WATERLOO, July 24.—Rev. Geo. F. Scott and Daisy Dorlan, the eloping couple, in the custody of Sheriff Law, have returned. Scott is now confined in the county jail. The girl was taken to her home. She spurned her people and declared that she "loved Scott ten thousand times better than anything else, even her life." Mrs. Scott will not prosecute for adultery. P. S. Dorlan, father of the girl, has commenced an action for $3,000 damages.

Ft. Dodge's First Pavement.

FORT DODGE, July 27.—The city council has let the contract for the first paving of the town. J. W. Campbell of Des Moines got the job at $1.22 a yard and must use Fort Dodge brick. The contract will aggregate about $40,000.

FOR MURDEROUS ASSAULT.

James Mahoney Bound Over to the Grand Jury.

CHEROKEE, July 27.—James Mahoney, who made such a desperate attempt on the life of Mary Kane at Aurelia, has been bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $5,000. As he cannot give the bond he will lie in jail at this place until court convenes in September. It is thought that Mahoney will plead guilty to the charge and accept sentence as the best way of getting out of the affair. The girl has entirely recovered from the wounds.

CAUGHT AT LAST.

The Men Who Robbed the Winterset Postoffice in Jail.

DES MOINES, July 25.—Deputy United States Marshal Richards brought three men from Winterset and lodged them in jail. They are Claud L. Chase, Cliff Clanton and John Clark, and they are charged with blowing open the safe in the Winterset postoffice May 26, 1895, and stealing $300 worth of money and stamps.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

H. L. Grimes, a Merchant of Derby, Met Death in a Storm.

CHARITON, July 26.—H. L. Grimes, of the firm of Grimes & Grimes, of Derby, doing a general store business, was struck by lightning and instantly killed while on his way home to supper. His life was insured for $7,000, part of it taken out but two or three days since.

BREVITIES.

Upon learning of the death of Gen. Geo. W. Jones, Gov. Drake directed that flags upon all public buildings be placed at half mast.

The superior court of Cedar Rapids holds that the cigarette law is constitutional, thus joining issues with the federal court at St. Paul.

Daisy Dorlan, who eloped with Rev. Scott, of Waterloo, says Scott did not ask her to run away with him, but that she proposed it herself.

Des Moines dispatch: The equestrian figures of Generals Dodge, Crocker, Corse and Curtis have been put in place on the soldiers' monument, as were also the four figures representing the navy, artillery, infantry and cavalry. These figures have added greatly to the beauty of the monument.

The entire plant of the Oskaloosa Packing Company was ruined by fire a few nights ago. The building and equipment originally cost $50,000 but as the plant had not been in operation for several years they had depreciated greatly in value. A careful estimate places the loss at about $20,000, with no insurance.

Harrisburg, Pa., dispatch: Sixteen years ago Garrett Light was living in Monticello, Iowa, where Annie Rickel, a comely maiden, was his sweetheart. She loved Light and when he refused to marry her there was a quarrel and Annie was shot. It was supposed at the time that her wound was fatal, but after many weeks she recovered. Light was arrested and protested that he was innocent of the shooting. The girl told a different story, which the jury believed, and her lover was convicted of assault with intent to kill. Light was released on bail pending an appeal to the higher court, but when that court affirmed the verdict he fled. He next appeared near Pittsburg, where his father had just died. He received $1,500 from the estate, and coming to Dauphin county, he purchased a small farm near this city. He prospered, and in the thought that nobody knew of his past, was content. But the authorities learned of his whereabouts and he was placed under arrest. While admitting that he was the man wanted, he insisted that he did not shoot the girl, but that another man did.

Six boys who were in an apple tree at Morning Side, a Sioux City suburb, had a heavy charge of shot poured into them, and as the smoke of the gun cleared away the ground around the trunk of that tree might have been taken for a field of carnage. Not one of them had been missed and there were mingled cries of "Oh! I'm killed," "I'm shot to pieces," "I'm dying," and the like. The boys were George Bedal, Ed. Bedal, James Ritter, H. L. Webber, George Hefner and P. Miller. The shot was fired by W. C. Hoit, the photographer. The boys were taken to their homes and surgeons were sent for. George Bedal was found to be the most seriously injured. In one of his sides there were over 50 No. 8 shot. The Ritter boy's head was bleeding from shot that penetrated the scalp back of the ear and the other boys were suffering from wounds in the body. None of them, however, had any shot in the face. There was a general uprising among the parents of the boys, which resulted in a united complaint at police headquarters. Detective Brott and Sergeant Downs went to Morning Side on the elevated road, arrested Mr. Hoit and brought him to town. He was charged with assault with intent to commit great bodily harm.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

MACEO'S DEATH CONFIRMED.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Jose Maceo, the famous leader of the Cuban insurgents, is dead at last. Since the present Cuban rebellion began, nearly two years ago, Maceo's death has been reported in this country probably twenty times. Each time the report has been denied, and Maceo has reenforced the denial with fresh evidence of his activity. About two weeks ago the last report of his death was received in this country, and though it was promptly denied by the insurgent representatives, it was confirmed by an official dispatch from Havana. There is no longer any doubt of Maceo's death in an engagement with the Spanish three weeks ago in a remote part of Cuba. No other particulars are given in the dispatch.

HAVANA, July 23.—The insurgents are beginning to use dynamite more freely in their efforts to prevent Captain General Weyler from moving Spanish troops by rail. The traveling public, the Cubans declare, were warned in time by a proclamation from Maximo Gomez, chief of the revolutionists, against riding on trains which carried troops, and cannot, therefore, with justice complain if injured by accident when upon such trains in violation of the decree mentioned.

HIT THE GOVERNOR.

Lively Scrimmage on the Platform at Columbia During a Political Meeting.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 26.—While Gov. Evans was addressing a political meeting at Florence, Judge Joseph H. Earle took offense at some allusion of the governor to himself (Earle) and struck Governor Evans on the head. The latter returned the blow, landing on Judge Earle's eye, drawing blood. The whole assemblage was wild with excitement and many revolvers were drawn, but the trouble subsided after the parties had been separated. There was also a lively passage at arms between Generals Watts and Richbourg, candidate for adjutant general, the latter telling Watts finally that he would hold him personally responsible for what he had said.

SCORE OF LIVES LOST.

Cloudburst in Colorado Results in Great Damage.

MORRISON, Col., July 25.—A cloud burst in Bear Creek canyon brought down a solid wall of water ten feet high, which did great property damage and caused the loss of fifteen to twenty lives. The known dead are: Mrs. Miller and three children and a party of campers, fifteen or eighteen in number, who were living in a small house just below town. It is feared there has been more loss of life, as there were scores of people camping along both sides of the creek, both above and below town.

DENVER, July 27.—It is known that twenty-two persons lost their lives in the cloudburst at or near Morrison, and it is feared that the full returns will increase the number of fatalities. At Golden and Mount Vernon seven lost their lives.

INTERNATIONAL INCIDENT.

Spanish Gunboat Fires On an American Schooner.

SOUTH PORT, N. C., July 25.—The schooner, Governor Smith, of Boston for Wilmington, N.C., has arrived in quarantine. She left Gibara on July 14. Two days later off the Cuban coast, in the neighborhood of Nuevitas harbor, she passed a Spanish gunboat a mile and a half away. The gunboat fired on the schooner, sending a solid shot over her deck. The shell fell in the sea a quarter of a mile to starboard, doing no damage. Captain Patrick immediately ran up the American ensign and left the neighborhood as quickly as possible.

CHINESE TROOPS KILLED.

Six Thousand Victims of the Mohammedan Rebels.

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 24.—News by mail says that Chinese troops sent to Lanchou to suppress the Mohammedan rebels appears to have been totally annihilated. The troops numbered six thousand. All were either killed or are missing, the rebels massacreing all in authority, killing and pillaging on a triumphant march through the country.

Gold Reserve Again Replenished.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Once more treasury officials are feeling comfortable, for the gold reserve has been once more placed safely over the $100,000,000 mark. This was accomplished through the deposit of gold coin by the New York banks in exchange for United States notes, as the result of a meeting of bankers. The total of gold coin contributed by the banks was $15,250,000, which brought the total gold reserve up to $101,881,770.

JAPAN'S GREAT TIDAL WAVE.

Disaster of June 15 Believed to Have Killed 30,000 Persons.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—An interesting report of the great tidal wave in Japan has been received by the secretary of state by the United States legation at Tokio. This is the first authentic report of the disaster to reach America. The report says:

A horrible disaster has befallen Japan, causing the death of 30,000 of her people and leaving twice that number homeless and starving. On the evening of June 15, at about 8:10 or 8:20 o'clock, the northeastern littoral of the island of Hondo, for a distance of nearly 200 miles, was submerged by a temendous tidal wave, eighty feet in height, which, sweeping irresistably upon the coast, only spent its energy after a rush of miles into the interior, and retired, leaving a desolate waste of sand and debris, where had stood many homes and thriving villages. During June 15 a number of earthquake shocks had been felt by the inhabitants of the unfortunate prefectures of Miyage, Aomori and Iwate, but these slight disturbances gave no warning to the fishing people who were celebrating the May festival, which, according to the Chinese calander, fell upon that day. At about 8 o'clock the people along the coast were startled from their tranquility by a fearful roaring from the sea, likened to the report of heavy artillery. Roused to action by cries of "tsunamai, tsunamai" (tidal wave, tidal wave,) from those who realized the impending disaster, the inhabitants rushed from their homes into a night of pitchy blackness to be overtaken and engulfed in their flight to higher ground.

The first meager reports from the scene of the catastrophe gave little idea of its magnitude, but each succeeding budget of news arriving from the north has added to the appalling character of the disaster, until at the time of writing (June 25) it is estimated that the mortalities will number more than 30,000. The magnitude of the losses of life is better appreciated by comparing this catastrophe with those known so well in history. Lisbon, at a conservative estimate, lost but 25,000 of its people in its memorable earthquake, and Japan but 7,500 in the Gifu disaster of 1892—in fact, the mortalities exceed those of the Chinese-Japanese war. No Americans have suffered either in person or property.

GOLD DEMOCRATS.

CHICAGO, July 24.—The meeting of gold standard democrats, called to consider the advisability of issuing a call for a national convention, was held at the Auditorium Annex. After a long debate, a resolution was adopted to the effect that it was the sense of the meeting that a democratic convention should be held and a democratic platform enunciated and candidates for president and vice-president chosen, and that the said convention should be held not later than September 2.

CHICAGO, July 26.—The resolutions adopted by the gold democrats in brief recommend that a thoroughly sound and patriotic declaration of democratic principles be enunciated, and that candidates for president and vice-president in accord therewith be nominated and that the national committee (to be selected hereafter) meet at Indianapolis August 7, for the purpose of issuing a formal call for a national democratic convention to be held not later than September 2, at such place, and to be constituted and convened in such manner as the national committee may determine.

TERSE NEWS.

A recent dispatch from Athens says: There has been continuous fighting in Crete the last few days. The Turks have been trying to capture the heights of Kissamo on the Selino road. If they could capture this position they would cut off the western portion of Crete from the rest of the island. In the course of their fighting the Turks lost 200 killed and 60 wounded. The Cretan loss was 26 killed and 60 wounded. The deputies absolutely refuse to meet until they receive a reply to their propositions from the sultan.

A Hong Kong dispatch says a missionary writes to a correspondent there fully confirming previous reports of Japanese atrocities in the south of the Island of Formosa. The missionary declares that he is able to substantiate every fact. The Japanese, he adds, are fast exterminating the Chinese in that locality. Over sixty villages have been burned and thousands have been killed with revolting brutalities. The signing of the treaty of peace between Japan and China ended hostilities between the two nations except in the island of Formosa. By the terms of the treaty Formosa was ceded to Japan. But the inhabitants of the island remained to be reckoned with. They refused to recognize the authority of the Japanese, whose first effort to establish themselves on the island was the signal for an outbreak. The Japanese soon found they had another war on their hands, and from time to time since the conclusion of peace a year ago they have dispatched naval and military forces to Formosa. Only meager information of their operations has been made public

BY CLARA AUGUSTA

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER XVI.—(CONTINUED.)

"She gives me up! Margie renounces me! Strangers we must be henceforth! What does it all mean? Am I indeed awake, or is it only a painful dream?"

He read the few lines of the missive a third time. Something of the old dominant spirit of Archer Trevlyn came back to him.

"There is some misunderstanding. Margie has been told some dire falsehood!" he exclaimed, starting up. "I will know everything. She shall explain fully."

He seized his hat and hurried to her residence. The family were at breakfast, the servant said, who opened the door. He asked to see Miss Harrison.

"Miss Harrison left this morning, sir, in the early express," said the man, eyeing Trevlyn with curious interest.

"Went in the early train! Can you tell me where she has gone?"

"I cannot. Perhaps her aunt, Miss Farnsworth, or Miss Lee can do so."

"Very well;" he made a desperate effort to seem calm, for the servant's observant eye warned him that he was not acting himself. "Will you please ask Miss Lee to favor me with a few minutes of her time?"

Miss Lee came into the parlor where Archer waited, a little afterward. Archer, himself, was not more changed than she. Her countenance was pale, even to ghastliness, with the exception of a bright red spot on either cheek, and her eyes shone with such an unnatural light, that even Archer, absorbed as he was in his own troubles, noticed it. She welcomed him quietly, in a somewhat constrained voice, and relapsed into silence. Archer plunged at once upon what he came to ascertain.

"The servant tells me that Miss Harrison left New York this morning. I am very anxious to communicate with her. Can you tell me whither she has gone?"

"I cannot. She left before any of the family were up, and though she left notes for both her aunt and her business agent, Mr. Farley, she did not in either of them mention her destination."

"And did she not speak to you about it?"

"She did not. I spent a part of last evening with her, just before you came, but she said nothing to me of her intention. She was not quite well, and desired me to ask you to excuse her from going to the opera."

"And did you not see her this morning?"

"No. I have not seen her since I left her room to come down to you last night. When I returned from my interview with you, I tapped at her door—in fact, I tapped at it several times during the evening, for I feared she might be worse—but I got no reply, and supposed she had retired. No one saw her this morning, except Florine, her maid, and Peter, the coachman, who drove her to the depot."

"And she went entirely alone?"

"She did from the house. Peter took her in the carriage."

"From the house! But after that?" he asked, eagerly.

"Mr. Trevlyn," she said, coldly, "excuse me."

"I must know!" he cried; passionately grasping her arm; "tell me, did she set out upon this mysterious journey alone?"

"I must decline to answer you."

"But I will not accept any denial! Miss Lee, you know what Margie was to me. There has arisen a fearful misunderstanding between us. I must have it explained. Why will you trifle with me? You must tell me what you know."

"I do not wish to arouse suspicion, Mr. Trevlyn, which may have no foundation to rest on. Only for your peace of mind do I withhold any information I may possess on the subject."

"It is a cruel kindness. Tell me everything at once, I beg of you!"

"Then, if it distresses you, do not blame me; Peter saw Mr. Louis Castrani at the depot, and is confident he went in the same train, in the same car with Miss Harrison."

"Castrani! Great Heaven!" he staggered into a chair. "Is it possible? Margie, my Margie, that I thought so good and pure and truthful, false to me! It cannot, cannot be! I will not believe it!"

"I do not ask you to," said Alexandrine, proudly. "I insinuated nothing. I only replied to your question."

"Pardon me, Miss Lee. I am not quite myself this morning. I will go now. I thank you for what you have told me, and trust it will all be explained."

"I trust so," answered Miss Lee, turning to leave the room.

"Stay a moment! To what depot did Peter drive her?"

"The Northern, I think he said."

"Again I thank you, and good morning."

He hurried away, got into the first coach he came across, and was driven to the Northern depot.

He was somewhat acquainted with the ticket agent, and assuming as nonchalant an air as was possible in his present disturbed state, he strolled into the office. After a little indifferent conversation, he said.

"By the way, Harris, do you know Mr. Castrani, the young Cuban, who has turned the heads of so many of our fair belles? Some one was telling me he left town this morning."

"Castrani! Yes, I think so. He did leave for the north this morning in the early express. I marked his baggage for him. He had been hurried so in his preparations, he said, that he had no time for it."

"Indeed? It's a bore to be hurried. Where was he checked to?"

"Well, really, the name of the place has escaped me. Some little town in New Hampshire or Maine, I think. We do so much of this business that my memory is treacherous about such things."

"Were you speaking of Castrani?" asked Tom Clifford, a friend of Archer's, removing his cigar from his mouth. Deuced fine fellow! Wish I had some of his spare shillings. Though he's generous as a prince. Met him this morning just as he was coming down the steps of the Astor. Had to get up early to see after that confounded store of mine. Walker's too lazy to open it mornings."

"You met Mr. Castrani?" said Archer, referring to the point.

"Yes. He told me he was going away. Woman somewhere mixed up in the case. Said he expected to find one somewhere—well, hanged if I can tell where. There's always a woman at the bottom of everything."

"He did not mention who this one was?"

"Not he. But I must be going. It's nearly lunch time. Good morning."

Trevlyn stopped a few moments with Mr. Harris, and then went back to his rooms. He was satisfied. Hard as it was for him to believe it, he had no other alternative. Margie was false, and she had gone away from him under the protection of Castrani. He could have forgiven her anything but that. If she had ceased to love him, and had transferred her affections, he could still have wished her all happiness, if she had only been free and frank with him. But to profess love for him all the while she was planning to elope with another man, was too much! His heart hardened toward her.

If there had been, in reality, as he had at first had supposed, any misunderstanding between him and her, and she had gone alone, he would have followed her to the ends of the earth, and have had everything made clear. But as it was now, he would not pursue her an inch. Let her go! False and perfidious! Why should her flight ever trouble him?

But though he tried to believe her worthy of all scorn and contempt, his heart was still very tender of her. He kissed the sweet face of the picture he had worn so long in his bosom, before he locked it away from his sight, and dropped some tears that were no dishonor to his manhood, over the half-dozen elegant little trifles she had given him, before he committed them to the flames.

There was a nine days' wonder over Miss Harrison's sudden exodus. But her aunt was a discreet woman, and it was generally understood that Margie had taken advantage of the pause in the fashionable season to visit some distant relatives, and if any one coupled her flight and the departure of Castrani together, it was not made the subject of remark. Alexandrine kept what she knew to herself, and of course Archer Trevlyn did not proclaim his own desertion.

For a week, nearly, he managed to keep about, and at the end of that time he called at Mrs. Lee's. He wanted to question Alexandrine a little further. The idea possessed him that in some way she might be cognizant of Margie's destination. And though he had given the girl up, he longed desperately to know if she were happy. He had felt strangely giddy all day, and the heat of Mrs. Lee's parlors operated unfavorably upon him. He was sitting on a sofa conversing with that lady and her daughter, when suddenly he put his hand to his forehead, and sank back, pale and speechless.

In the wildest alarm, they called a physician, who put him to bed, and enjoined the severest quiet. Mr. Trevlyn, he said, had received a severe shock to his nervous system, and there was imminent danger of congestive fever of the brain.

His fears were verified. Archer did not rally, and on the second day he was delirious. Then the womanly nature of Alexandrine Lee came out and asserted itself. She banished all attendants from the sick room, and took sole charge herself of the sufferer. Not even her mother would she allow to take her place. When tempted by intense weariness to resign her post she would take that stained glove from her bosom, and the sight of it would banish all thought of admitting a stranger.

"No," she said to herself, "people in delirium speak of their most cherished secrets, and he shall not criminate himself. If he did that terrible deed, only I of all the world can bring a shadow of suspicion against him, and the secret shall never be revealed to any other."

So she sat the long days and longer nights away by the side of this man she loved so hopelessly, bathing his fevered brow, holding his parched hand, and lingering fondly over the flushed, unconscious face.

He sank lower and lower day by day—so very low that the physician said he could do no more. He must leave the case. There was nothing for it but to wait with patience the workings of nature.

At last the day came when the ravings of delirium subsided, and a deadly stupor intervened. It was the crisis of the disease. The sundown would decide, Dr. Grayson said; he would be better, or death would ensue.

Alexandrine heard his opinion in stony silence. She sat by the bed's head now, calm and silent; her powers of self-control were infinite. Her mother came in to watch for the change, as did several of Archer's friends, heretofore excluded. She was not afraid for them to come; there was no danger of Mr. Trevlyn criminating himself now. He had not spoken or moved for twelve hours.

The time passed slowly. The sun crept down the west. The ticking of the watch on the stand was all that broke the silence of the room. The last sun ray departed—the west flamed with gold and crimson, and the amber light flushed with the hue of health the white face on the pillow. Alexandrine thought she saw a change other than that the sunlight brought, and bent over him.

His eyes unclosed—he looked away from her to the vase of early spring flowers on the center-table. His lips moved. She caught the whispered word with a fierce pang at her heart:

"Margie"

The physician stepped forward, and sought the fluttering pulse. His face told his decision before his lips did.

"The crisis is passed. He will live."

Yes, he would live. The suspense was over. Alexandrine's labors were shared now, and Archer did not know how devotedly he had been tended—how he owed his very existence to her.

He mended slowly, but by the middle of May he was able to get out. Of course he was very grateful to the Lees, and their house was almost the only one he visited. Alexandrine was fitful and moody. Sometimes she received him with the greatest warmth, and then she would be cold and distant. She puzzled Archer strangely. He wanted to be friends with her. He felt that he owed her an immense debt of gratitude, and he desired to treat her as he would a dear sister.

Perhaps it was because time hung so heavily on his hands, that Trevlyn went so frequently to Mrs. Lee's. Certainly he did not go to visit Alexandrine. We all know how the habit of visiting certain places grow upon us, without any particular cause, until we feel the necessity of going through with the regular routine every day. He was to blame for following up this acquaintance so closely, but he did it without any wrong intention. He never thought it possible that any one should dream of his being in love with Alexandrine.

But the world talked. They said it was a very pretty romance; Mr. Trevlyn had been deserted by his lady love, had fallen ill on account of it, had been nursed by one whom of course he would marry. Indeed, they thought him in duty bound to do so. In what other way could he manifest his gratitude?

Vague whispers of this reached Trevlyn's ear, but he gave them at first little heed. He should never marry, he said; it was sinful to wed without love. But as he saw Alexandrine's pale face and strangely distraught manner day by day, he came to feel as if he had in some way wronged her, though how he did not exactly understand.

One day he entered the sitting-room of Mrs. Lee with the freedom of a privileged visitor, without rapping, and found Alexandrine in tears. He would have retreated, but she had already seen him, and he felt that it would be better to remain. He spoke to her kindly.

"I trust nothing has occurred to distress you?" She looked up at him almost defiantly.

"Leave me!" she said, impetuously; "you, of all others, have no right to question me!"

"Pardon me!" he exclaimed, alarmed by her strange emotion, "and why not I question you?"

"Because you have caused me misery enough already—"

NATIONAL SILVER PARTY.

St. Louis, July 22.—J. J. Mott, chairman of the national committee, called the national silver convention to order shortly after 12 o'clock. Pray. was offered and Congressman F. G. Newlands was introduced as temporary chairman. He spoke briefly, his address being heartily applauded. Committees were then appointed, after which Miss Lillie Pierce read the declaration of independence. At 2:24 the convention adjourned until 4:30 p. m.

At 5 o'clock the convention was again called to order. The credentials committee reported that there were no contests and recommended that all delegations be allowed to cast the full vote. Adopted. W. P. St. John, of New York, was made permanent chairman, Chas. A. Towne, of Minnesota, vice chairman and R. E. Duffendorfer, of Pennsylvania, secretary. After Mr. St. John's short address, a committee was appointed to confer with the populists with a view to settling the differences between the factions, and the convention then adjourned till 10 o'clock to-morrow.

St. Louis July 23.—The silver convention was called to order at 10:27 and Vice-Chairman Towne delivered an address. He was followed by ex-Governor St. John, of Kansas; Helen M. Gougar, of Indiana; Judge Geo. Sheldon, of Conneticut, and Ruble E. D. Cole, of Wisconsin. The convention then adjourned till 2:30 p. m.

In the afternoon little was accomplished because of a desire to wait for action by the populist convention. A poll of the convention was made to find out the previous political beliefs of the delegates. The result of the poll showed there were 526 republicans, 135 democrats, 47 populists, 9 prohibitionists, 1 nationalist, 1 greenbacker and 12 independents. Adjourned till 10 a. m.

St. Louis, July 24.—The silver convention was called to order at 10:40. Committee on conference with populist committee reported progress. A poll of the delegates showed that 196 union soldiers, 18 confederates and 4 Mexicans were seated in the convention. Addresses were made by Senator Stewart, C. R. Scott and General Warren and the convention then adjourned till 3:30 o'clock.

At 3:55 G. W. Baker presented the resolutions which were adopted at the conference of committees representing the silver and populist conventions and the report was adopted. Senator Jones of Nevada read the report of the platform committee and it was adopted.

W. J. Bryan, of Nebraska, was nominated for president by acclamation and by the same process Arthur Sewall, of Maine, was nominated for vice-president.

At a meeting of the new national committee of the silver party, Charles D. Lane, of California, one of the largest gold mine owners in the world, was elected chairman, and I. N. Stevens, of Colorado, secretary. Headquarters will probably be established at Chicago.

St. Louis, July 27.—Chairman Jones, of the democratic national committee, has appointed W. P. St. John, of New York, who presided over the silver convention, treasurer of the democratic national committee. Mr. St. John announced that he would accept the position.

Terrible Massacre in Crete.

London, July 26.—A dispatch to the Cronicle from Constantinople says that the latest accounts received there from Crete are to the effect that forty prosperous villages around Van Hueben were destroyed and every male over eight years of age killed. The total killed are placed at 12,800.

Armenians Held Responsible.

Constantinople, July 25.—An imperial irade has been issued notifying the council of Armenia and the patriarchiate that they will be held responsible hereafter for any treason on the part of the Armenians.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

Des Moines, July 22.—Patents have been allowed but not issued as follows: To W. A. Way of Iowa Falls for an attachment for vapor burning stoves and advantageously using the products of combustion of a single burner to simultaneously cook in two distinct vessels at the same time. To J. Koegel, of Des Moines, for a hand implement specially adapted for thinning rows of plants and cutting out weeds as required to retain plants at uniform spaces apart. To J. S. Hogan, of Menlo, for an adjustable clevis for wheel plows and mechanism for operating it by a person riding on the plow, in such a manner as to thereby govern the width of the furrow as the plow is advanced. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address. Printed copies of the drawings and specifications of any United States patent sent upon receipt of 25 cents. Our practice is not confined to Iowa. Inventors in other states can have our services upon the same terms as the Hawkeyes.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

THE MOST CRITICAL PERIOD IN THE LIFE OF A WOMAN.

Experience of Mrs. Kelly, of Patchogue, Long Island.

There is no period in woman's earthly career which she approaches with so much anxiety as the "change of life." Yet during the past twenty years women have learned much from a woman.

It is safe to say that women who prepare themselves for the eventful period, pass through it much easier than in the past.

There is but one course to pursue to subdue the nervous complications, and prepare the system for the change. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be used.

It is well for those approaching this time, to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She has the experience of years to aid her in advising. She will charge you nothing.

She helped this woman, who says:—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in my family ten years, with the best results. Some time ago my daughter had catarrh of the womb, and it entirely cured her. I was approaching the "change of life," and was in a deplorable condition. My womb had fallen, and the bearing-down pains and backache were terrible, and kidneys affected

"I began taking the Compound, and my pains ceased. I consider it the strong bridge between sickness and health, and recommend it to everybody I meet who needs it."—MRS. L. KELLY. Patchogue, L. I.

Not Quite Explained.

Mrs. Blonde (wildly)—"Where did this black hair come from?"

Mr. Blonde—"I was riding behind a black horse and he switched his tail——"

"This is a fine hair."

"Yes, it was a fine horse."

Choose the Best Lands.

Southwestern Missouri lands are the most fertile in the country. The soil is productive and a good crop always assured. An abundance of the best of good pure water. Special inducements are being offered just now for those desiring to secure lands in this part of the west. For particulars, regarding the rich mineral, fruit and agricultural lands of southwest Missouri write J. M. Purdy, manager of Missouri Land and Live Stock Co., Neosha, Missouri. See advertisement in another column of this paper.

Slow Time Assured.

Mrs. Jinks—"Yes I've sent Simms, the colored man, after the doctor."

Mrs. Blinks—"Sent Sims? Mercy me! He won't get here for two hours. He used to be a hotel waiter."

Low Rate Excursion South.

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month till October about half rates for the round trip will be made to points in the South by the Louisville & Nashville railroad. Ask your ticket agent about it, and if he cannot sell you excursion tickets write to C. P. Atmore, General Passenger Agent, Louisville, Ky., or Geo. B. Horner, D. P. A., St. Louis, Mo.

A GREAT INDUSTRY.—The Stark Bros.' Nurseries, this city and Rockford, Ill., is a veritable beehive. The propagating plants of the "Two Pikes," enlarged. "Old Pike's" salesmen work from New York westward. The office force is hurrying out 5,000 new style canvassing outfits, photos of fruits, trees, orchards, packing, fruit painted from nature, etc. Several departments give all their time to securing salesmen. Stark Bros. have room for energetic solicitors. With such progress and millions of fruit trees, dull times unknown.—Louisiana, Missouri, Press.

WHIPPING HIS WEIGHT.

The Champion Logger Overestimated His Fistic Ability.

In the logging camps of Michigan might makes right and the man who has whipped all comers in fair fights is king of his camp.

One of these, said a logger to a reporter, was very boastful of his exploits. He had been the victor in a dozen fights and no one cared to enter the lists with him, but every man in the camp hated the champion. Going into a saloon one day he announced: "I'm tired of these babies in camp. I ain't had a good fight in Michigan. I can whip my weight in dogs, wildcats or anything that breathes for $100."

A meek looking man took the bet and arrangements for the fight were made. It was to take place in a closed room one week from the time the bet was made.

The day came and the champion called, "Bring on your animile." The man who had bet against the king of the camp brought his antagonist in a large sack, which had been deposited behind the stove in the saloon where the match had been entered into, the weather just beginning to get cold. The gladiator entered the room, the sack was emptied and the people crowded at the window to see the contest. Out of the sack came three large hornet nests, the occupants of which had been revived by the heat.

They issued from the nests in swarms and lit all over the man. He fought them for a minute or two, then with a yell jumped through the window, carrying sash and glass with him, never stopping until he reached the river, into which he jumped.

"Said he could whip his weight in anything that breathed," remarked the meek little man as he pocketed the stakes, "but about five pounds of hornets knocked him out in the first round."—Washington Star.

A BEETLE THAT GNAWS SHELLS.

And It Does Other Things Calculated to Make Its Prey Tremble.

Of all the insects the beetles are the most interesting. There is one that carries a cannon, which a naval man would call a stern chaser, and is loaded with a fluid. When pursued, the beetle fires it, and the other insect, usually a carniverous beetle, is blinded by the discharge of fine acid spray. Hence its name of bombardier. The latest thing that has been learned about beetles is that Dytiscus marginalis cuts its way through the shells of snails and mollusks and eats the inhabitants.

W. B. Tegetmeier writes to the London Field and tells about the curiosity of naturalists at finding shells manifestly gnawed by some insect or other and the final discovery of Dytiscus marginalis at work on the shell. Then he tells some things about the Dytiscus family. Says he:

"I know of no more interesting animal in an aquarium than a Dytiscus, who soon acquires the habit of following the fingers for food and amuses himself at night, if the aquarium is open, by flying round and round the room, and occasionally misses the way, and, being unable to return, is found on the floor in the morning. There is one drawback to the habits of this creature. He is a bloodthirsty tyrant of the aquarium, requiring the whole place to himself, for if kept with tadpoles, frogs, fish or any other animals, he quickly destroys them, even if many score times his own size."

What hawks are to the other birds, cats are to other mammals, sharks are to other fish, the Dytiscus is to other insects.

Michigan has been called the Lake State for an obvious reason. It is better known as the Wolverine State, from the former presence of great numbers of these animals in its forests.

Distillers in Victoria, Australia, receive $9.75 a week, in Germany $3.56, in Denmark $3.90 and in Spain $4.25.

It is a well-konwn fact that horses can sometimes perceive sounds which are inaudible to human beings. Seventy-two hours previous to the recent earthquake in the Italian Rivera the horses of that region began to be very restless, showing that they were sensible thus early of subterranean noises unheard by the inhabitants until a few minutes before the first shock —Ex.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof —Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

MISTAKES in planting.—It is a mistake to plant trees till you get your ground ready; or to plant in soil not adapted to their growth; or that has not been properly enriched and thoroughly underdrained—trees will not thrive with wet feet. It is a mistake to plant in certain quarters of the moon—trees do better planted in the earth. It is a mistake to plant too many varieties—or to plant all of one variety—or to plant a variety because some tree agent advises you to; or to plant every variety offered you before it has been thoroughly tested in your locality, unless you have the means to conduct an experimental fruit farm. It is a mistake to plant in post-holes and think that trees will grow without any further care or cultivation. It is a mistake to plant at all unless you know what varieties you want and how to take care of them when planted.

Mistakes in Cultivation.—It is a mistake to think that when trees are once planted they will take care of themselves. It is a mistake to turn young trees out to grass before they are weaned from the nursery. It is a mistake to think they don't want just as good cultivation as corn or any other crop to succeed well. It is a mistake to try and raise crops year after year from an orchard without returning anything to the soil; trees want feeding as well as your pigs or cattle to produce growth or fruit. It is a mistake to trim by horse or cattle power, you are apt to overdo the job. It is a mistake not to trim and shape your trees when young and thus avoid the necessity of removing large branches when the trees are large, and thus mutilate and injure them. It is a mistake to let too much fruit grow on young trees or vines. It is a mistake not to thin out heavy crops on any trees.

Mistakes in Marketing.—It is a mistake to market your fruits in flour or meal-bags, when you can get clean ones. It is a mistake that you don't use the clean ones for oats or wheat and put your fruit in good clean baskets or barrels. It is a mistake to try to put a quart of berries into a pint and a half basket, or a half bushel of peaches or pears into a twelve quart basket—they shrink in getting them out. It is a mistake to put all the small samples in the bottom of the basket, most people take them out before they use them, besides the large ones on top have a crushing effect, if not upon them, upon your honesty as a fruit grower. It is a mistake to send soft fruit to a distant market. It is a mistake to send fruit to a commission man whose honesty you know nothing about. It is a mistake to expect prompt returns from every commission man you send to. It is a mistake to send off fruits to be sold on commission if you can get a fair price near home.

Miscellaneous Mistakes.—It is a mistake to think that nurserymen never make mistakes, or that they are not willing to rectify them when they can. It is a mistake to think they are responsible for the death of all the trees that die before coming to maturity, or for all the tricks of tree agents. It is a mistake to think they don't want to sell all their surplus stock, and that tree agents don't often buy it and without their knowledge, re-label it just what their orders call for and send it out, and when it bears, nurserymen get the cursing. It is a mistake to think all tree agents are rascals.—A. M. Smith.

Handling Quinces.

Quinces may be gathered as they ripen in such a manner as to prolong the season very much. No fruit needs more careful handling—even a thumb mark becomes a dark spot in a short time. For shipping to a distant market in considerable quantities, probably no package is more satisfactory than the ordinary apple barrel. The ends should be lined with white paper and the fruit placed in very carefully, calyx end downward against the head, instead of the stem end, as with the apple. The tail end of the barrel should be gently pressed to its place with a lever or screw press, but less heavily than in the case of the apple, because the texture of the quince is more brittle and less elastic, consequently every bruise will result in a serious blemish. For a near market, and in smaller quantities, no package can surpass the now very popular twelve quart basket. Whichever package is used it will usually be found best to make two classes, and not to ship the small mis-shapen, or poorly colored specimens in the same package with the choice fruit. If, however, no selection is made, a fair show of best and worst should be made in order that dealers may know exactly what they are handling and buyers may know exactly what they are buying.—Linius Woolverton.

The Mastery of Farm Condition.

One of the most disheartening experiences that can befall a man who is making a business of growing a particular garden or farm crop, is to witness the failure of such a crop when he does not know what to do to prevent the loss. Such an experience quenches one's enthusiasm in his work, temporarily at least, and weakens his faith in his ability to overcome the obstacles that he must meet in his business. The recurrence of such experiences has often been the direct cause of the growth of one crop after another being abandoned; and occasionally this has resulted in New England in the abandonment of the farm altogether. On the other hand, to feel that one understands the peculiarities of plants and knows what to do for them and when to do it if they are threatened with disaster, begets a certain confidence in the occupation, and in turn this begets an ambition to cultivate more crops and larger fields and to increase the production of each square foot of land so tilled. The discovery of the Bordeaux mixture and its plant-disease preventing qualities promises to be of great value to those engaged in the cultivation of the soil, enabling them to control in a large measure a class of troubles which have in the past been the occasion of heavy loss and trying annoyances.—Rhode Island Bulletin.

Late Potatoes.

The planting of late potatoes has fallen into disfavor in Rhode Island on account of the occasional prevalence of the late blight which hitherto in some seasons has run riot in the potato fields, while the owners of the fields could do nothing but stand by and see their potato vines wither and blacken and their prospects of securing a good potato crop grow small by degrees and beautifully less. Experience has shown that potato growers can now save their late crop from destruction by this disease; but in order to do this they must introduce into their methods of culture when necessary a feature that is comparatively new to the business—a kind of work the details of which are perfectly simple, but they are unlike any operations that have formerly been practiced upon the farm, and consequently they must be learned mainly by experience and observation of those who are to practice them.

Insect Injuries to Indian Corn.

Bulletin No. 44 of the Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station is a complete practical account of all known insect injuries of any importance to the seed and roots of Indian corn. The kinds of injury are so classified and analyzed as to enable one to determine the cause of the injury from the appearance of the field or the injured plant, and from the insects found in or upon it. The wireworm, the root lice, the white grubs, and the corn root worms are treated with especial fullness. The discussion of each form of injury and of each insect treated includes a full account of preventive and remedial measures, the whole making a pamphlet of eighty-seven pages, profusely illustrated with cuts of the injurious insects in the various stages of their development.

This bulletin is issued by the consulting entomologist of the station, Prof. S. A. Forbes, who is also State Entomologist of Illinois, and the article is made up largely from the eighteenth report of the State Entomologist, with the omission, however, of all matter of a technical character or of trivial economic importance.

This bulletin, as well as all others issued by the station, will be sent free of charge to any person in Illinois interested in farming, who will send his name and postoffice to the Agricultural Experiment Station, Urbana Ill.

W. L. Pillsbury, Secy.

Use Good Seed.—Many farmers make the mistake of arguing this way: "I have some good grain that will bring a good price on the market; I will sell that. I have some poor shriveled grain that grew down on low ground. I will keep that for seed." It is a great mistake. It is a very true principle in both animal and vegetable growth that 'Like begets like,' and if we sow poor seed we may expect a poor crop. Again, in selecting our seed we should strive to select it from a field that has been uniform in both quality and quantity. When we have this seed let us clean it thoroughly. I used to think, when I was a boy, and my stepfather kept us cleaning grain after it had been cleaned two or three times over, that he did this to keep us out of mischief, but I have concluded that he was right about this thorough cleaning.—Geo. McKerrow.

Dairy Truths.—It does not pay to feed two dairy cows and get a product in milk which should be received from one. Let there be no fear lest there may be an overproduction of good butter. Whatever the grade of stock, the best results always follow the best treatment, and kindness is dollars and cents to the dairyman. We must not overcrowd if we would avoid tuberculosis.—Ex.

PEOPLE'S PARTY PLATFORM

The following is the platform adopted by the people's party at the St. Louis convention:

The people's party, assembled in national convention, reaffirms its allegiance to the principles declared by the founders of the republic and also to the fundamental principles of just government as enunciated in the platform of the party in 1892. We recognize that through the connivance of the present and preceding administrations, the country has reached a crisis in its national life, as predicted in our declaration four years ago, and that prompt and patriotic action is the supreme duty of the hour. We realize that while we have political independence, our financial and industrial independence is yet to be attained by restoring to our country the constitutional control and exercise of functions necessary to a people's government, which functions have been basely surrendered by our public servants to corporate monopolies. The influence of European money changers has been more potent in shaping legislation than the voice of the American people. Executive power and patronage have been used to corrupt our legislators and defeat the willl of the people, and plutocracy has thereby been enthroned upon the ruins of democracy. To restore the government intended by the fathers and for the welfare and prosperity of this and future generations, we demand the establishment of an economic and financial system which shall make us masters of our own affairs and independent of European control, by the adoption of the following:

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

First—We demand a national money, safe and sound, issued by the general government only, without the intervention of banks of issue, to be a full legal tender for debts, public and private; a just, equitable and efficient means of distribution direct to the people and through the lawful disbursements of the government.

Second—We demand the free and unrestricted coinage of silver and gold at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1, without waiting for the consent of foreign nations.

Third—We demand that the volume of circulating medium be speedily increased to an amount sufficient to meet the demands of the business and population and to restore the just level of prices of labor and production.

Fourth—We denounce the sale of bonds and the increase of the public interest-bearing debt made by the present administration as unnecessary and without authority of law, and demand that no more bonds be issued except by specific act of congress.

Fifth—We demand such legislation as will prevent the demonetization of the lawful money of the United States by private contract.

Sixth—We demand that the government in payment of its obligations, shall use its option as to the kind of lawful money in which they are to be paid, and we denounce the present and preceding administration for surrendering this option to the holders of government obligations.

Seventh—We demand a graduated income tax to the end that aggregated wealth shall bear its just proportion of taxation and we regard the recent decision of the supreme court relative to the income tax law as a misinterpretation of the constitution and an invasion of the rightful powers of congress over the subject of taxation.

Eighth—We demand that postal savings banks be established by the government for the safe deposit of the savings of the people and to facilitate exchange.

TRANSPORTATION.

First—Transportation being a means of exchange and a public necessity, the government should own and operate the railroads in the interest of the people and on a non-partisan basis to the end that all may be accorded the same treatment in transportation and that the tyranny and political power now exercised by the great railroad corporations which result in the impairment, if not the destruction of the political rights and personal liberties of the citizens, may be destroyed. Such ownership is to be accomplished gradually in a manner consistent with sound public policy.

Second—The interest of the United States in the public highways built with public moneys and the proceeds of extensive grants of land to the Pacific railroads, should never be alienated, mortgaged or sold, but guarded and protected for the general welfare as provided by the laws organizing such railroads. The foreclosure of existing liens of the United States on these roads should at once follow default in the payment thereof by the debtor companies; and at the foreclosure sales of said railroads the government should purchase the same if it becomes necessary to protect its interests therein, or if they can be purchased at a reasonable price; and the government shall operate said railroads as public highways for the benefit of the whole people and not in the interest of the few, under suitable provisions for protection of life and property, giving to all transportation interests equal privileges and equal rates for fares and freights.

Third—We denounce the present infamous schemes for refunding these debts and demand that the laws now applicable thereto be executed and administered according to their intent and spirit.

Fourth—The telegraph, like the postoffice system, being a necessity for the transmission of news, should be owned and operated by the government in the interest of the people.

LAND.

First—True policy demands that the national and state legislation shall be such as will ultimately enable every prudent and industrious citizen to secure a home, and therefore the land should not be monopolized for speculative purposes. All land now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of their actual needs should by lawful means be reclaimed by the government and held for natural settlers only, and private land monopoly, as well as alien ownership, should be prohibited.

Second—We condemn the frauds by which the land grant of the Pacific railroad companies have, through the connivance of the interior department, robbed multitudes of actual bona fide settlers of their homes and miners of their claims, and we demand legislation by congress which will enforce the exception of mineral land grants after as well as before patent.

Third—We demand that bona fide settlers on all public lands be granted free homes as provided in the national homestead law and that no exception be made in the case of Indian reservations when opened for settlement, and that all lands not now patented come under this demand.

DIRECT LEGISLATION.

First—We favor a system of direct legislation through the initiative and referendum ,under proper constitutional safeguards.

GENERAL PROPOSITIONS.

First—We demand the election of president, vice president and United States senators by a direct vote of the people.

Second—We tender to the patriotic people of Cuba our deepest sympathy in their heroic struggle for political freedom and independence, and we believe the time has come when the United States, the great republic of the world, should recognize that Cuba is and of right ought to be a free and independent state.

Third—We favor home rule in the territories and the District of Columbia, and the early admission of the territories as states.

Fourth—All public salaries should be made to correspond to the price of labor and its products.

Fifth—In time of great industrial depression idle labor should be employed on public works as far as possible.

Sixth—The arbitrary course of the courts in assuming to imprison citizens for indirect contempt and ruling them by injunction should be prevented by proper legislation.

Seventh—We favor just pensions for our disabled union soldiers.

Eighth—Believing that the elective franchise and an untrammelled ballot are essential to government of, for and by the people, the people's party condemn the wholesale system of disfranchisement adopted in some of the states as unrepublican undemocratic and we declare it to be the duty of the several state legislatures to take such action as will secure a full, free and fair ballot and an honest count.

Ninth—While the foregoing propositions constitute the platform upon which our party stands and for the vindication of which its organization will be maintained, we recognize that the great and pressing issue of the pending campaign upon which the present presidential election will turn is the financial question and upon this great and specific issue between the parties, we cordially invite the aid and cooperation of all organizations and citizens agreeing with us upon this vital question.

PLATFORM OF SILVER PARTY.

The national silver party of America, in convention assembled, hereby adopts the following declaration of principles:

First—The paramount issue at this time in the United States is indisputably the money question. It is between the British gold standard, gold bonds and bank currency on the one side, and the bimetallic standard, no bonds, government currency ad an American policy on the other.

On this issue we declare ourselves to be in favor of a distinctively American financial system. We are unalterably opposed to the single gold standard, and demand the immediate return to the constitutional standard of gold and silver by the restoration by this government, independently of any foreign power, of the unrestricted coinage of both gold and silver, into standard money at the ratio of 16 to 1, and upon the terms of exact equality as they existed prior to 1873; the silver coin to be of full legal tender, equally with gold, for all debts and dues, public and private, and we demand such legislation as will prevent for the future the destruction of the legal tender quality of any kind of money by private contract.

We hold that the power to regulate and control a paper currency is inseparable from the power to coin money, and hence, that all currency intended to circulate as money should be issued and its volume controlled by the general government only, and should be a legal tender.

We are unalterably opposed to the issue by the United States of interest bearing bonds in time of peace, and we denounce as a blunder worse than a crime the present treasury policy concurred in by a republican house of plunging the country into debt by hundred of millions in the vain attempt to maintain the gold standard by borrowing gold, and we demand the payment of all coin obligations of the United States, as provided by existing laws, in either gold or silver coin, at the option of the government, and not at the option of the creditor.

The demonetization of silver in 1873 enormously increased the demand in gold, enhancing its purchasing power and lowering all prices measured by that standard, and since that unjust and indefensible act, the price of American products have fallen upon an average nearly 50 per cent, carrying down with them proportionately the money value of all other forms of property.

Such fall of prices destroyed the profits of legitimate industry, injuring the producer for the benefit of the non-producer, increasing the burden of the debtor, swelling the gains of the creditor, paralyzing the productive energies of the American people, relegating to idleness vast numbers of willing workers, sending the shadows of despair into the home of the honest toiler, filling the land with tramps and paupers and building up collosal fortunes at the money centers.

In the effort to maintain the gold standard the country has within the last two years, in a time of profound peace and plenty, been loaded down with $262,000,000 of additional interest bearing debts under such circumstances as to allow a syndicate of native and foreign bankers to realize a net profit of millions on a single deal.

It stands confessed that the gold standard can only be upheld by so depleting our paper currency as to force the prices of our products below the European and even below the Asiatic to enable us to sell foreign markets, thus aggravating the very evils of which our people so bitterly complain, degrading American labor and striking at the foundations of our civilization itself.

The advocate of the gold standard persistently claim that the real cause of our distress is over-production; that we have produced so much that it made us poor, which implies that the true remedy is to close the factory, abandon the farm and throw a multitude of people out of employment, a doctrine that leaves us unnerved and disheartened and absolutely without hope for the future.

We affirm it to be unquestioned that there can be no such economic paradox as overproduction, and at the same time tens of thousands of our fellow citizens remaining half clothed and half fed, and who are piteously clamoring for the common necessities of life.

Over and above all other questions of policy we are favor of restoring to the people of the United States the time-honored money of the contitution—gold and silver—not one but both—the money of Washington and Hamilton and Jefferson and Monroe and Lincoln and Jackson, to the end that the American people may receive honest pay for an honest product; that the American debtor may pay his just obligations in an honest standard and not in a dishonest and unsound standard, appreciated 100 per cent in purchasing power and no depreciation in debt-paying pawer; and to the end, further, that silver standard countries may be deprived of the unjust advantage they now enjoy in the difference in exchange beteween gold and silver, and advantage which tariff legislation cannot overcome.

We, therefore, confidently appeal to the people of the United States to hold in abeyance all other questions, however important and even monmentous they may appear; to sunder, if need be, all former party ties and affiliations and unite in one supreme effort to free themselves and their children from the domination of the money power—a power more destructive than any which has ever ben fastened upon the civilized men of any race or in any age. And upon the consummation of our desires and efforts we evoke the aid of all patriotic American citizens and the gracious favor of Divine Providence.

In as much as the patriotic majority of the Chicago convention embodied in the financial plank of its platform the principles enunciated in the platform of the American bimetallic party, promulgated at Washington, D. C., January 22, 1886 and herein reiterated, which is not only the paramount, but the only real issue in the pending campaign. Therefore, recognizing that hteir nominees embody these patriotic principles, we recommend that this convention nominate William J. Bryan of Nebraska for president and Arthur Sewall of Maine for vice president.

Only once in a lifetime is there a town located that has a tributary country for fifty miles in every direction—besides a division point on the great North and South railroad, the K. C. & P. G., now building due south from Kansas City to Port Arthur on the Gulf of Mexico. This time it is MENA, the new town in Western Arkansas.

This new railroad opens up the best agricultural lands in Western Missouri and the great fruit and health belt of Southwest Missouri and Western Arkansas.

LOOK AT THE MAP.

MENA, ARK.

Here's a town to draw to—17,500 square miles tributary territory. 85 miles from Mena to Hot Springs due east. 85 miles to Tuskahoma, I. T. west, 90 miles to Fort Smith north, 95 miles to Texarkana south—not a railroad in this district save

THE PORT ARTHUR ROUTE.

943,000 acres government land and 61,000 people, census of 1890.

Division point on the Port Arthur Route.

Valleys fertile and well watered that grow every product of the temperate zone.

Black Walnut, Oak and Pine Timber.

Elevation 1,350 feet, 525 feet higher than Kansas City.

Will be County Seat of Polk County.

No Hot Winds, no Blizzards, no Droughts.

Climate equal to Southern California.

Cool in Summer, temperate in Winter.

Buy quick before the railroad gets in and the boom comes. The railroad is 10 miles away now. The sale of agricultural implements and household goods will beat Oklahoma's record. Mena is one town against Oklahoma's dozen.

THE CHANCES.

Mena is a record breaker for business chances—nothing like it in the country—only new country in the United States opening up—Mena's boom is the only boom on any town in the country, but it's a winner for that reason alone, if for no other. Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

BRYAN AND WATSON

THE CHOICE OF THE PEOPLE'S PARTY CONVENTION.

Bryan Objected to the Use of His Name Without Sewall's, But It Went Through Anyway.

ST. LOUIS, July 22.—The national convention of the people's party was called to order at 12:40 p. m. by Chairman Taubeneck, of the national committee, and prayer was offered by Rev. W. L. Smith, a Baptist minister. Gov. Stone, of Missouri, then welcomed the delegates to the state. Ignatius Donnelly responded to the address. Senator Butler, of North Carolina, was then introduced as temporary chairman. His address was received with great enthusiasm. The states were then called for members of the various committees and the convention adjourned until 8 p. m.

At 8 o'clock the convention met in darkness, the electric wires having been blown down by a storm which passed over the city at 6 o'clock. The convention was in an uproar until 8:45, at which time the temporary chairman appeared and announced that the committee on credentials was not ready to report. The convention adjourned until 10 o'clock to-morrow.

ST. LOUIS, July 23.—After prayer by Rev. Smith the chairman called for the report of the committee on credentials. The committee, not being prepared to report, was given further time. Adjournment was soon taken until 3 p. m.

The convention was again called to order at 3:55 and the committee on credentials reported. The Illinois contest caused the first balloting and it resulted in favor of the anti-Bryan forces, 665 to 642. The report of the committee on permanent organization was presented. Senator Allen, of Nebraska, was named for chairman and John W. Hayes, of New Jersey, for secretary. A minority report, representing the anti-Bryanites, named James Campion, of Maine, for chairman. The majority report was adopted, 758 to 564. Senator Allen was escorted to the platform, and spoke at some length, being listened to with great interest. A committee was appointed to confer with a committee from the silver convention, and the convention adjourned.

ST. LOUIS, July 24.—The convention was called to order at 10:05. The report of the committee on rules was taken up. A minority report provided that the vice-president be nominated before the president. A heated debate resulted upon the adoption of the report, the minority report being adopted by a vote of 730 to 766.

At 5 o'clock the platform was reported by General Weaver. A minority report was presented by Kearby of Texas, Campion of Maine and Coxey of Ohio. Finally the majority platform was adopted.

States were then called for nominations for vice-president. Barney Gibbs, of Texas; Congressman Skinner, of North Carolina; Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia; Arthur Sewall, of Maine; A. L. Mimms, of Tennessee, and Marion Page, of Virginia, were placed in nomination. The first ballot resulted in the nomination of Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia. Adjourned till 9 a. m.

ST. LOUIS, July 25.—Mr. Bryan has sent word to his supporters that he will not accept a nomination at the hands of the convention under the circumstances. He will stand loyally by his running mate.

ST. LOUIS, July 25.—William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, who was nominated by the democratic national convention at Chicago a fortnight ago, was to-day made the standard bearer of the populist party by a vote of 1,042 to 331. The democratic candidate was nominated in the face of his own protest in the shape of a telegram directing the withdrawal of his name, sent to Senator Jones, after Sewall, his running mate, had been ditched for the vice-presidential nomination last night and Watson, of Georgia, had been named for second place on the ticket. The convention was called to order at 10:30 a. m. and General Weaver nominated Bryan for president. The entire time until 4:30 was consumed in speeches seconding the nomination and placing S. F. Norton, of Chicago, in nomination. A resolution was adopted giving the national committee plenary power to act in all things connected with the party after adjournment. Immediately after the ballot was taken the convention adjourned without appointing a committee to formally notify the nominee. A "rump" convention at which nine delegates were in attendance, adopted a resolution calling on the national committee for information as to what it would do in case Bryan declined to accept, but the committee did not reply.

BATH, Me., July 27.—Arthur Sewall says the nominations at St. Louis have not changed his plans the least particle.

LINCOLN, July 27.—W. J. Bryan says regarding the action at St. Louis: "Whether I shall accept the nomination or not, will depend entirely upon what conditions are attached to it." Chairman Jones, of the democratic national committee, is here in consultation with Bryan.

A Sad Accident.

A sad accident occurred Monday a. m. Mr. Fred Kanooka who lives on the Griffen place just north of the Germantown church, started out to get help to thresh. When near Gerwien's place one singletree came off, the tongue fell down and was broken; he held to the lines, was pulled over the front end of the buggy into the hard road receiving injuries on the head and back of his neck, from which his legs to his body and left arm were paralized. Dr. Spooner was called and all that could be done, was done for the sufferer. He was taken to Gerwien's house where he died about 10 o'clock p. m. Deceased leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss. The funeral was held Wednesday at 10 a. m. at the Ell township church, burial in the cemetery by the church, Rev. Gaterman officiating. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"THE GLOW OF SUNSET," LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Text, "Abide With Us for It Is Toward Evening"—Luke 24:29—Lightening of the Sorrows of Life by the Gospel.

TWO villagers, having concluded their errand in Jerusalem, have started out at the city gate and are on their way to Emmaus, the place of their residence. They go with a sad heart. Jesus, who had been their admiration and their joy, had been basely massacred and entombed. As with sad face and broken heart they pass on their way, a stranger accosts them. They tell him their anxieties and bitterness of soul. He in turn talks to them, mightily expounding the Scriptures. He throws over them the fascination of intelligent conversation. They forget the time, and notice not the objects they pass, and before they are aware, have come up in front of their house. They pause before the entrance and attempt to persuade the stranger to tarry with them. They press upon him their hospitalities. Night is coming on, and he may meet a prowling wild beast, or be obliged to lie unsheltered from the dew. He cannot go much further now. Why not stop there, and continue their pleasant conversation? They take him by the arm and they insist upon his coming in, addressing him in the words: "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

The candles are lighted, the table is spread, pleasant socialities are enkindled. They rejoice in the presence of the stranger guest. He asks a blessing upon the bread they eat, and he hands a piece of it to each. Suddenly and with overwhelming power the thought flashes upon the astonished people—it is the Lord! And as they sit in breathless wonder, looking upon the resurrected body of Jesus, he vanished. The interview ended. He was gone.

With many of us it is a bright, sunshiny day of prosperity. There is not a cloud in the sky, not a leaf rustling in the forest. No chill in the air. But we cannot expect all this to last. He is not an intelligent man who expects perpetual daylight of joy. The sun will after awhile near the horizon. The shadows will lengthen. While I speak, many of us stand in the very hour described in the text, "for it is toward evening." The request of the text is appropriate for some before me. For with them it is toward the evning of old age. They have passed the meridian of life. They are sometimes startled to think how old they are. They do not, however, like to have others remark upon it. If others suggest their approximation toward venerable appearance, they say, "Why, I'm not so old, after all." They do, indeed, notice that they cannot lift quite so much as once. They cannot read quite so well without spectacles. They cannot so easily recover from a cough or any occasional ailment. They have lost their taste for merriment. They are surprised at the quick passage of the year. They say that it only seems a little while ago that they were boys. They are going a little down hill. There is something in their health, something in their vision, something in their walk, something in their changing associations, something above, something beneath, something within, to remind them that it is toward evening.

The great want of all such is to have Jesus abide with them. It is a dismal thing to be getting old without the rejuvenating influence of religion. When we step on the down grade of life and see that it dips to the verge of the cold river, we want to behold some one near who will help us across it. When the sight loses its power to glance and gather up, we need the faith that can illumine. When we feel the failure of the ear, we need the clear tones of that voice which in olden times broke up the silence of the deaf with cadence of mercy. When the axemen of death hew down whole forests of strength and beauty around us and we are left in solitude, we need the dove of divine mercy to sing in our branches. When the shadows begin to fall and we feel that the day is far spent, we need most of all to supplicate the strong, beneficent Jesus in the prayer of the villagers, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

The request of the text is an appropriate exclamation for all those who are approached in the gloomy hour of temptation. There is nothing easier then to be good-natured when everything pleases, or to be humble when there is nothing to oppose us, or forgiving when we have not been assailed, or honest when we have no inducement to fraud. But you have felt the grapple of some temptation. Your nature at some time quaked and groaned under the infernal force. You felt that the devil was after you. You saw your Christian graces retreating. You feared that you would fall in the awful wrestle with sin and be thrown into the dust. The gloom thickened. The first indications of the night were seen in all the trembling of your soul; in all the infernal suggestions of Satan, in all the surging up of tumultuous passions and excitements, you felt with awful emphasis that it was toward evening. In the tempted hour you need to ask Jesus to abide with you. You can beat back the monster that would devour you. You can unhorse the sin that would ride you down. You can sharpen the battle-axe with which you split the head of helmeted abomination! Who helped Paul shake the brazen-gated heart of Felix? Who acted like a good sailor when all the crew howled in the Mediterranean shipwreck? Who helped the martyrs to be firm when one word of recantation would have unfastened the withes of the stake and put out the kindling fire? When the night of the soul came on and all the denizens of darkness came riding upon the winds of perdition—who gave strength to the soul? Who gave calmness to the heart? Who broke the spell of infernal enchantment? He who heard the request of the villagers, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

You have long rejoiced in the care of a mother. You have done everything to make her last days happy. You have run with quick feet to wait upon her every want. Her presence has been a perpetual blessing in the household. But the fruit-gatherers are looking wistfully at that tree. Her soul is ripe for heaven. The gates are ready to flash open for her entrance. But your soul sinks at the thought of a separation. You cannot bear to think that soon you will be called to take the last look at that face which from the first hour has looked upon you with affection unchangeable. But you see that life is ebbing and the grave will soon hide her from your sight. You sit quiet. You feel heavy-hearted. The light is fading from the sky. The air is chill. It is toward evening.

You had a considerable estate and felt independent. In five minutes on one fair balance-sheet you could see just how you stood in the world. But there came complications. Something that you imagined impossible happened. The best friend you had proved traitor to your interests. A sudden crash of national misfortunes prostrated your credit. You may today be going on in business, but you feel anxious about where you are standing, and fear that the next turning of the wheel will bring you prostrate. You foresee what you consider certain defalcation. You think of the anguish of telling your friends you are not worth a dollar. You know not how you will ever bring your children home from school. You wonder how you will stand the selling of your library or the moving into a plainer house. The misfortunes of life have accumulated. You wonder what makes the sky so dark. It is toward evening.

Trouble is an apothecary that mixes a great many draughts, bitter and sour and nauseous, and you must drink some one of them. Trouble puts up a great many packs, and you must carry some one of them. There is no sandal so thick and well adjusted but some thorn will strike through it. There is no sound so sweet but the undertaker's screw-driver grates through it. In this swift shuttle of the human heart some of the threads must break. The journey from Jerusalem to Emmaus will soon be ended. Our Bible, our common-sense, our observation reiterate in tones that we cannot mistake, and ought not to disregard. It is toward evening.

Oh, then, for Jesus to abide with us. He sweetens the cup. He extracts the thorn. He wipes the tear. He hushes the tempest. He soothes the soul that flies to him for shelter. Let the night swoop and the euroclydon cross the sea. Let the thunders roar—soon all will be well. Christ in the ship to soothe his friends. Christ on the sea to stop its tumult. Christ in the grave to scatter the darkness. Christ in the heavens to lead the way. Blessed all such. His arms will enclose them, his grace comfort them, his light cheer them, his sacrifice free them, his glory enchant them. If earthly estate takes wings, he will be an incorruptible treasure. If friends die, he will be their resurrection. Standing with us in the morning of our joy and in the noonday of our prosperity, he will not forsake us when the lustre has faded and it is toward evening.

This ought not to be a depressing theme. Who wants to live here forever? The world has always treated me well, and every day I feel less and less like scolding and complaining. But yet I would not want to make this my eternal residence. I love to watch the clouds, and bathe my soul in the blue sea of heaven; but I expect when the firmament is rolled away as a scroll to see a new heaven, grander, higher and more glorious. You ought to be willing to exchange your body that has headaches and sideaches and weaknesses innumerable, that limps with the stonebruise, or festers with the thorn, or flames on the funeral pyre of fevers, for an incorruptible body and an eye that blinks not before the jasper gates and the great white throne. But between that and this there is an hour about which no man should be reckless or foolhardy. I doubt not your courage, but I tell you that you will want something better than a strong arm, a good aim and a trusty sword when you come to your last battle. You will need a better robe than any you have in your wardrobe to keep you warm in that place.

Circumstances do not make so much difference. It may be a bright day when you push off from the planet, or it may be a dark night and while the owl is hooting from the forest. It may be spring, and your soul may go out among the blossoms, apple-orchards swinging their censers in the way. It may be winter and the earth in a snow shroud. It may be autumn, and the forests set on fire by the retreating year; dead nature laid out in state. It may be with your wife's hand in your hand, or you may be in a strange hotel with a servant faithful to the last. It may be in the rail train, shot off the switch and tumbling in long reverberation down the embankment—crash! crash! I know not the time; I know not the mode; but the days of our life are being subtracted away and we shall come down to the time when we have but ten days left, then nine days, then eight days, then seven days, six days, five days, four days, three days, two days, one day. Then hours; three hours, two hours, one hour. Then only minutes left; five minutes, four minutes, three minutes, two minutes, one minute. Then only seconds left; four seconds, three seconds, two seconds, one second. Gone! The chapter of life ended! The book closed! The pulses at rest! The feet through with the journey! The hands closed from all work. No word on the lips. No breath in the nostrils. Hair combed back to lie undisheveled by any human hands. The muscles still. The nerves still. The lungs still. The tongue still. All still. You might put the stethoscope to the breast and hear no sound. You might put a speaking-trumpet to the ear, but you could not wake the deafness. No motion; no throb; no life. Still! still!

So death comes to the disciple! What if the sun of life is about to set? Jesus is the day-spring from on high; the perpetual morning of every ransomed spirit. What if the darkness comes? Jesus is the light of the world and of heaven. What though this earthly house does crumble! Jesus has prepared a house of many mansions. Jesus is the anchor that always holds. Jesus is the light that is never eclipsed. Jesus is the fountain that is never exhausted. Jesus is the evening star, hung up amid the gloom of the gathering night!

You are almost through with the abuse and backbiting of enemies. They will call you no more by evil names. Your good deeds will no longer be misinterpreted nor your honor filched. The troubles of earth will end in the felicities! Toward evening! The bereavements of earth will soon be lifted. You will not much longer stand pouring your grief in the tomb, like Rachel weeping for her children or David mourning for Absalom. Broken hearts bound up. Wounds healed. Tears wiped away. Sorrows terminated. No more sounding of the dead march! Toward evening. Death will come, sweet as slumber to the eyelids of the babe, as full rations to a starving soldier, as evening hour to the exhausted workman. The sky will take on its sunset glow, every cloud a fire-psalm, every lake a glassy mirror; the forests transfigured; delicate mists climbing the air. Your friends will announce it; your pulses will beat it; your joys will ring it; your lips will whisper it: "Toward evening!"

The Art of Life.

Science has already done a vast amount of detached work for the improvement of life. But she is now beginning to go to work constructively on the life of man as a whole. She is beginning to recognize that all the sciences exist for the supreme science, the science of life. Out of this supreme science is to come some day the supreme art, the art of life.—Rev. W. R. Taylor, Presbyterian, Rochester.

Evolution.

The time must come when all scientific men will admit that there must be something beyond this present life of ours. The theory of evolution is now being accepted by all leaders of science, and the only interpretation of life as we see it is that there must be another life beyond for which we are being prepared. The doctrine of immortality is now popularly accepted.—Rev. Henry Blanchard, Universalist, Portland, Me.

In Touch with the Unseen.

We are in touch with the Invisible every hour; in His hand our breath is, and his are all our ways. We talk with him when we pray. This is the holy secret of our prayer. We have but to believe to see this secret, not necessarily to understand it, only to know that this is its mysterious quality, its matchless splendor, in order to feel the need and to recognize the worth of daily prayer.—Rollin A. Sawyer, D. D.

ROQUEFORT CHEESE.

How It Is Made—Peculiar Flavor Due to Method of Curing.

It is supposed that hundreds of years ago the south of France was disturbed by volcanic eruptions, which split up the ancient granite rocks, causing streams of lava to flow from them, says the Mercury. The new surface consisted of basaltic rocks, which in turn were fissured by eruptions and thrown up onto a mountain range. The whole of the interior of a mountain was thus formed into caverns and caves, which belch forth hot, sulphurous springs. It is here that the celebrated Roquefort cheeses are made. The village of Roquefort is situated on the mountain Larzac, which is about twenty-five miles in length and nearly 3,000 feet high. It consists chiefly of limestone, covered with sufficient pasture to feed the 300,000 sheep kept for their milk. The caves, being formed by the displacement of rocks, consist of an intricate labyrinth of open spaces and passages, connected with each other and with a subterranean outlet. A cool current of air, therefore, always of the same degree of humidity and temperature, flows in a never-interrupted stream through the caves. There is nothing in the milk or in the preparation of the cheeses that gives them that peculiar flavor and delicious mellowness for which they are so renowned. This is entirely effected by the method by which they are cured. When the cheeses are ready for treatment they are taken to the caves and after being allowed to cool are carried to the salting room. They are rubbed with salt on one face and then piled on top of each other until the cave is full. After standing for twenty-four hours or so the reverse side is salted and once more they are piled up as before. The cheeses have to be frequently reversed in order that the moisture may be even throughout and to develop the fungus which has previously been sown in the curd. In forty-eight hours the cheeses become viscous and are rubbed with a coarse cloth. In the course of another two days the fungus will appear on the outside in the form of a sticky paste. This is carefully scraped off with knives, together with a thin stratum of crust, and set aside for food.

The cheeses are now sorted out, the most solid ones being placed on the floor. In eight days' time they become covered with a yellowish-red mold, together with other minute vegetation, which is removed and given to the pigs. The scraping is continued until the character of the mold changes, showing that the curd has altered its condition and announcing the completion of the curd. Then they are again carefully scraped and wiped and wrapped in tinfoil and are ready for the market.

Roquefort cheeses have been cured for centuries by this process and stand as a triumph of uneducated art.

He Played Another Game.

As the train sped along over the Texas prairie a drummer for a St. Louis house came back into the parlor car and asked me to come forward into the smoker and take a hand in a game of euchre. I found two other chaps belonging to the "profesh" and we had the car to ourselves. After a few moments, however, a young man got on at a small station. He was a native but he didn't seem to be over bright and not at all dangerous. He watched the cards with much interest for two or three games and one of the men finally observed:

"Stranger, do you play this game?"

"No, I don't," he drawled. "What do you call it?"

"This is called four-handed euchre."

"Y-e-s"

"Lots of fun in it and you ought to learn to play. It's good to take hayseed out of the hair."

The young man removed his hat and ran his fingers through his hair, as if expecting to comb out a lot of hayseed, and it was three or four minutes before he said:

"So that's four-handed euchre, eh?"

"Yes, nice game, isn't it?"

"'Pears like it, but I've got one to beat it"

"Have you? What do you call it?"

"I call it a one-handed hold-up and here's lookin' at you!"

He was not only looking at us but his two guns were doing the same thing and the man looked bright enough and carried a smile at the corners of his mouth.

"Yes, your game beats this," said the drummer after a look. "Boys, he wants our boodle."

We put down four watches and four wads of greenbacks and the young man reached for them with the remark:

"I generally take all the tricks in this game! I git off here and if you want to raise a row go ahead."

We didn't. We sat right there until the train started up and left him behind and when the conductor came in and saw the cards on the floor and four men looking tired he exclaimed:

"Well, well! But you fellows seem to need something to brace up on."

Rev. A. M. Shimer, 1544 E. Maple St., Des Moines, Iowa, writes: "Myself and family have used your Dr. Kay's Renovator and we regard it as a very excellent medicine. Its gentle action upon the stomach and its effect upon the general system is very satisfactory. I have been troubled for a number of years with INSOMNIA, and I have used various remedies with but little, if any, beneficial effect until I commenced using Dr. Kay's Renovator. Now I sleep sweetly."

THE GREAT NURSERIES.

LOUISIANA, MO., ROCKPORT, ILLS.

Visited by Gov. Colman, Ex.-Sec'y Agri. and the Hort. Ed., Judge Miller.

"Oh, how insignificant all my fifty years of nursery business seems, all combined, when compared with this stupendous establishment, where they count by millions," said Judge Miller, that veteran horticulturist, as he, in company with the writer, were being driven to the various departments of this vast nursery.

In an experience of over forty years we do not remember to have passed through an establishment where so large a number of hands were employed, whose duties were so thoroughly systematized, and where business capacity of a higher order was manifested.

It is not in the soil of every farm that one finds qualities essential to the growth of the different kinds of Nursery stock, hence it has devolved upon these gentlemen, who were born to the Nursery business, to select from among the hills and valleys of the two Pikes such portions as are adapted to the purposes. But in this very fact of selection of soil we see their exceeding care for the future success of their stock.

Missouri and Illinois have no more worthy institutions than the Stark Nurseries, and surely no better or more representative men than the proprietors. The business is growing on their hands, as it deserves to grow.

They have a system of 40,000 acres o. commercial test orchards located in great fruit growing regions.

The canvassing force is being increased, 5,000 fine outfits ready. Stark Nurseries always have room for more active workers because they have millions of Stark trees to sell.—Colman's Rural World.

A Lucky Woman.

Doctor—My dear madam, I can do nothing whatever for you.

BACKACHE.

A Very Significant Indication of Organic Derangement.

The back, "the mainspring of woman's organism," quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in loins, and weight in lower part of body, blues and "all gone" feeling, that nature requires assistance, and at once. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for twenty years has been the one and only effective remedy in such cases. It speedily removes the cause and effectually restores the organs to a healthy and normal condition. Mrs. Pinkham cheerfully answers all letters from ailing women who require advice, without charge. Thousands of cases like this are recorded.

"I have taken one-half dozen bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has relieved me from all pain. I cannot tell you the agony I endured for years; pains in my back (Oh, the backache was dreadful!) and bearing-down pains in the abdomen extending down into my limbs; headache and nausea, and very painful menstruations. I had grown very thin, a mere shadow of my former self. Now I am without a single pain and am gaining in flesh rapidly."—MATTIE GLENN, 1561 Dudley St., Cincinnati,

Fine Sarcasm.

Mrs. Wallace—I thought you told me this was an educated parrot?

WIT, HUMOR AND SATIRE ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The Up-to-Date Woman — A Bicycle Parade—A Sad State of Affairs — So Near and Yet So Far—Struck It the First Time.

NO doubt you're very sweet, my blooming dear,
And very muscular and greatly wise,
And yet you'll hardly do for me, I fear,
Though so much learning in your small head lies,
And you've such darling eyes.

'Tis fine to see you "biking," I confess;
You're splendid form; you hold your head so high.
You're cultured much. You think, I shrewdly guess,
You're worth a dozen fellows such as I.
Still, sweet, I do not sigh.

You're clever, dear, and have a pleasant wit,
In very truth, I like to see you 'round.
You're brave and gay and quite au fait, but yet
For sweet Love's ways you are a bit profound,
And then, you're masculinely gowned.

So, by your leave, I will resume my flight.
I seek the arms of charming Gwendolyn,
A girl of gowns, perhaps not over bright,
But sweetly, neatly, strictly feminine.
Wise maid, Love bids to you, good night.

—R. Cecil O'Neill, in To Date.

So Near and Yet So Far.

Fizzer—I tell you what, old body, it's a case that makes my heart bleed. The fellow has died and left a wife and six little ones entirely unprovided for.

Quizzer—Didn't he even have his life insured?

"Oh, no; no company would risk him—his profession was too hazardous."

"Why, what was he?"

"A life insurance agent."

Struck It the First Time.

"So you have written a novel?"

"Yes."

"Has your heroine satin skin, velvet eyelashes, and hair like threads of spun gold?"

"Yes."

"Is her name Gwendoline?"

"It is."

"Then I don't see why it shouldn't be a success."

The Beginning of the End.

Something whizzed through the air at a distance of about ten feet from the head of William the Conqueror. "Wasn't that an arrow?" asked the monarch.

"It went rather too wide for a narrow," said the court jester, and from that moment his office began to lose in importance and respectability.

A Helpful Coterie.

"So you enjoy belonging to the Fat Men's Club?"

"Oh, yes; it is delightful."

"What are some of the pleasures?"

"Why, every fat man in the club discovers at once that all the other men in the club are fatter than he is."

That Terrible Sourge.

Malarial disease is invariably supplemented by disturbance of the liver, the bowels, the stomach and the nerves. To the removal of both the cause and its effects, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is fully adequate. It "fills the bill" as no other remedy does, performing its work thoroughly. Its ingredients are pure and wholesome, and it admirably serves to build up a system broken by ill health and shorn of strength. Constipation, liver and kidney complaint and nervousness are conquered by it.

Took Her at Her Word.

TO STOP THE FLOW OF BLOOD.

In the butcher's work it happens frequently that he cuts himself and looses considerable blood, owing to the fact that he does not know what to do. For such cases each butcher should keep in his mind the following simple but sure remedy: Take a lump of cotton batting, soak it in hot, clean water, and cover the wound with it. The result will be surprising. Even the flow of blood from arteries which have been severed will cease. To put on the batting alone, or soak it in cold water will not have any effect. The water must be hot as the injured one can stand it without scalding him.—Drovers Journal.

The western railroads have turned their attention in their rate war from grain to hard coal. Formerly the greater part of the shipments of this commodity from the east went around Chicago via Peoria. As a result certain eastern roads captured the bulk of this traffic. Today the Chicago Great Western announced a cut of 22½ cents per ton on rates from Chicago to Hampton, Marshalltown and Manley Junction, Iowa, to take effect Monday next. Corresponding reductions will be made to other points in Iowa where the present rates are higher than the reduction will be.—C. R. Republican.

The Columbus Buggy company was organized as a partnership in 1876. George M. Peters and C. D. Firestone are the two surviving members of the orginal firm. It employs about 1,000 men when running in full force. and about 600 were at work at the time the failure occurred. The firm had branch houses in a dozen of the leading cities of the country. No estimate of the assets and liabilities has been made but they will each approach nearly $1,000,000.—Ex,

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

Nothing really hurts a lazy man like learning that when he did labor 'twas in vain.

Cuba's sugar crop last year was worth $50,000,000; this year it will not reach $10,000,000. War is a costly luxury.

Secretary Hoke Smith is learning to ride the bicycle. He evidently is working up a little revolution on his own account.

Never ask questions that are not absolutely necessary, and people will be a longer time in finding out how little you know.

In spite of her son's admission that he killed his older brother while angry a New York mother insists that it was an accident. Is this faith, blindness, or both?

A dispatch from St. Cloud, Minn., says that a family there has been poisoned by drinking lemonade on the Fourth of July. Evidently there is some mistake. People have been poisoned by such pale canned goods as peaches or by picnic ice cream, and even boarding house coffee, but never since the birth of freedom has a Fourth of July lemonade with sufficient force of character to poison a drowning fly been put on exhibit.

The city of New Haven, Conn., will inaugurate an important movement in trying to compel Yale University to pay a regulation tax on all buildings which yield it a revenue of over $6,000 a year. This was decided on June 30 by Town Counsel Goodhart in an opinion to the board of assessors. The Yale authorities announced that they will resist the payment of taxes to the court of last resort. This is the first attempt to compel an American university to pay taxes.

The determination of the heir of the house of Vanderbilt to choose his own wife is making considerable trouble in the family. And yet the rule of royal marriages has never been established in this country, though some of the money kings consider it is very appropriate to their families. In this particular case there is so much determination on both sides that the issue is in doubt, but youthful enthusiasm is likely to win, even against the threat of disinheritance.

Albert L. Rawson, the noted artist, is in trouble again. His recent expulsion from the celebrated Thirteen club for forging a letter of acceptance of membership from H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, is still well remembered, and now he is being sued by Mrs. Gaudin, the woman famous through her recent inheritance of $17,000,000 from an unexpected source. Rawson procured from her under some false pretenses a number of letters, which she has received since her good luck was made public, most of them offers of marriage, and published them in a New York paper last Sunday, together with a letter purporting to be written by her to the editor. She has at once sued him for the $200, which is the extent of the law in such matters.

A correspondent of the London Times states that the growing of early potatoes has been completely superseded as the chief industry of the Scilly Islands by the cultivation of the narcissus for the English flower market. Ten or fifteen years ago the narcissus was looked on as an unmitigated pest by the farmers, and cartloads of bulbs were to be had for the asking by the pioneers of the new industry. But now the better sorts of narcissi cost from £1 to £2 per 1,000, and an acre of land takes 400,000 bulbs. About 400 acres are under this cultivation, and the islanders draw about £40,000 a year from this source. Nearly all the potatoes and other vegetables consumed in Scilly have now to be imported. As soon as the forcing of narcissi is over, the houses are filled with tomato plants.

The message of the president of Chili at the opening of congress stated "that the revenue for 1895 and the surplus from 1894 amounted to $101,000,000, and the expenditure to $93,000,000. The estimated expenditure for 1896 is $86,000,000 and the estimated surplus $3,000,000. The foreign debt, which in 1891 was £9,000,000, has increased to £18,000,000, including the proposed loan of £4,000,000. In the last five years the expenses of the civil war—$104,000,000—have been paid, the internal debt has been reduced by $45,000,000, and the floating debt by $25,000,000. International claims have been paid to the amount of $2,000,000, and $8,000,000 of guano accounts have been settled. As much as $55,000,000 has been spent on public works, and $41,000,000 of metallic money has been issued. The imports last year exceed those of the previous year by $14,000,000. Measures will be submitted for the protection of national industry and the reform of customs tariffs."

THE NEWS IN IOWA

THE STATE GETS THE MONEY.

A Decision in the Famous Parks Case at Council Bluffs.

DES MOINES, August 1.—The famous Parks case is at last ended, and, after twenty years in court, the deposit made by William Parks in the First National Bank at Council Bluffs in March, 1873, just before he died, and left no heirs, will be deposited in the state treasury. The court of Woodbury county denied the application of the state of Iowa to set aside the order made in the case in 1892 allowing attorney's administrator's fees and approves the report of E. W. Davenport filed June 23. The administrator is also ordered to collect the judgment of $3,227 agreed upon by the First National Bank and the attorneys for the state, and, after paying the claims and costs of the suit, to turn the balance over to the state of Iowa as an escheat to the school fund.

PROVES TO BE MURDER.

E. N. Chapin Dies at Marshalltown of Injuries Inflicted by Hinshaw.

MARSHALLTOWN July 31.—E. N. Chapin has died and the man Henshaw, who brutally attacked him, will probably be indicted by the grand jury for murder. Friday, June 26, Chapin was attacked while on his farm by a tenant, Henshaw, and brutally assaulted. Henshaw was arrested and charged with assault and battery, but the case was postponed on account of Chapin's condition. About a week ago the doctors admitted that he could never get well. Then the charge of assault and battery against Henshaw was dropped and he was bound over to the grand jury charged with assault with intent to commit great bodily injury. Henshaw is now in jail and acts as though out of his head, although everyone believes he is trying to play the insanity dodge.

YOUNG LADIES DROWNED.

Two Girls Lose Their Lives While in Bathing.

BURLINGTON, July 31.—Miss Mary Phares and Miss Webber were drowned near Milton while bathing in Miss Webber's father's pond. Mr. Webber's wife is dead, and his daughter kept house for him and her brothers. During harvest Miss Phares had been employed to help with the work. The young women were left alone, as usual, and their absence was not discovered until the men returned from work. Not being found in the house search was made and a few articles of clothing were found on the bank of a large pond near the house. The pond was drained and the bodies were found.

DRAGGED TO HIS DEATH.

James Kennedy Attempts to Lead a Vicious Cow and is Killed.

CLINTON, Aug. 2.—Near Gambill, west of here, James Kennedy, a farmer, attempted to lead a vicious cow with a rope. The animal got the best of him, a struggle for the mastery ensued, and he was finally dragged for some distance, receiving injuries which resulted fatally.

Murdered His Grandfather.

BURLINGTON, August 2.—Last December Louis Krekal, an old man who lived near here, disappeared, and diligent search failed to reveal his whereabouts. His body has just been discovered in a well. Evidence showed that he was murdered, and his grandson, Henry Teuscher, with whom he lived, was arrested. He has confessed, saying the murder was the result of a quarrel over a trivial matter.

Garden Grove Postoffice Robbed.

GARDEN GROVE, July 31.—Burglars forced open the rear door of the postoffice, blew open the safe, in which the postmaster kept his money and stamps, and secured about $50 in money and $3.37 in stamps. There is no clue to the thieves, although three suspicious strangers were on the streets who disappeared during the night.

Iowa Lawyers.

DAVENPORT, August 1.—The Iowa State Bar Association elected officers as follows: President, J. H. Henderson, Indianola; vice-president, Judge M. J. Wade, Iowa City; secretary, N. E. Coffin, Des Moines; treasurer, George F. Henry, Des Moines. Cedar Rapids was selected as the next place of meeting.

Chicago Man Killed in Iowa.

COLUMBUS JUNCTION, July 31.—A man named Kumm, foreman of a gang of Rock Island Railway painters, fell from the Iowa river bridge and was drowned. The body was recovered in about an hour and was shipped to his home in Chicago, where he leaves a widow and four children.

Two Muscatine Girls Drowned.

MUSCATINE, Aug. 1.—Belle Knott and Gertie Bishop, aged fifteen and thirteen, were drowned while trying to ride in a roughly constructed box across a small pond here.

SUED FOR $10,000.

Madrid Minister Charged With Defamation of Character.

MADRID Aug. 1.—Papers have been served on the Rev. Mr. Ellet, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, asking $10,000 for defamation of character. It seems that Rev. Mr. Ellet, while delivering a lecture in Garden township, said during the discourse that Geo. A. A. Young and J. M. Carlson received $300 each for their votes in the city council from B. Arie. Said votes were in the interest of the saloon. Messrs. Young and Carlson, as soon as the matter came to their knowledge, at once instituted proceedings against the Rev. Mr. Ellet for $5,000 each.

STRANGE SUICIDE.

Prominent Business Man Uses Arsenic Fatally.

INDEPENDENCE, Aug. 1.—Samuel Slemmons, a prominent business man, committed suicide with arsenic. He came from Chicago, went to the house of a friend, and refused to go home. He took the poison between 3 and 5 a. m. and death resulted. He has lost heavily in business ventures during the past five years, and two years ago invested all his own, and considerable borrowed money, at Cripple Creek, which he lost. He leaves a wife and several children.

GIRL BURNED TO DEATH.

Awful and Agonizing Death of an 8-Year-Old Girl.

MASON CITY, August 1.—Lula Dawson, the 8-year-old daughter of John Dawson, was burned to death. She was kindling a fire in the kitchen stove, using shavings. A lighted one dropped to the floor unnoticed, which set her dress on fire. Before the blaze was extinguished she was burned to a crisp.

IOWA GOLD DEMOCRATS.

L. M. Martin Issues a Call For a Meeting August 4.

MARSHALLTOWN, July 31.—Col. L. M. Martin has issued a call for a convention of Iowa "sound money" democrats to meet at Des Moines August 4 to select delegates to the meeting at Indianapolis, August 7, democrats in favor of a national democratic convention being especially invited.

Bold Iowa Robbers.

DUBUQUE, Aug. 3.—A number of stores in Greeley, Delaware county, were burglarized and the burglars escaped with about $1,000 worth of plunder. They left on a hand car, and meeting a section hand, they bound and gagged him and shoved him into a box car. They then proceeded as far south as Delaware station, where all track of them was lost.

The State Tax Levy Fixed.

DES MOINES, August 3.—The executive council has placed the state tax levy for the coming year at two and seven-tenths mills, an increase of two-tenths of a mill over what it was last year. This increase in the levy is made necessary by the fact that the last legislature increased the appropriations materially.

Grasshoppers in Plenty.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, August 1.—Millions of grasshoppers passed over here, going north and east. They appeared to be from 300 to 600 feet from the ground. At one time they nearly obscured the sun. None of them alighted here.

The Waterloo Scandal.

WATERLOO, July 31.—An effort is being made to secure the release of Rev. Scott by habeas corpus proceedings. Both Scott and Daisy have sworn that when they were alone in Daisy's home last April no crime was committed.

BREVITIES.

Congressman Cousins has been renominated by Fifth district republicans.

The Iowa College of Law, at Des Moines, seems to be growing faster than any other law school, and is to have a new building this year. Neat catalogues have been prepared by the secretary, Prof. P. S. McNutt. Get one.

A storm of large proportions struck St. Anthony a few nights since and as a result nearly every building in the town is wrecked or badly damaged. So far as known no one was injured. It is impossible to estimate the damage at present, but it will reach many thousands of dollars on town property and in the surrounding country the damage to crops is enormous. Corn was literally blown out by the roots, while oats in shock was scattered and badly injured. The residence of William Dennis, south of Albion, was blown to pieces and Mrs. Dennis was fatally injured. At Dyersville, on the Illinois Central, 400 feet of track was washed out. Marshalltown reports damage to crops in that vicinity. Sioux City reports great damage to pavements. Aurelia reports all crops destroyed in the storm's path. Windmills, outbuildings and orchards suffered over all the section visited.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

DEATH IN A WAVE.

Tidal Wave Kills Four Thousand in China.

SHANGHAI, August 2.—The recent disastrous tidal wave along the coast of northern Japan has been paralleled by a similar phenomenon on the coast of Haichau, northeast of the province of Kiangsu, in which Shanghai is situated. In the Yellow sea, a huge bank of water five miles wide rushed shoreward with terrific velocity. Thousands of tons of water was thrown for miles inland and everything in its path was swept away. Many villages were entirely destroyed and it is estimated that fully 4,000 people perished. All the cattle were drowned and the rice fields obliterated. In many cases whole families were lost. There is already much suffering among the survivors, who, miserably poor before the disaster, are now absolutely homeless and foodless. It is feared that later details will add to the number of lives lost and the extent of the damage done.

FUNFKIRCHEN WRECKED.

An Awful Powder Explosion Occurs Near Budapest.

BUDAPEST, July 31.—A powder magazine at Funfkirchen, capital of the county of Baranya, exploded. The town hall was almost completely wrecked and other buildings in the vicinity were badly damaged. Five persons were instantly killed. More than 100 persons were injured and it is thought that a large proportion of them will die. Some of the buildings in the vicinity of the magazine collapsed under the effects of the shock, and there is reason to believe that many of their inmates were buried in the ruins. The municipal authorities, aided by the military, are making every effort to clear away the ruins and rescue those who may be imprisoned beneath them. The magazine was located but a short distance from the square in which the market is held. It was market day and the square was crowded with rustics when the explosion occurred. Among the injured are many of these country people.

DISPUTE OVER THE PLATFORM.

Jones Says the Officially Reported Democratic Money Plank is Wrong.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., August 2.—The national democratic platform adopted at Chicago, as certified by the official stenographer, contains a clause in the money plank which, according to Sentaor James K. Jones, chairman of the national democratic committee, was rejected by the convention and has no place in the official platform. In the certified copy of the platform after the sentence demanding that the silver dollar "shall be a full legal tender equally with gold for all debts, public and private, and we favor such legislation as will prevent for the future the demonetization of any kind of legal tender money by private contract," appears the clause: "But it should be carefully provided by law at the same time that any change in the monetary standard should not apply to existing contracts." This latter clause, according to Senator Jones, was not adopted. It was offered as an amendment by Senator Hill, of New York.

QUEEN OF THE PACERS.

CLEVELAND, July 31.—Lottie Loraine won the title of queen of all the pacers at the Grand Circuit races, making the three fastest heats ever paced by a mare and lowering her record from 2:10¼ to 2:07¾. This daughter of Gambetta Wilkes started with a field of twelve other horses in the 2:09 pacing event and won in the greatest race of the day. The time was 2:08¼, 2:08¾ and 2:07¾.

Cuban Filibusters Land.

NEW YORK, August 2.—The Herald's Key West special says: Passengers from Havana by the steamer Mascotte report a rumor of a successful landing of a filibustering expedition in the vicinity of Cienfugos. Another expedition is said to be organizing here and to be almost ready to sail.

Look After Rhodes Now.

LONDON, July 31.—The house of commons adopted a motion to appoint a select committee to inquire into the administration of the British Chartered South Africa Company and into the origin and circumstances of Dr. Jameson's raid.

Rowboat Crossed the Ocean.

LONDON, August 3.—The rowboat containing Frank Harbo and George Samuelson, who left New York June 6 to row to Havre, France, has arrived at Sicily island. Both men are in good condition.

Columbus Buggy Firm Fails.

COLUMBUS, O., August 3.—The Columbus Buggy Company made an assignment to W. A. Miles & Co. Assets $800,000 to $1,000,000. The contingent liabilities are large.

NEARLY FIFTY KILLED.

Awful Railroad Wreck in New Jersey, resulting Fatally.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 31.—The Reading railroad express which left Philadelphia at 5:40 p. m. for Atlantic City crashed into a Pennsylvania railroad excursion train at the second signal tower, about four miles out from this place. The Pennsylvania train was running to Bridgeton with a party of excursionists from that place, Millville and neighboring towns. At the second signal tower the tracks of the two roads cross diagonally. The Reading train was given the signal, but it either failed to work or the speed of the express was too great to be checked in time. It caught the excursion train broadside and plowed through, literally cleaving it in twain. The engine of the Reading train was shattered to pieces. The excursion train was made up of fifteen cars, the foremost of which was a baggage car, and they were all crowded. The baggage car and the next two coaches caught the full force of the crash and were utterly demolished. What remained of the third car was tumbled into a ditch at the roadside. A report from one of the officials says there were 37 persons killed, 21 men, 12 women, 2 boys and 2 girls. It is generally believed this list will be considerably swelled. The injured will reach three score.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., August 1.—Forty-seven dead and forty-three injured, these are complete figures on the appalling disaster on the Meadows. Of these forty have been identified. Three of the unidentified were men and three women. The odd one consists of an arm to which no body has been found. Of the injured it is more than probable that four or five will die. Many of the others are injured only superficially. The arrest of William Thurston, the telegraph operator in Signal tower, confirms the theory of a mistake in the display of signals as the first cause of the disaster. This is purely conjectural, however, as the arrest may have been in the way of formality.

TERSE NEWS.

The Irish land bill passed on the third reading in the English house of commons.

Senator Butler has been elected chairman of the populist national committee.

In a speech at Alfred, Me., a few days ago Thomas B. Reed opened the campaign in that state.

Official reports are to the effect that the harvest has been a failure throughout the most fertile grain producing districts in the south of Russia.

It is now known that fourteen persons lost their lives in the terrible storm in the vicinity of Pittsburg. Thirty-six others were injured. The list of losses is increasing. Great damage is reported from all over the state.

Berlin dispatch: The officials at the imperial admiralty confirm the report of the loss of the gunboat Iltis, in a typhoon ten miles off the Chinese coast. Dispatches received at the admiralty show that seventy-five officers and men lost their lives in the disaster and that ten were saved.

The principal event of the recent boating carnival at Halifax, N. S., was in the professional single scull race for the world's championship, distance three miles. Gaudaur took the lead from the start, and, never being headed, crossed the finish line in 20:25, having almost a walkover. Rogers, of Schuyler, N. Y., led Hanlon, of Ontario, about half a length. The prizes in this event were $500 to first, $150 to second, and $100 to third.

Pittsburg dispatch: A wind and rain storm of unusual fierceness visited this city, causing the loss of at least three lives and doing immense damage to property. Several dwellings were completely demolished and others partially wrecked. Eight or ten churches had their roofs blown off and otherwise damaged. Telegraph, telephone and electric light poles were snapped like pipe stems, mixing the wires in an inextricable mass in the streets, and making travel in many sections of the city impossible. New York, Philadelphia, Columbus, Baltimore, Cincinnati and Detroit report a large amount of damage of a minor nature.

The great ship building yards of Harlan & Wolff, at Belfast, Scotland was burned recently. Loss, $1,250,000. The yards, with the Marine Engine Iron works attached, cover an area of nearly eighty acres. The firm employed upward of 8,000 hands. The yards were on the admiralty list as suitable for building vessels for the royal navy. The fire began early in the morning in the engine fitting department, and, as a high wind was blowing, the flames spread rapidly. The fire was communicated to the buildings in the shipyard of Workman, Clark & Co., adjoining Harlan & Wolff's. The buildings in both yards, which were mostly huge wooden structures, were destroyed.

THE FATAL GLOVE.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

She stopped suddenly, and, rising, was about to leave the room. He took her hand, and closed the door she had opened, leading her to a seat.

"My dear Miss Lee, I do not comprehend you. Explain. If I have ever injured you in any way, it has been the very thing farthest removed from my intentions. Will you not give me a chance to defend myself?"

She blushed painfully; her embarrassment disturbed him, for he was generous to all, and he really felt very kindly toward her.

"I cannot explain," she said in a subdued voice. "I am sorry you came just now. But these slanders anger me, as well as wound my feelings."

"What slanders, Miss Lee?"

"I will tell you. Remember that you sought the information. Your coming here has been made the subject of remark, and I have been accused of having schemed to draw you here. You know if it be true."

His face flushed slowly. He recalled the silly stories that had some time before reached his ears. And because of them she had suffered. This woman whose unremitting care had saved his life! How thoughtless and cruel he had been! He was a man of honor; if any woman's reputation had been injured through his means, there was but one course for him to pursue. He must made reparation. And how? For a moment his head whirled, but glancing at the pale, distressed face before him, he made his decision.

"Alexandrine," he said quietly, "you know just what my course has been. You know my lowly origin—you know how life has cheated me of happiness. You know how dear Margie Harrison was to me, and how I lost her. I loved her with my whole soul—she will be the one love of my lifetime. I shall never love another woman as I loved her. But if my name and the position I can give my wife, will be pleasant to you, then I ask you to accept them, as some slight recompense for what I have made you suffer. If you can be satisfied with the sincere respect and friendship I feel for you, then I offer myself to you. You deserve my heart, but I have none to give to any one. I have buried it so deep that it will never know a resurrection."

She shuddered and grew pale. To one of her passionate nature—loving him as she did—it was but a sorry wooing. His love she could never have. But if she married him, she should be always near him; sometimes he would hold her hands in his, and call her, as he did now, Alexandrine. Her apparent struggle with herself pained him. Perhaps he guessed something of its cause. He put his arm around her waist.

"My child," he said, kindly, "do you love me? Do you indeed care for me? Cold and indifferent as I have been? Tell me truly, Alexandrine?"

She did tell him truly; something within urged her to let him see her heart as it was. For a moment she put aside all her pride.

"I do love you," she said, "God only knows how dearly!"

He looked at her with gentle, pitying eyes, but he did not touch the red lips so near his own. He could not be a hypocrite.

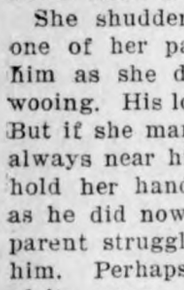
"I will be good to you, Alexandrine. God helping me, you shall never have cause for complaint. I will make your life as happy as I can. I will give you all that my life's shipwreck spared me. Will that content you? Will you be my wife?"

Still she did not reply.

"Are you afraid to risk it?" he asked, almost sadly.

"No, I am not afraid! I will risk everything!" she answered.

CHAPTER XVII.



MEANWHILE what of Margie Harrison? Through the dull, stormy day she had been whirled along like the wind. The train was an express, and made few stoppages. Margie took little note of anything which occurred. She sat in her hard seat like one in a trance, and paid no heed to the lapse of time, until the piteous whining of Leo warned her that night was near, and the poor dog was hungry. At the first stopping-place she purchased some bread and meat for him, but nothing for herself. She could not have swallowed a mouthful.

Still the untiring train dashed on. Boston was reached at last. She got out, and stood, confused and bewildered, gazing around her. It was night and the place was strange to her. The cries of the porters and hackmen—the bustle and dire confusion, struck a chill to her heart. The crowd hurried hither and thither, each one intent on his own business, and the lamps gave out a dismal light, dimmed as they were by the hanging clouds of mist and fog. Alone in a great city! For the first time in her life she felt the significance of the words she had so often heard. She had never traveled half a dozen miles before, by herself, and she felt almost as helpless as a little child.

"Carriage, ma'am?" said a hackman, touching her arm.

"Yes," she said, mechanically, and put her hand in her pocket for her porte-monnaie, with a vague idea that she must pay him before she started.

She uttered a low cry of dismay! Her pocket-book was missing! She searched more thoroughly, but it was not to be found. Her pocket had been picked. She turned a piteous face to the hackman.

"My money is lost, sir!" she said, "but if you will take me to a place of shelter, I will remunerate you some way."

"Sorry to be obliged to refuse, ma'am," said the man, civilly enough, "but I'm a poor man with a family, and can't afford to keep my horses for nothing."

"What is it, driver?" queried a rough voice; and in a moment a crowd had gathered around poor, shrinking Margie, and growling, indignant Leo.

"The woman's lost her purse—"

"Oh, ho! the old story—eh? Beauty in distress. Should think they'd get tired of playing that game!" said the coarse voice, which belonged to a lounger and hanger-on at the depot.

"Looks rather suspicious, ma'am, for ye to be traveling on the train alone," began the hackman; but he was interrupted by the lounger.

"That's the way they all travel. Well, thank the Lord, I hain't so gallant as to git taken in by every decent face I see!"

"Thank heaven, I am not so lost to all sense of decency as to insult a lady!" said a clear, stern voice; and a tall, distinguished-looking man swept through the crowd, and reached Margie's side.

"Indeed, I am not mistaken!" he said, looking at her with amazement. "Miss Harrison!"

She saw, as he lifted his hat, the frank, handsome face of Louis Castrani. All her troubles were over—this man was a pillar of strength to her weakness. She caught his arm eagerly, and Leo barked with joy, recognizing a friend.

"I am so glad to see you, Mr. Castrani!"

His countenance lighted instantly. He pressed the hand on his arm.

"Thank you, my friend. What service can I render you? Where do you wish to go? Let me act for you."

"Oh, thank you—if you only will! I was going further, but the train I wished to take had been gone some hours, and I must stay here to-night. And on my way, somewhere, my money has been stolen."

"Give yourself no more uneasiness. I am only too happy to be of any use to you."

The crowd dispersed, and Castrani called a carriage, and put Margie and Leo inside.

"Have you any choice of hotels?"

"None. I am entirely unacquainted here. You know best."

"To the —— House," he said to the driver; and thither they were taken.

A warm room and a tempting supper were provided, but Margie could not eat. She only swallowed a little toast, and drank a cup of tea. Castrani came to her parlor just after she had finished, but he did not sit down. He had too much delicacy to intrude himself upon her when accident had thrown them together.

"I was called here on very urgent business," he said, "and shall be obliged to attend to it to-night, but I shall return soon, and will see you in the morning. Meanwhile, feel perfectly at home. I have engaged a chamber-maid to attend to you, and do not be afraid to make your wants known. Good-night, now, and pleasant dreams."

She was so weary, that she slept some, with Leo hugged tightly to her breast; for she felt a sense of security in having this faithful friend near her. Breakfast was served in her room, and by and by Castrani came up. He spoke to her cheerfully, though he could not fail to notice that some terrible blow had fallen upon her since last he had seen her, gay and brilliant, at a party in New York. But he forebore to question her. Margie appreciated his delicacy, and something impelled her to confide to him what she had not entrusted to the discretion of any other person. She owed him this confidence, for his disinterested kindness.

"Mr. Castrani," she said, quietly enough, outwardly, "circumstances of which I cannot speak, have made it necessary for me to leave New York. I do not desire that the place of my destination shall be known to any one. But to show you how much I appreciate your kindness, and how entirely I trust you, I will inform you that I am going to Lightfield, in New Hampshire, to stop an indefinite length of time with my old nurse, Mrs. Day."

Castrani was visibly affected by this proof of her confidence.

"From me, no one shall ever know the place of your refuge," he said, earnestly. "Your train leaves at ten. It is now nine. If you would only permit me to see you safely to the end of your journey!"

She flushed. He read a quite reproach in her eye.

"Pardon me. I know it may seem like officiousness, but I would try and not be disagreeable to you. I would not even speak to you, if you desired it should be so. But I could travel in the same car with you, and be there to protect you, if you should need me."

"I thank you greatly. But I had rather you went no farther. I shall meet with no difficulty, I think. I shall reach Nurse Day's by sunset."

"As you will. I will not press the matter. Your pleasure shall be mine."

A little later he assisted her from the carriage that had taken her to the depot. Her baggage was checked—he handed her the check, and her ticket, and then pressed into her hand a roll of bank-notes. She put them back quietly, but he declined taking them.

"I do not give it to you—I lend it to you. You can repay me at your convenience."

"On those conditions, I thank you, also."

She put out her hand. He took it, resisted the inclination to press his lips to it, and held it lightly in his.

"If you will give me permission—to call upon you—should I be in Lightfield during your stay there—I shall be more than happy!"

She was about to refuse, but the mute pleading of his eyes deterred her. He had been kind to her, and it could do her no harm. Probably, he would never come to Lightfield, so she gave him the permission he asked for.

The day passed without incident, and nightfall found Margie within ten miles of her destination. She was driven along a rough country road, to a square farm-house—looming up white through the dark—and a moment later, she was lying, pale and exhausted, in the arms of Nurse Day.

"My blessed child!" cried the old lady; "my precious little Margie! My old eyes will almost grow young again, after having been cheered by the sight of ye!" And she kissed Margie again and again, while Leo expressed his delight in true canine style—by barking vociferously, and leaping over the chairs and tables.

CHAPTER XVIII.

URSE DAY was pleasantly situated. Her husband was a grave, staid man, who was very kind to Margie, always. The farm was a rambling affair—extending over, and embracing in its ample limits, hill and dale, meadow and woodland, and a portion of a bright, swift river, on whose banks it was Margie's delight to sit through the purple sunsets, and watch the play of light and shade on the bare, rocky cliff opposite.

Nature proved a true friend to the sore heart of the girl. The breezes, so fresh and sweet, and clear, soothed Margie inexpressibly. The sunshine was a message of healing; the songs of the birds carried her back to her happy childhood. Wandering through the leafy aisles of the forest, she seemed brought nearer to God and his mercy. Only once had Nurse Day questioned her of the past, and then Margie had said:

"I have done with the past forever, Nurse Day. I wish it never recalled to me. I have met with a great sorrow—one of which I cannot speak. I came here to forget it. Never ask me anything about it. I would confide it to you, if I could, but my word is given to another to keep silent. I acted for what I thought best. Heaven knows if I erred, I did not err willingly."

"Give it all into God's hands," said Nurse Day, reverently. "He knows just what is best for us."

The days went on slowly, but they brought something of peace to Margie Harrison. The violence of her distress passed away, and now there was only a dull pain at her heart—a pain that must always have its abode there.

She held no communication with any person in New York, save her aunt, and her business agent, Mr. Farley, and her letters to them were posted in a distant town, in a neighboring state, where Nurse Day had friends—and so Margie's place of refuge was still a secret.

JAMESON FOUND GUILTY.

He Led a Military Expedition Against a Friendly State.

LONDON, July 29.—In the high court of justice Dr. Jameson, Major Sir John Willoughby, Colonel Grey, Colonel White, Major White and Captain Coventry, charged with the violation of the neutrality laws in invading the territory of the South African republic, were found guilty. Lord Chief Justice Russell in summing up the case pointed out that there was no doubt in regard to the prisoners having taken part in the proceeding where the invading forces were mustered. It was entirely unimportant whether the foreign enlistment act was proclaimed at the places named. There was no doubt the expedition was of a military character, and whether aimed at the overthrow of the Transvaal government or for a change of laws in the republic in the interest of others it was equally a military expedition against a friendly state. Dr. Jameson was sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment without labor, Major Willoughby to ten months, Major White to seven months and the others five months.

PRISONERS SHOT DOWN.

Convicts Mutiny, But Three of Them Killed Ends It.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., July 30.—A gang of forty convicts from the United States penitentiary were being worked on the prison farm, on the Fort Leavenworth reservation, when they became mutinous and made a break for liberty. The guards started shooting as soon as the prisoners ran, and nearly all the convicts dropped on the ground to avoid being killed. George Yeast, the leader of the outbreak, refused to surrender and tried to get in some brush. Six loads of buckshot were emptied into him and he received death wounds. Yeast is an Indian territory desperado. F. S. Dove refused to stop running until he was shot in the hip and abdomen and was knocked down with the butt end of a pistol. His wounds may prove fatal. Sam Mills gained the Missouri river bank, and was about to jump in when he was shot in the left leg and badly wounded.

SON MURDERED HIS MOTHER.

Frightful Crime of a Worthless Son of a Prominent Family.

LA PORTE, Ind., Aug. 2—Mrs. H. Webster, the wife of a prominent county official, was fatally shot by John Webster, her eldest son. The awful deed was committed because Mrs. Webster refused to give her son money that he demanded. The father of the boy interfered and was knocked senseless for his pains. The murderer escaped and is now supposed to be in Cincinnati. The crime caused a profound sensation in the city.

RUNS OFF WITH HIS AUNT.

A Missouri Farmer's Home Broken Up by a Treacherous Nephew.

CLINTON, Mo., July 31.—Several months ago Jim Carey came from Iowa and made his home with his uncle, W. E. Carr, near Clinton. During the latter's absence Mrs. Carr eloped with her husband's nephew, taking the baby along. A warrant has been issued, but it is thought they fled to Iowa.

NINETEEN MUST DIE.

Band of Murderers in the Old Country Condemned to Death.

VIENNA, Aug. 1—The trial at Agram of the Stenjeve band, numbering thirty-six, charged with eighteen murders and numerous assaults and robberies, resulted in the condemnation of nineteen, including two women, to death, and the sentence of nine to imprisonment. Eight were acquitted.

Brown Strike Renewed.

CLEVELAND, August 2.—The strike at the works of the Brown Hoisting and Conveying Machine Company, will be renewed by order of the strikers' executive committee. The men find that the settlement effected by the state board of arbitration does not include recognition of authority of labor union committees or the discharge of non-union men and on these points they will continue the battle. They are in an angry mood and trouble is almost certain to come and the police will now use sterner measures than those recently employed.

A Murderous Striker to Hang.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 31.—S. D. Worden, the railroad striker charged with wrecking the railroad bridge near Sacramento two years ago, thereby causing the death of Engineer Clark and three United States soldiers, must hang. The supreme court handed down a decision in which it affirmed the judgement of the superior court, where Worden was convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to hang.

Fifteen Are Reported Killed.

ATHENS, O., July 31.—It is reported that fifteen people were killed during a storm at Glouchester, a mining town north of here, and nearly everything on one of the principal streets was destroyed.

TURKEY AND GREECE.

The Latter Told That She Must Maintain Neutrality.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 31.—As a result of a cabinet council the Turkish government made a formal complaint to the government of Greece regarding the alleged shipment of arms and ammunition from Greece to the island of Crete for the use of the insurgents and relative to the appearance of armed bands in Macedonia, pointing out the danger therefrom to the peace of Europe and adding that Greece would be held responsible for it. The Turkish government also announced that it had been decided to grant limited concessions to the Cretans and that they would be allowed representation. The powers, it is stated, decided to send a collective note to Greece declaring that the government of the latter country must suppress the matters complained of by the Turkish government and adding that otherwise the sultan of Turkey would be left to restore order in Crete. It is rumored here that the Turkish government intends to dispatch a force of Albanians against the Greek filibusters, a step which will undoubtedly add considerably to the gravity of the situation.

SEWALL WILL STICK.

Democratic Nominee Says He Is In the Race to Stay.

BATH, Me., August 1.—Arthur Sewall, democratic nominee for vice-president, was interviewed as to the story that he intended to resign in favor of Mr. Watson. He said: "Any man who for a moment entertains such an idea is not worthy of an answer. I do not know whether Bryan will retain a place on the populist ticket. He will come to Bath with Mrs. Bryan immediately after the notification, which will take place in New York. They will make their headquarters at my house while in Maine."

VICTORIA'S ABDICATION.

Rumors of Her Retirement in Favor of the Prince of Wales.

LONDON, August 1.—The rumor that Queen Victoria intends to retire in favor of the Prince of Wales is again current in court circles. Much anxiety is felt regarding the condition of the queen's health. She seems to feel greatly the weight of years and is quoted as having remarked on the occasion of the marriage of Princess Maud and Prince Charles of Denmark, "This is my last visit to London."

Protecting the Gold Reserve.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The bankers are making good their promises in the matter of turning in gold to the treasury, and the reserve has been swelled by the addition of $1,145,000 in coin, $400,000 coming from Boston, $250,000 from Chicago and $495,000 from New York. There was drawn out $129,000 in gold coin and $5,400 in gold bars, leaving the reserve at the close of business standing at $105,673,919.

Murdered Wife and Children.

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 1.—W. E. Burt, a member of one of the best families of the city, murdered his wife and children, aged two and four years, and placed the dead bodies in a cistern. The crime was discovered when the foul stench led to an investigation. He left the city after committing the terrible deed, and informed several of the neighbors not to drink the water, as it was polluted by a dead cat.

Bryan Notification August 12.

LINCOLN, July 30.—Upon receipt of intelligence from New York that the hall in Madison Square Garden could be secured for that day, Mr. Bryan announced that he will receive the notification committee of the democratic national convention there August 12.

British Troops Bar the Way.

CARACAS, Venezuela, August 1.—It is reported that the government has received a cable dispatch stating that strong English forces occupy the unfinished trail from Acarabisi to Amacuro, preventing the passage of all Venezuelans.

Morton a Candidate.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 31.—J. Sterling Morton, secretary of agriculture, is here, and it is said is making ready to announce himself as a candidate for the presidency before the coming convention of gold democrats.

Robert Garrett Dead.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 30.—Robert Garrett, ex-president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad company and head of widely known banking house of Robert Garrett & Sons, died at Deer Park, Md.

Cyclone Davis Nominated for Congress.

TEXARKANA, Ark., Aug 3.—"Cyclone" Davis, the people's party leader, has been nominated for congress by the populists of the Fourth Texas district to succeed Hon. D. B. Culbertson.

Must Not Aid the Patriots.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The president has issued a strong declaration warning citizens of the United States against filibustering or otherwise violating the neutrality laws.

It is poor politics to hire a man to keep still.

Marriage and colic are the two things that double us up.

Too many people labor under the impression that it is funny to tell lies.

People who really please themselves seldom do much to make others unhappy.

There are persons who suppose they are funny when they are merely aggravating.

Count Leo Tolstoi thinks that the English and the Zulus are the two most brutal nations on the earth.

Warrensburg, Maine, has a rapid transit which is somewhat unique, in this country at least. A car is run over the street car line once a month merely for the sake of preserving the charter.

The refusal of a Massachusetts court to admit radiographic pictures as evidence, is partly offset by the fact that a justice of the federal supreme court recently admitted, in an unofficial capacity, to an X-ray examination to determine the character of some ailment of the knee. The result was satisfactory, and the venerable Justice Field will probably be benefited by the ensuing treatment.

Who says the Italians are not good citizens of this country? There is one of them in New York who was presented by his wife on Sunday last with triplets, a boy and two girls, and he promptly started out for the neighboring Catholic church and had them christened Grover, Ruth and Esther. While these names may not fit very well with the family appellation of Moreno, yet the underlying principle is a good one.

A girl of fifteen in Holland is busily studying international law, constitutional government, the relations of a sovereign toward the states of his realm, and like matters of grave moment. She is in name a queen, but her mother is queen regent of Holland during the minority of her daughter. Already loved, the young girl is fitting herself to be known, as is Victoria, as the Good Queen. Royalty planning for service and usefulness cannot fail to be respected, even by the most ardent lover of democratic institutions.

The governing body of an important ecclesiastical organization—the United Norwegian Lutheran Church of America—has spoken emphatically in favor of the gradual introduction of the English language in all its religious services. Necessity was frankly put forth as the reason for this movement. "To continue in prosperity, the church must maintain its hold upon the young. To do this, it must conduct its services in the language of the young Americans of Scandinavian descent." In yielding thus gracefully to an imperative demand of the times, this body has displayed devotion to its religious principles and an intelligent spirit of patriotism.

A notorious swindler was recently released from a Maryland prison, to which he had been sentenced for eight years for the form of swindling known in police parlance as 'bunco.' Thereupon the class of newspapers that strive to be sensational said that he would proceed to enjoy the $100,000 he had laid by, having made that amount of money in his swindling career. Not even the reporters believe that he has saved a cent of his meager, ill-gotten gain. If the swindler had not obtained a few dollars by extra work during his imprisonment probably he would have come out of prison penniless. When a newspaper gives currency to a fiction of this character it encourages crime. The average criminal who lives by his wits gets the poorest living in the world, and has no surplus for saving.

A significant example of the change of opinion that may be produced even in anarchists by a change of position has occurred in Australia. The workmen in a mine demanded an equal division of its profits. The owners resisted the demand. Not long after, the mine being apparently exhausted, the owners abandoned the claim. It was taken by the disaffected workmen, who opened it up with sudden and great success. The profits were divided equally among them, and they invited public attention to the justice and liberality of their action. Soon, however, they were obliged to hire laborers, who in their turn demanded an equal share with the present owners in the profits of the mine. The demand was vigorously resisted and they were driven off by bayonets, the sometime communists calling in the military to defend their rights. "Put yourself in his place" is a maxim that can be righteously considered so as to justly influence both the capitalist and the laborer.

SIX KILLED IN A WRECK.

Awful Disaster on the Rock Island at Leighton.

OSKALOOSA, Aug. 8.—A fatal wreck occurred on the Rock Island railroad at Leighton, ten miles west of here. Six men were killed, 200 sheep and hogs slaughtered and five cars completely demolished. The track was tore up for a distance of 200 feet. There were eight men who boarded the train at Des Moines. Two of them are colored and these two escaped uninjured. They withhold their names and say they positively do not know the dead men. Five of the men were killed instantly, the sixth surviving in an unconscious state for about three hours. The dead men were Thomas Leyton, Edward Garey, Robert Garey, William Kremer, William Shea and an unknown man. They were stealing a ride to Chicago. The train was made up of four cars of live stock, nine of dressed beef and one of furniture. Nine cars were ditched, the engine, five cars and the caboose remaining on the track. The train was running at the rate of fifty miles an hour and the shock was terrific. The wheel that caused the trouble was thrown over 200 feet from where it came off. Though the axle had been in bad shape for a long time, it had escaped the inspector's notice, as it had worn smooth and did not show up.

FATAL FRATERNAL JEALOUSY.

Awful Tragedy at Monroe Between Brothers.

MONROE, August 9.—Virgil Woody, a young man living five miles east of town, waylaid his brother Charley in the barn, and when the latter arrived home between 11 and 12 o'clock at night he shot him, the ball taking effect in his hand. Charley then ran for the corn field, his brother giving chase and firing three more shots at him, none taking effect. He then placed the revolver to his head and sent a shot through his brain. He died a few hours later without regaining consciousness. There was ill-feeling between the brothers over a girl in Monroe. The girl had given Virgil the cold shoulder, and had been out riding with the successful brother, which led to the above result.

A ROCK ISLAND WRECK.

An Extra Freight Went Into the Ditch Between Grinnell and Malcom.

GRINNELL, Aug. 8.—An extra freight train, east bound, broke in two in the dip between Grinnell and Malcom, on the Rock Island, and twelve cars were piled up in the ditch. The accident was caused by the detached rear section running into the head end with a force that sent the cars tumbling around over the right of way in the most promiscuous fashion. The only casuality was that which happened to Brakeman Willy, who emerged from the mix-up with a sprained ankle and a ruffled temper. The wreck blocked the main line during the night.

HE BROKE CAIN'S HEAD.

A Cedar Rapids Old Soldier Starts Out Looking for Trouble.

CEDAR RAPIDS, August 8.—While drunk, an old soldier named Goldsmith started out to make trouble. He met John Cain, a druggist at Palo, and offered to shake hands. They had had difficulty lately and Cain refused him his hand, whereupon he struck Cain over the head with a club, fracturing his skull and inflicting a dangerous wound. Goldsmith assaulted another man, who resisted, threw Goldsmith down and broke two of his ribs.

Fatal Runaway.

IOWA CITY, August 9.—A horse belonging to Mercer Bros. ran away, throwing the occupants, Willie Mercer and George Dougherty, lads of 13, from the carriage. Mercer escaped with a broken leg, but Dougherty received injuries from which he died.

Scott Taken to the Asylum.

WATERLOO, August 6.—Judge Tolerton filed the order of the court suspending the petition of habeas corpus in the Scott case and remanding the prisoner to the insane asylum. Scott, accompanied by Sheriff Law and Mrs. Scott, was taken to Independence.

$25,000 For a Woman's Homes.

CEDAR RAPIDS, August 9.—Abraham Stimmer, the wealthy Jewish banker of Waverly, has donated $25,000 to the Home for Aged Women in this city, provided a like sum is donated by citizens of Cedar Rapids.

Heavy Failure at Anamosa.

ANAMOSA, August 9.—Osborn Bros., liverymen and stock dealers, have failed for $31,000. An attachment has been issued against them and their father, David Osborn, in favor of L. Schoonover.

DES MOINES, August 9.—The plant of the Iowa Pipe and Tile Company was damaged to the extent of about $30,000 by fire, the origin of which is unknown.

SOLD A 5,800-ACRE FARM.

DES MOINES, August 7.—Hiram C. Wheeler, of Sac county, has just closed the deal for the sale of his big farm, and was in Des Moines on business connected with it. The sale of this farm is a notable one. Mr. Wheeler says it was the largest general purpose farm in the world. It included 5,800 acres, or about nine square miles; and Mr. Wheeler says that while there are ranches in the west, or exclusive wheat farms in the Dakotas, that contain larger areas, there is no farm operated for general purposes that contains so many acres as his big establishment. Mr. Wheeler bought the land twenty-five years ago for $3.50 an acre. He sells it to W. P. Adams, of Chicago, for $40 an acre, with the reservation that he shall not give possession till March, 1898. In the twenty-five years he has owned it, he has made it pay a good interest every year on the original investment, so that the difference between the original cost of $20,300 and the selling price of $232,000 is all profit. In the twenty-five years that he managed it, there was never a year of crop failure. In 1894 the nearest to a failure was experienced, and in that year oats yielded about forty and corn fifteen bushels to the acre. Mr. Wheeler has been a successful farmer on a large scale. He has not decided what he will do after he gives possession of the place. He still has about 200 acres of land in Sac county and about 1,000 acres in various parts of Iowa.

BOY FATALY SHOT.

BRISTOW, Aug. 10.—Hollis Cass, 19-year-old son of H. H. Cass, two and a half miles east of town, was cleaning his 22-calibre magazine rifle, and while leaning over the end of the barrel worked the lever that throws the shell into the barrel, and in some manner pulled it off. The ball struck him in the left side, passed through him and came out at the back. It is doubtfull if he can recover.

Shooting Scrape at Dubuque.

DUBUQUE, Aug. 10.—In an altercation at the race track, Harry Sayre shot a jockey named Hugh Penny. The latter is seriously wounded but it is thought he will recover. Sayre is from Middleport, Ohio, with several horses.

Two Atlantic Boys Drowned.

ATLANTIC, August 9.—Willie Auxier and Joe Enright, aged about ten years, were drowned while bathing in Troublesome creek. Enright tried to save the life of his comrade.

BREVITIES.

The democrats of the Third congressional district nominated George Staehle of Manchester for congress. He will contest with Col. Henderson.

Fire which started in McIntyre Bros. & Wilson's big dry goods store at Oskaloosa recently, caused a very heavy loss. The flames were quenched, but not until a loss of $40,000 to $50,000 had been entailed. Insured for $51,000.

Thomas O'Dea, a well-known attorney of Sioux City, has recently been arrested on a charge of embezzlement, preferred by R. M. Jones. The latter was recently arrested on a charge of larceny, and secured O'Dea as his lawyer. He says O'Dea appropriated money sent by his friends in his care to be used in securing his release from jail. O'Dea is out on bond.

Wallace's Farmer, Henry Wallaces weekly agricultural paper published at Des Moines, announces that it will next week begin a thorough discussion of the silver question from the standpoint of the farmer. No western man is more thoroughly competent to handle this question than Henry Wallace, and as he will discuss it in a fair and non-partisan manner, his articles will be widely read by men of all parties and shades of opinion. He announces that he will send Wallace's Farmer to Jan. 1, 1897, for 40 cents.

Washington dispatch: A serious cutting affray took place near Noble, a village twelve miles south of Washington. Joseph Schantz, an old German, and his son, Jacob, got into a quarrel during the day, and it ended in a serious fight in which the father gave the son five gashes in the neck, one cut almost severing the windpipe. The young man is a victim of alcoholism, and he has spent a year in the insane asylum at Mount Pleasant. He is peaceable when he is sober, but when drunk he is a terror. The old man acted in self defense, as he had the knife out for the purpose of opening the door of a milk house in which Jake had locked himself. Just as he opened the door Jacob rushed at his father with a hammer like a tiger. The old man slashed right and left and the boy got in the way of the knife. The doctors doubt the son's recovery.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

LION KILLED A CHILD.

A Circus Advertisement Proves Fatal to a Baby.

CHILLICOTHE, Aug. 7.—A panic of no small proportions was created at the fair grounds where a section of the Hagenbeck animal show was performing. Among the animals of the show is a large lion, which has been chained near the entrance of the tent as an advertisement. It is a young beast and the proprietor of the exhibit prided himself on its docility and peaceableness. Eddie Hurd, the 18-months-old son of the proprietor was, playing near the animal and came within its reach. The mother called the child away but too late. The ferocious animal seized the infant by the head and shook it as a terrior would a rat. The mother, reckless of danger, rushed to the rescue of her babe, and might have been torn to pieces but for the quick presence of mind of the father, scaring the brute with a whip. The lion let the child go but it was a corpse, its head being crushed out of semblance to anything human. The affair caused a panic in the crowded grounds and soon emptied them.

HUNGARIAN HURRICANES.

Destroy Whole Villages and Kill Many People.

BUDA PEST, August 7.—Terrible hurricanes, accompanied by destructive hail storms, are reported from various parts of Hungary. Many persons are known to have perished in the floods from the mountains, and it is feared that later reports will show much greater loss of life. The damage to property all through the country districts was very heavy. In the towns of Graz, Terentschinteplitz and Keczkemet there has been a tremendous amount of damage done to property by the wind and floods. In the latter town, which numbers about 50,000 inhabitants and is about fifty miles southeast of Buda Pest, it is reported that almost every house has been damaged and the loss is estimated at millions of florins.

NEW PACING RECORD.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 7.—Robert J. has again demonstrated that he is the greatest pacer ever harnessed to a sulky. The free-for-all pace proved to be the greatest race of the year, the fastest four consecutive heats and the fastest fourth heat ever trotted or paced on any track being made. In the first heat, paced in 2:03¾, Robert J. again lowered his record half a second, and broke the track record. The second and third heats in 2:04½ were considered phenomenal, but the crowd was not prepared for the great surprise when the fastest fourth heat ever paced or trotted was made, the time being 2:02¾.

TOWN DESTROYED.

Twenty Lives are Lost and $1,000,000 Damage Done by Nicaragua Floods.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—A special from El Rama, Nicaragua, says that the heavy rains caused the rivers Rama and Siqua, in that neighborhood, to rise rapidly. The panic-stricken inhabitants took refuge on high ground and on board the steamers in the river Rama. Only fifteen buildings were left standing in El Ramo. The plantations near the town are all destroyed and the loss is estimated at more than $1,000,000. Many of the refugees have found shelter in Bluefields. Twenty lives were lost.

BALD VS. COOPER.

New World's Record for Paced Single Mile, by Bald.

BUFFALO, August 8.—Eddie Bald and Tom Cooper fought it out in the mile open at the Buffalo Athletic Club track, and Bald not only won in 2:01 4-5, but in doing so clipped five and one-fifth seconds off the world's record for the single mile paced, in competition.

John R. Gentry a Wonder.

COLUMBUS, O., August 9.—John R. Gentry went a mile at the Columbus Driving Park in an effort to break the world's stallion pacing record. He went in 2:03¼, lowering the record a quarter of a second.

Ocean Record Broken.

NEW YORK, August 9.—The American line steamer St. Louis, has made a new record from Southampton, beating the time of her sister ship, the St. Paul, by more than two hours.

Pingree Nominated.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., August 7.—The republican state convention nominated Detroit's famous mayor, Hazen S. Pingree, for governor, on the fourth ballot.

Live Bird Championship.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—In the Dupont live bird tournament Bert Clarage, of Baltimore, won the championship. Gilbert, of Iowa, fell down.

CARNAGE WAS AWFUL.

British Troops Defeated the Matebele Forces in a Bloody Engagement.

CAPETOWN, Aug. 8.—Details are received here of a decisive victory won by 700 British troops, composing Col. Plummer's column, over a native force estimated at from 5,000 to 7,000. The latter fought most desperately, bravely charging up within a few yards of the British rapid firing guns. About 500 Matebele warriors were slain during the engagement, which lasted several hours, and the loss of the British included Major Kershaw, Lieutenant Harvey and four sargeants. About thirty soldiers were killed and six officers and about fifty men are wounded, according to unofficial figures.

DEAD ENGINEER RESPONSIBLE.

Had Farr Obeyed the Atlantic Wreck Would Not Have Occurred.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., August 8.—The coroner's jury investigating the wrecking of an excursion train near here recently, in which many lives were lost, returned a verdict finding that the collision was caused by the failure of Engineer Edward Farr to have his train under control on approaching the signal and crossing under the rules.

National Democrats.

INDIANAPOLIS, August 9.—The "sound money" democrats decided to call a convention to be held at Indianapolis on the 2d of September and that the party should be known as the national democratic party. An address is being prepared.

Trinidad Trouble.

LISBON, Aug. 5.—It is again stated that Great Britian has recognized the sovereignity of Brazil over the island of Trinidad. Similar statements were made in February last, and have been repeated at intervals.

TERSE NEWS.

Nebraska populists re-nominated Governor Holcomb by acclamation, and named John C. Harris for lieutenant governor. Resolutions were finally passed giving the central committee authority to name an electoral ticket in conjunction with the democrats.

A Guthrie, Okla., dispatch says: Bill Doolin, the outlaw, who escaped from the United States jail in Guthrie four weeks ago, was surrounded by deputy marshals at Wewoka. A desperate fight took place. During the fusilade of shots Doolin escaped. Deputies T. M. Gregor and Horace Reynolds were killed.

It is said that extreme satisfaction is felt among the Christians in Crete at the news that the governor of Candia, whose report of the recent pillaging and burning was not deemed satisfactory, has been replaced by Hazen Pasha, who formerly established such satisfactory condition in the same district.

The various European courts have received letters from members of the royal family of Greece saying that King George will probably abdicate in favor of Crown Prince Constantine, Duke of Sparta, if the powers compel Greece to desist from her aspirations to make the island of Crete a part of the Grecian domains.

Cape Town dispatch: Cecil Rhodes displayed great courage in the field while the bullets were raining around him, the war correspondent returned from Matabeleland reports. The former premier says he could not see that anything was to be gained by his going into a hot corner, but if he did not do so he would be taunted with cowardice. Therefore he exposed himself unnecessarily to stop the mouths of his enemies. The Matabele rebels are surrendering, the correspondent declares.

Havana dispatch: Antonio Pena Lopez and Narciso Rodriguez Lopez, respectively a lieutenant and a private in the insurgent army, were shot at the Cabanas fortress for the crime of rebellion against the Spanish government, and Nunez Bravo, the rebel prefect of Santiago-de-Cuba, was executed at Santo Domingo for the same crime. Yellow fever and smallpox are increasing throughout the island and in certain localities have become epidemic. The authorities are adopting measures to prevent the spread of the disease and to diminish the high death rate.

The Chicago Daily Tribune says: "The speculative deal in Diamond Match and New York Biscuit stocks has come to an end. The Moore Brothers have failed. The greatest speculative deal ever known in Chicago has culminated in the failure of the people who are behind the deal." The Chicago Stock Exchange has adjourned. The stock of the match company had been carried from 130 to 220, and the stock of the biscuit company was ranging high, but the load became too heavy for the men who were backing them and an assignment was made. The capital stock of the match company was $11,000,000 and the biscuit company $9,000,000.

THE FATAL GLOVE.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

CHAPTER XVIII.—(CONTINUED.)

It was August now, and the weather at its hottest. Margie spent a large portion of her time out of doors, with only Leo for a companion. She sat, one lovely afternoon, on the banks of the river, dividing her time between the charming panorama of sunshine and shadow before her, and a book of poems in her lap, when there was a step at her side. She looked up, and saw the face of Louis Castrani.

"Miss Harrison, you will, I trust, excuse me for seeking you here. But my wish to see you was so strong, that, on my way to the White Mountains, I left my party and turned aside here, to gratify the desire. You know you gave me permission?"

"I did; but I hardly thought you would take advantage of it."

"Perhaps I ought not to have done so. Indeed, I tried hard not to. Are you very angry?"

"No, I am not angry at all. I am glad to see you." She held out her hand. "So is Leo, too—only see him caper."

The dog was leaping upon Mr. Castrani, with the liveliest demonstrations of joy. He patted the silky head.

"It is something to be welcomed by a brute, Miss Harrison; their instincts are seldom at fault, I believe. Have you been well, Miss Harrison?"

"Very well, thank you. And you? But I need not ask. Your looks answer for you. When did you leave New York?"

"I have been in New York only a fortnight since I last saw you. Business has kept me elsewhere. I came from New York three days ago. What a beautiful spot you have hidden yourself in!"

"I am pleased to hear you say so. Isn't it lovely? But you must tell me about home. How are all my friends?"

"They are all well. How mellowly the sunshine falls on the rough crags opposite, and what a picture for a painter to transfer to canvas!"

"Yes, I have wished I were an artist, over and over again. But I have no talent in that direction. My friends are all well, you say? What of Miss Lee? Did you see her?"

"Yes, she is well. What are you reading?" lifting the book from the ground where it had fallen.

Margie turned suddenly upon him and regarded him searchingly.

"Why do you evade answering my questions, Mr. Castrani? It is natural that I should want to hear something of the home from which I have been so long away, is it not? Why do you refuse to satisfy my reasonable curiosity on that subject?"

Castrani's handsome face clouded—He looked at her with tender pity in his eyes.

"Miss Harrison, why will you press me further? Your friends are all well."

"I know, but there is something behind that. Tell it to me at once."

"I cannot—indeed, I cannot. You must hear it from other lips. I would rather die than cause you one single pang of sorrow."

"You are very kind, Mr. Castrani—you mean generously—but I want to know." Some subtle instinct seemed to tell her what she was to hear—for she added, "Is it of Miss Lee?"

"I told you Miss Lee was well."

"Mr. Castrani, I have given you more of my confidence that I have ever bestowed on any other person, because I respect you above all men, and because I have perfect confidence in your honor. Has this matter, of which you hesitate to tell me, anything to do with—with Archer Trevlyn?"

Her voice sank to a whisper, before the sentence was finished, for she had never spoken his name since that fearful night on which his guilt had been revealed to her.

"I will reply to your question by asking another: and, if it seems impertinent, remember that it is not so intended, and that I do not ask it from any vulgar feeling of curiosity."

"You can ask nothing impertinent, Mr. Castrani," she replied, earnestly.

"Thank you. I do not intend to. Are you betrothed to Archer Trevlyn?"

She grew very pale, but her eyes met his fearlessly.

"I was once, but it is all over now," with a dreary sigh, that was like the breath of the autumn wind through the dead leaves.

"Before you left New York—was it over before that?"

"Yes, before I left New York. It was why I left there. I cannot tell you how it was—I can never tell any human being. But a terrible necessity arose which forced us apart."

"Did he—did Arch Trevlyn desert you, Miss Harrison?" asked Castrani, his brow contracting, his dark eyes glowing with indignation.

"No; it was my hand that severed the engagement; do not blame him for that. It was impossible that it should be fulfilled."

"You, Miss Harrison? You broke the engagement?" he asked, eagerly.

Perhaps she read something in the beautiful hope that sprung up in his heart from the glad light in his eye, and she crushed it at once.

"Yes, I. But not because I had ceased to love him. O, no. He was—is—and will be always—the one love of my life-time. I shall never love another. Now, I have trusted you. Be frank and free with me."

"Well—since you ask it, Mr. Trevlyn and Miss Lee are to be married in September."

"To Miss Lee—married to Miss Lee? Great Heaven! And she is aware of his—What am I saying? What did I say? O, Mr. Castrani, excuse me—I am so—surprised—" She groped blindly for something to cling to, fell forward, and he received her senseless form in his arms.

He held her silently a moment, his face wearing a look of unutterable love and sadness; then he put her down on the grass, and brought water in a large leaf from the stream. He bathed her forehead, tenderly as a mother might, murmuring over her words of gentleness and affection.

"My poor Margie! My poor little darling!"

He pressed the little icy hands in his, but he did not kiss the lips he would have given half his life to have felt upon his. He was too honorable to take advantage of her helplessness. She revived after a while, and met his eyes as he knelt beside her.

"Are you better?" he asked, gently.

"Yes, it is over now. I am sorry to have troubled you. I must depend on you to go to the house with me. Nurse Day will be glad to welcome you. And I must ask you not to alarm her by alluding to my sudden illness. I am quite well now."

He gave her his arm, and they went up to the house together, followed by Leo.

CHAPTER XIX.

ARCHER TREVLYN and Alexandrine Lee were married in September. It was a very quiet wedding, the bridegroom preferring that there should be no parade or show on the occasion. Alexandrine and her mother both desired that it should take place in the fashionable church where they worshiped, but they yielded to the wishes of Mr. Trevlyn. He deserved some deference, Mrs. Lee declared, for having behaved so handsomely. His presents to his bride were superb. A set of diamonds, that were a little fortune in themselves, and a settlement of three thousand a year—pin money. The brown stone house was furnished, and there was no more elegant establishment in the city.

Trevlyn House, the fine old residence of the late John Trevlyn, was closed. Only the old butler and his wife remained in the back wing, to air the rooms occasionally, and keep the moths out of the upholstery. For some reason, unexplained to himself, Archer never took his wife there. Perhaps the quiet rooms too forcibly reminded him of the woman he had loved and lost.

Alexandrine's ambition was satisfied. At last she was the wife of a man whose love and admiration she had coveted since her first acquaintance with him. From her heart she believed him guilty of the murder of Paul Linmere; but in spite of it, she had married him. She loved him intensely enough to pardon even that heinous crime.

Her husband's admiration Alexandrine possessed, but she soon came to realize that he had told her the truth, when he said his heart was buried too deep to know resurrection. He was kind to her—very gentle, and kind, and generous—for it was not in Archer Trevlyn's nature to be unkind to anything—and he felt that he owed her all respect and attention, in return for her love. Her every wish was gratified. Horses, carriages, servants, dress, waited her command, but not what she craved for more than all—his love.

He never kissed her, never took her hands in his, or held her to him when he said good-by, as he frequently did, for several days' absence on matters of business. He never called her Alexandrine—it was always Mrs. Trevlyn; and through the long winter evenings, when they were not at some ball or party, and sat by their splendid fireside, he never put his head in her lap and let her soft fingers caress his hair, as she had seen other husbands do.

In September Louis Castrani again appeared in New York society. His appearance revived the old story of his devotion to Margaret Harrison, and people began to wonder why she had staid away from home so long.

As soon as he heard of Castrani's arrival Archer Trevlyn sought him out. He thought he had a right to know if his suspicions touching Margie were correct.

Castrani received him coldly but courteously. Trevlyn was not to be repelled, but went to the point at once.

"Mr. Castrani," he said, "I believe I have to deal with a man of honor, and I trust that you will do me the favor of answering the questions I may ask, frankly."

"I shall be happy to answer any inquiries which Mr. Trevlyn may propound, provided they are not impertinent," replied Castrani haughtily.

Trevlyn hesitated. He dreaded to have his suspicions confirmed, and he feared that if this man spoke the truth such would be the case.

"I am listening, Mr. Trevlyn," said Castrani..

"Excuse me. In order to make you understand my position. I must beg you to indulge me in a little retrospection. You are doubtless aware that at one time I was engaged to Miss Margaret Harrison?"

"Such was the rumor, sir."

"It was correct. I loved her deeply, fondly, with my whole soul—just as I love her still—in spite of it all."

"Mr. Trevlyn," said Castrani, with cold reproof in his voice, "you have a wife."

"I am aware of it, but the fact does not change my feelings. I have tried to kill all regard for Margaret Harrison, but it is impossible. I can control it, but I cannot make it die. My wife knows it all—I told her freely—and knowing it, she was willing to bear my name. For some reason, unknown to me, unexplained by Margaret, she cast me off. I had seen her only the day before the fatal note reached me—had held her in my arms and felt her kiss upon my lips." He stopped, controlling his emotion, and went on resolutely. "The next day I received a letter from her, a brief, cold, almost scornful letter. She renounced me utterly—she would never meet me again but as a stranger. She need make no explanation, she said. My own conscience would tell me why she could no longer be anything to me. As if I had committed some crime. I should have sought her, from one end of the earth to the other, and won from her an explanation of her rejection, had it not been for the force of circumstances, which revealed to me that she left for the North, in the early express—with you—or equivalent to that. She entered the train at the same time, and you were both in the same car. This fact, coupled with your well-known devotion to her, and her renunciation of me, satisfied me that she had fled from me, to the arms of—another lover."

"Villain!" cried Castrani, starting from his chair, his face scarlet with indignation. "If it were not a disgrace to use violence upon a guest, I would thrash you soundly! You loved Margaret Harrison, and yet believed that damnable falsehood of her! Out upon such love! She is, and was, as pure as the angels! Yes, you say truly, I was devoted to her. I would have given my life, yea, my soul's salvation, for her love! But she never cared for me. I never enticed her to do evil—I would not, if I could, and I could not, if I would! Who repeated this vile slander? Show him to me, and by heaven, his blood shall wipe out the stain!"

All Trevlyn's pride and passion left him. His face lost its rigid tenseness, his eyes grew moist. He forgave Castrani's insults, he told him Margaret was pure. He put out his hands and grasped those of his companion.

"O, sir," he said, "I thank you—I thank you! You have made me as happy as it is now possible for me to become. It is like going back to heaven after a long absence, to know that she was pure—that I was not deceived in her. O, Margie! Margie! my wronged Margie! God forgive me for indulging such a thought of you."

Castrani's hard face softened a little, as he witnessed the utter abandonment of the proud man before him.

"You may well ask God to forgive you," he said. "You deserve the depths of perdition for harboring in your heart a thought against the purity of that woman. Archer Trevlyn, had she loved me as she did you, I would have cut off my right hand before I would have entertained a suspicion of sin in her! It is true she went North on the same train as I did, but I did not know it until the journey was ended. Previous to that time I had not seen her for more than a fortnight, and I did not know she was near me, until in Boston my attention was attracted by a crowd of 'roughs' gathered around a lady and a greyhound. The lady had lost her portmonnaie, and the crowd made some insulting remarks which I took the liberty of resenting, and when I saw the lady's face, to my amazement I recognized Margaret Harrison!"

THE LATEST WONDER.

Photographing Thought Is Said to Be An Accomplished Fact.

It may be rash to announce that anything is beyond the photographer's art, writes the Paris correspondent of the London Standard, but the communication just made to the Paris Academie de Medicine by Dr. Baraduc is so astonishing that if he had made it before Dr. Roentgen had rendered his discovery public, very few people would have been inclined even to inquire into the matter. Indeed, Dr. Baraduc affirms that he has succeeded in photographing thought and he has shown numerous photographs in proof of his assertion.

His usual method of proceeding is simple enough. The person whose thought is to be photographed enters a dark room, places his hand on a photographic plate and thinks intently of the object the image of which he wishes to see produced. It is stated by those who have examined Dr. Baraduc's photographs that most of them are very cloudy, but that a few are comparatively distinct, representing the features of persons and the outlines of things. Dr. Baraduc goes further and declares that it is possible to produce a photographic image at a great distance.

In his communication to the Academie de Medicine he relates that Dr. Istrate, when he was going to Campana, declared he would appear on a photographic plate of his friend, M. Hasden, at Bucharest. On the 4th of August, 1893, M. Hasden, at Bucharest, went to bed with a photographic plate at his feet and another at his head. Dr. Istrate went to sleep at Campana, at a distance of about 300 kilometers from Bucharest, but before closing his eyes he willed with all his might that his image should appear on the photographic plate of his friend. According to Dr. Baraduc that marvel was accomplished. Journalists who have examined the photograph in question state that it consists of a kind of luminous spot on the photographic plate, in the midst of which can be traced the profile of a man.

SEVEN-PEAR-OLD HEROINE.

Little Jennie Sheets Saves a Comrade's Life.

A wonderful exhibition of nerve and coolness in the face of deadly peril was shown Saturday by little Jennie Sheets, aged seven. The cheers of 300 passengers on the Kansas City limited attested their admiration of her bravery.

Passenger train No. 3 had just left Cabool, Mo. It being the Fourth, the railway company had sent out an unusually heavy train of eight passenger coaches, two express cars and two sleepers. A small trestle terminates a sharp curve a few miles east of Cabool. The train was making forty miles an hour when the curve was reached. As the train approached the trestle Engineer Jack McIeven saw two women and two little girls on the trestle. To stop in time was impossible.

The women, who were the mothers of the children, jumped to the dry bed of the creek below, but the little ones remained on the trestle.

Shouting to her little companion across the track without response, Jennie Sheets crossed to her, threw her on the extreme edge of the bridge sleeper and held her until the train passed.

Engineer McIeven stopped his train and led back 300 excited men and women to find little Jennie anxiously inquiring if her mother was hurt. They gave three cheers and a tiger as a tribute to Jennie's nerve.—New York World.

You Pay Your Money.

They have a queer telephone system here in Chicago. You go into a booth, find out the number of the person that you want to talk to, and then ring for central and tell her about it. You wait about ten minutes, at the end of which time a voice says: "Drop in your dime." You ask "What?" and the voice repeats, "Drop in your dime." Then you look around, and in front of you you see a lot of little slots. They are marked nickels, dimes, quarters, half-dollars and dollars. You call back, "What is it you want me to do?" and the voice answers immediately, "Are you deaf, or what? I told you to drop in your dime." "Drop it in where?" you ask, and the answer comes, "In the hole. Where do you suppose I want you to drop it?" You drop it in one of the holes, usually whichever one is the handiest, and in an instant you are rewarded with, "There you have put it in the wrong hole, and your money is gone." The voice adds: "Put in another dime and drop it in the hole marked dimes." If you are not already disgusted you may follow the instructions of the voice, in which case you are rewarded with, "There, see how easy it is? Now, wait a minute." You wait several minutes and at last the connection is completed.—Chicago Special.

Too Dear.

"Aren't the old songs dear?" she asked.

"Yes," he said feelingly, "dear at any price."—Detroit Free Press.

RAILROAD IN COREA.

Americans Conceded the Right to Construct One.

ST. PETERSBURG, August 6.—A dispatch to the Novoe Vremya from Vladivostock announces that Corea has conceded to a syndicate of Americans the right to construct a railroad from Seoul, the capital, to Chemulpo, the main port and harbor. The Americans have the right to work the minerals along the line of the road, and other concessions have been granted France and Russia. Seoul, it is stated, is now quiet and the British sailors who landed for the protection of the consulate of Great Britian have been withdrawn, and the American sailors who were sent ashore to protect the United States consulate will be withdrawn in a few days.

SO THEY WERE MARRIED.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and Miss Grace Wilson Are Wedded.

NEW YORK, August 5.—Despite the determined opposition of his family and in defiance of the threat of being disinherited, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., has been married to Miss Grace Wilson. Mr. Vanderbilt, Sr., warned the young man that if he contracted the marriage he would have to depend upon his own resources for a livelihood and he need expect no share of the Vanderbilt fortune. Thus the son, by disobeying his father's wishes, threw away his prospects of inheriting a large lump of the $100,000,000 which Mr. Vanderbilt, Sr., is estimated to be worth. Not a member of the Vanderbilt family was even invited to the vedding.

PEACE FOR CUBA.

Spain Said to Have Opened Negotiations for Cessation.

NEW YORK, August 10.—The Herald's Key West special says: It is openly declared here that Captain General Weyler has reached an understanding with the chief insurgent leaders and negotiations will be begun with a view to the cessation of hostilities in Cuba if the terms are satisfactory to all concerned. It is also stated that the captain general and his deputy commanders have held a conference in relation to this proposition. Much greater importance, however, is attached to the report that a truce is likely to occur soon in the island.

TWO KILLED IN A STRIKE.

Strikers Burn House of Contracter Employing Non-Unionists.

BEREA, Ohio, Aug. 6.—The house of Richard Todd was burned. Two of his seven children were asphyxiated. A window was opened and oil poured on an unoccupied bed and lighted. The residence of J. R. Woodcock was also saturated with oil. Both Dodd and Woodcock are contractors employing non-union men. It is believed that they are victims of the union men.

Hot Winds in Kansas.

WICHITA, Kansas, August 10.—The appearance of hot winds all over southwestern Kansas has dampened the hopes of farmers for a tremendous crop of corn. The winds have been very severe on the late corn and as there is some likelihood of their continuing, prospects for good late corn are discouraging. The heat has been intense, registering 111 degrees at point.

Two Cubans Picked Up.

KEY WEST, Fla., Aug. 8.—The pilot boat Jougett came into port, having on board two Cubans, who were picked up in the gulf in a small dingy, which was in a sinking condition when sighted. The Cubans left Mantanzas with important dispatches for the Cuban junta. They state that Maceo's forces are in good shape but lack ammunition.

Frank for Governor of Maine.

WATERVILLE, Me., August 7.—At the second democratic state convention, called because of the declination of Hon. Edward P. Winslow to stand as candidate for governor and the divided sentiment on the silver question, Melvin P. Frank, of Portland, was nominated for governor on the first ballot. Frank is a free silver man.

Entombed Miners Rescued.

KANKAKEE, Ill., August 10.—In a fire in the Clark City mine, 300 men were in the shaft when the fire broke out, but all but forty escaped easily. Of the forty fifteen were nearly suffocated, but all are recovered. The mine will resume work in four or five days.

To North Pole by Balloon.

BERLIN, August 7.—A dispatch from Tromso says a message has reached there from Professor Andree, saying he is ready to make a start to the north pole in his balloon. Andree says he will either succeed in his undertaking or perish in the attempt.

Prince Hohenlohe Resigns.

BERLIN, August 8.—The statement is published that Imperial Chancellor Prince Hohenlohe has resigned and further changes are impending in the ministry of finance.

A railroad collision occurred on the Burlington railroad just north of Belmond. The gravel train had been side tracked but the switch had not been turned, and when the morning freight came along at a good rate of speed it ran into said train. The engineer and fireman of the freight and two brakeman jumped. The former two were severely hurt and in town receiving medical aid. The engine and several cars were demolished.—C. R. R.

Since 1878 there have been nine epidemics of dysentery in different parts of the country in which Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy was used with perfect success. Dysentery, when epidemic, is almost as severe and dangerous as Asiatic cholera. One of the cyclone stories, which of course comes from Kansas, is to the effect that a large crib filled with ear corn had a knot hole, and when it was struck by the wind the suction was so great that cob after cob was drawn through the knot hole and the farmer was left with a crib of shelled corn.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

Last Tuesday afternoon as the freight was going west, sparks from the engine set fire to John Stewart's oats field and before the fire could be checked about two hundred shocks of oats were burned and the fire spread over to Geo. Hoffman's field and burned about two hundred shocks on his farm also. It was with extreme difficulty that the flames were kept from spreading still farther as the weather was so extremely dry and a strong hot wind was blowing from the south at the time.—Buffalo Center Tribune.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"ANOTHER CHANCE" WAS LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

"Text:" If the Tree Fall Toward the South, Or the North, in the Place Where the Tree Falleth, There It Shall be—Eccl. 11: 3.

HERE is a hovering hope in the minds of a vast multitude of people that there will be an opportunity in the next world of correcting the mistakes of this; that however complete a shipwreck we may make of our earthly life, it will be on a beach up which we may walk to a palace; that as the defendant may lose his case in a Circuit Court and appeal it and have it go up to the Supreme Court or Court of Chancery and all the costs thrown over on the other party, so a man may lose his case in this world, but in the higher jurisdiction of eternity have the decision of the earthly case set aside, all the costs remitted and the defendant be triumphant forever.

The object of my sermon is to show you that common sense declares with the text that such an expectation is chimerical. "If the tree fall toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there shall it be." There are those who say that if the impenitent and unfortunate man enters the next world and sees the disaster, as a result of that disaster he will turn, the distress the cause of his reformation; but we have ten thousand instances all around about us of people who have done wrong and disaster suddenly came upon them—did the disaster heal them? No, they went on. There is a man flung of dissipations. The doctor says to him: "Now, my friend, if you don't stop drinking and don't stop this fast life you are living, you will die." The patient thanks the physician for his warning and gets better; he begins to sit up, begins to walk around the room, begins to go to business and takes the same round of grogshops where he got his morning dram and his evening dram and the drams between. Down again. Same doctor. Same physical anguish. Same medical warning. But now the sickness is more protracted, the liver more obstinate, the stomach more irritable, the digestive organs more rebellious. But still, under medical skill, he gets better, goes forth, commits the same sacrilege against his physical health. Sometimes he wakes up to see what he is doing, and he realizes he is destroying his family and that his life is a perpetual perjury against his marriage vows, and that that broken-hearted woman is so different from the roseate wife he married that her old schoolmates do not recognize her on the street, and that his sons are going out in life under the taunt of a father's drunkenness, and that his daughters are going out in life under the scarification of a disreputable ancestry. His nerves are all a jangle. From crown of head to sole of foot he is one aching rasping, crucifying, damning torture. Where is he? He is in hell on earth. Does it stop him? Ah, no. After awhile delirium tremens pours out upon his pillow a whole jungle of hissing reptiles. His screams horrify the neighbors as he dashes out of bed crying: "Take these things off me!" He is drinking down the comfort of the family, the education of his children, their prospects for this life and perhaps their prospects for the life to come. Pale and convalescent he sits up. Physicians say to him: "Now, my good fellow, I am going to have a plain talk with you. If you ever have an attack of this kind again you will die. I can't save you, and all the doctors in creation can't save you." The patient gets up, starts out, goes the same round of dissipation and is down again; but this time medicines do not touch his case. Consultations of physicians says there is no hope. Death ends the scene. That process of inebriation and physical suffering and medical warning and dissolution is taking place within a stone's throw of where you sit and in every neighborhood of Christendom. Pain does not reform. Suffering does not cure. What is true in regard to one sin is true in regard to all sins, and yet men are expecting in the next life there will be opportunity for purgatorial regeneration. Take up the printed reports of the prisons of the United States and find that the vast majority of the criminals were there before, some for two times, three times, four times, six times. Punished again and again, but they go right on. Millions of incidents and instances working the other way, and yet men think that in the next world punishment will work out for them salvable effects. Why you and I cannot imagine any worse torture from another world than we have seen men in in this world, and without any salutary consequence.

Furthermore, the prospect of reformation in another world is more improbable than here. Do you not realize the fact that a man starts in this world with the innocence of infancy? In the other case, starting in the other world, he starts with the accumulated bad habits of a life time. Is it not to be expected that you could build a better ship out of new timber than out of an old hulk that has been ground up on the breakers? If starting with comparative innocency the man does not become godly, is it possible that starting with sin a seraph can be evoluted? Is there not more prospect that a sculptor will make a finer statue out of a block of pure, white Parian marble than out of a black rock that has been cracked and twisted and split and scarred with the storms of a half century? Could you not write a last will and testament, or write a deed, or write an important document on a pure white sheet of paper easier than you could write it upon a sheet scribbled all over with infamy and blotted and torn from top to bottom? And yet there are those who are so uncommon-sensical as to believe that though a man starts in this world with infancy and its innocence and turns out badly, in the next world he can start with a dead failure and turn out well. "But," say some people, "we ought to have another chance in the next world because our life here is so very brief; we scarcely have room to turn around between the cradle and the grave, the wood of the one almost striking against the marble of the other. We ought to have another chance because of the brevity of this life." My friends, do you know what made the ancient deluge a necessity? It was the longevity of the antediluvians. They were worse in the second century than in the first, and worse when they got three hundred years old, and worse at four hundred, and worse at five hundred, and worse at six hundred, and worse at eight hundred; until the world had to be washed and scoured and scrubbed and soaked and sunk and anchored a whole month under water before it was fit for decent people to live in. I have seen many pictures of old Time with his scythe to cut, but I never saw any picture of Time with a chest of medicines to heal. Seneca said that in the first few years of his public life Nero was set up as an example of clemency and kindness, but he got worse and worse, the path descending, until at sixty-eight years of age he was the suicide. If eight hundred years of lifetime could not cure the antediluvians of their iniquity, I undertake to say that all the ages of eternity would be only prolongation of depravity. "But," says some one, "in the next life the evil surroundings will be withdrawn and good influences will be substituted, and hence, expurgation, sublimity, glorification." But you must remember that the righteous, all their sins forgiven, pass right up into a beatific state, and then having passed up into the beatific state, not needing any other chance, that will leave all those who have never been forgiven, and who were impenitent, alone—alone! and where are the salvable influences to come from? Can it be expected that Dr. Duff, who spent his whole life in pointing the Hindoos to heaven, and Dr. Abeel, who spent his life in evangelizing China, and that Judson, who spent his life in preaching the Gospel to Burmah—can it be expected that they will be sent down from some celestial Missionary Society to educate and to save those who wasted their earthly existence? No. We are told distinctly that all missionary and evangelistic influences will be ended forever and the good having passed up to their beatific state, all the morally bankrupt will be together, and where are the salvable influences to come from? Will a specked or bad apple put in a barrel of diseased apples make the other apples good? Will one who is down be able to lift others up? Will those who have miserably failed in the business of this life be able to pay the debts of other spiritual insolvents? Will a million wrongs make one right? Poneropolis was the city where King Rufus of Thracia, put all bad people of his kingdom, and whenever there were iniquitous people found in any part of the land they were all sent to Poneropolis. It was the great capital of wickedness. Suppose a man or a woman had opened a primary school in Poneropolis, would the parents of other cities have sent their children there to be educated and reformed * * *

Again, I wish you further to notice that another chance in another world means the ruin of this. Now, suppose a wicked man is assured that after a lifetime of wickedness, he can fix it all right up in the future. That would be the demoralization of society, that would be the demolition of the human race. There are men who are now kept on the limits of sin by their fear. The fear that if we are bad and unforgiven here it will not be well with us in the next existence, is the chief influence that keeps civilization from rushing back into semi-barbarism, and keeps semi-barbarism from rushing back into midnight savagery, and keeps midnight savagery from rushing back into ex-limits of sin. But this idea coming into his soul, this idea of another chance, he says, "Go to, now; I'll get out of this world all there is in it." Come gluttony and revenge and uncleanness and all sensualities, and wait upon me. It may abbreviate my earthly life by dissoluteness, but that will only give me heavenly indulgence on a larger scale in a shorter length of time. I will overtake the righteous before long. I will only come in heaven a little late, and I will be a little more fortunate than those who have behaved themselves on earth and went straight to the bosom of God, because I will see more and have wider excursion, and I will come into heaven via Gehenna, via Sheol!" Hearers! Readers! Another chance in the next world means free license and the demolition of this. Suppose you had a case in court, and all the judges and all the attorneys agreed in telling you the first trial of it—it would be tried twice—the first trial would not be of very much importance, but the second trial would decide everything. On which trial would you put the most expenditure? on which trial would you employ the ablest counsel? on which trial would you be most anxious to have the attendance of all the witnesses? "Oh," you would say, "if there are to be two trials, and the first trial does not amount to much, the second trial being everything, everything depending upon that, I must have the most eloquent attorney, and I must have all my witnesses present, and I will expend my money on that." If these men who are impenitent and who are wicked felt there were two trials, and the first was of no very great importance, and the second trial was the one of vast and infinite importance, all the preparations for eternity would be post-mortem, post-funeral, post-sepulchral, and this world would be jerked off into impenitency and godlessness. Another chance in another world means the domilition of this world.

* * *

A dream. I am in the burnished judgment hall on the last day. The great white throne is lifted, but the Judge has not yet taken it. While we are waiting for his arrival I hear the immortals in conversation. "What are you waiting for?" says a soul that went up from Madagascar to a soul that went up from America. The latter responds: "I was in America forty years ago, and I heard the Gospel preached, and I had plenty of Bibles in my house, and from the time that I knelt at my mother's knee in prayer until my last hour, I had great opportunities; but I did not improve them, and I am here to-day waiting for another chance." "Strange, strange," says the soul just come up from Madagascar. "Strange why I never heard the Gospel call but once in all my life, and I accepted it, and I don't want another chance." "What are you waiting for?" says one who on earth had very feeble intellect to one who had great brain and whose voice was silvery, and who had sceptres of power. The latter replies: "I had great power on earth, I must admit, and I mastered languages and I mastered libraries, and colleges conferred upon me learned titles, and my name was a synonym for eloquence and power; but somehow I neglected the matters of my soul, and I must confess to you I am here to-day waiting for another chance." Now, the ground trembles with the advancing chariot. The great folding doors of the burnished hall of judgment are thrown open. "Stand back," cry the ushers, "and let the Judge of quick and dead pass through." He takes the throne. He looks off upon the throngs of nations come to the last judgment, come to the only judgment, and one flash from the throne reveals each man's history to himself, and reveals it to all the others. And then the Judge says, "Divide!" and the burnished walls echo it, "Divide!" and the guides angelic answer, "Divide!" and the immortals are rushing this way and that, until there is an aisle between them, a great aisle; and then a vacuum, widening, and widening and widening, until the Judge looks to one side of that vacuum, and addresses the throng, and says: "Let him that is righteous be righteous still, and let him that is holy be holy still." And then, turning to the throng on the other side of the vacuum, he says: "Let him that is unjust be unjust still, and let him that is filthy be filthy still." And then he stretches out both hands, one toward the throng on each side of the vacuum, and says: "If the tree fall toward the south, or toward the north, in the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be!" And then I hear something jar with a great sound; it is the closing of the Book of Judgment. The Judge ascends the stairs behind the throne. The Hall of the last Assize is cleared and shut. The High Court of Eternity adjourned forever.

The Point of View.

This world is as you see it—that is, you may see what you will. Wear 'green glasses, and it is a green world to you. Wear blue glasses, and the world about you gets the tint. Look with a vision distorted by discontent, and you will find enough to harass your life out of you. Look through an impure eye, and you will vote virtue a myth. Look through a pure, loving eye, and you will find enough to admire and much to inspire.—Rev. A. Z. Conrad, Congregationalist, Worchester, Mass.

SPAIN AND CUBAN CRISIS.

The People Are Beginning to Riot Against War Taxes.

MADRID, August 8.—Trouble of a serious nature is being fomented in Spain, particularly in the province of Valencia, by the agents of the Cuban insurgents. The minister of the interior, replying to a question in the chamber of deputies, admitted that a number of riots had occurred in Valencia, and said they were caused by the friends of the Cuban insurgents, who hoped thereby to prevent the departure of further reinforcements of troops for Cuba. Hitherto popular demonstrations have been attributed entirely to protests against the imposition of new taxes made necessary by the campaign against the insurgents in Cuba. But while the government was only too willing to admit that the riots had been instigated by the agents of the Cuban revolutionists, it is generally admitted that the roots of the trouble are much deeper and it is being nourished by a natural feeling of alarm and dismay at the apparent utter inability of the government to cope with the situation in Cuba. That the large Spanish army in Cuba must be still further and heavily reinforced is looked upon as a confession of weakness and an admission of the growing strength of the Cubans. In addition, many letters have been received by relatives of the Spanish soldiers in Cuba, and they tell such terrible tales of sickness, privation, incompetency, mismanagement and lack of pay that a dangerous feeling against the government has arisen. Republicans as well as Cuban sympathizers are taking advantage of the situation to push their propaganda, and the combined movements are making more headway with the masses than the government will admit, though it is already betraying symptoms of alarm and has sent stringent instructions to the prefects to promptly and effectually suppress demonstrations in their districts and to have no hesitation in calling on the military for support. A number of conflicts have already occurred, a number of persons having been wounded on both sides and a large number of arrests made.

Quay Will Retire From Politics.

PITTSBURG, August 8.—Senator Quay stated to a Pittsburg Dispatch reporter that his present term would be his last in the senate. He said: "It has often been said by others, but I have never said it myself until now. At the expiration of my term in the United States senate I will refuse any renomination and instead will retire from politics and spend the remainder of my time getting acquainted with my family. As to the truth of the report that Don Cameron is to be a candidate to succeed himself, I am not informed, and hardly believe it, but so far as I am personally concerned I will not under any circumstances be a candidate for re-election at the expiration of my present term."

Quick Transportation of Troops.

WASHINGTON, August 6.—The navy department some time ago ordered 100 men, which were of the crew of the Charleston, at Mare Island, Cal., to be sent to the navy yard at Norfolk. The department desired to see what was the least possible time in which the crews could be transferred across the country. The men have arrived at Norfolk, making the trip by special train in four days and twenty-three hours, which is a record breaker. The route was via the Southern Pacific and Seaboard Air lines. The method of transferring sailors heretofore has been by the way of the isthmus of Panama, and occupies thirty-five days.

Cretans Licked Mohammedans.

CANEA, Crete, August 6.—A body of Mohammedans which broke through the cordon of Turkish troops at the third attempt advanced to attack the insurgents near Cirsni, Crete, but were met by the latter and repulsed. The Cretans captured the arms and ammunition of the Mohammedans. The Turkish troops watched the fighting.

Bald Breaks a Record.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., August 6.—In the bicycle tournament Eddie Bald lowered the third mile record held by W. W. Hamilton, of Denver, from 33 3-5 to 33 seconds flat. He tried to break the two-thirds mile record, but only equalled the state record of 1:11 2-5. He was paced by a triplet.

Big Chicago Strike.

CHICAGO, August 6.—Fourteen hundred of the 2,500 employes of the South Chicago Shipbuilding Company struck, which necessitated the closing of the yards. The strike originated with 300 boys employed to heat rivets, whose wages were cut from $1.50 to $1.25 a day. The men riviters, 1,100 in number, followed their example.

Reed Renominated.

PORTLAND, Me., August 7.—Hon. Thomas B. Reed was renominated for congress by the republicans of the First district.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

MELANCHOLY WOMEN.

Always Afraid Something Dreadful is Going to Happen.

How a Little Baby Girl Rolled the Clouds Away.

Of course a woman will naturally see the dark side of everything when tortured by some form of female disease, which her doctor cannot or does not relieve. No wonder she is melancholy when head and back ache, pains run through the whole body and loins, nerves are weak, stomach out of order, digestion poor, sense of fullness and bearing-down, poor sleep and appetite, always weak and tired, irregular menstruation, whites, etc.

She probably is not so fortunate as to know that all female ailments are indicated by these never failing symptoms, and are controlled by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; all female weaknesses quickly disappear by its use. It has been the thinking woman's safeguard for twenty years, and all druggists sell large quantities of it because it can be relied upon

Still another woman speaks:

"I wish you would publish my name with your testimonials. I want every one to know that your Vegetable Compound has made me well and strong. I sing its praises all the time. When I was first married I was very weak and had female troubles badly; Oh, I was so weary, sick and melancholy, but the Vegetable Compound built me up, and now I have a dear baby girl, and I am so happy. No home is complete without a dear little baby and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to roll the clouds away."—MRS. GEO. CLAUS, 35 Danforth St., Buffalo, N. Y.

She was very young for the responsibilities of housekeeping (as every woman is who has not been married long), and he was doing his best to give her good advice about how to economize and systematize her affairs. And (as most young husbands do) he was constantly casting discredit on his own fitness to advise by making applications to borrow back, for his personal expenses down town, money which he had given her for domestic use.

"I have only a little money, dear," she protested, "barely enough to market with."

"But I thought I handed you quite a little sum for an emergency some time ago. This is an emergency, you know. You wouldn't want a man to go without his lunch and a cigar, would you?"

"I don't know what money you mean?"

"Why, I gave it to you only last week and told you there was something for a rainy day."

"Oh! Why, dear, I used that the same afternoon."

ELECTRIC BITTERS.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yields to Electric Bitters. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at J. L. Harr's Drug Store.

The weather is one of the things that can please but few people at a time.

Herbert Roller, aged 19, of Paris, Ill., looked into the empty end of a shotgun recently. He is a high Roller now.

Jerry Simpson says he is "going to run for congress again, barefooted, if necessary." This will be an interesting feat, truly.

A husband and wife who were arrested while stealing a lot of silks and a feather boa from a Chicago store pleaded that they were in needy circumstances. Just what aid such articles could be in a case of starvation is not given, unless the young woman considered that there is as much nourishment in the boa as in the ordinary spring chicken at the corner markets.

A Chicago man attempted suicide a day or two ago because of a lover's quarrel with a Miss Smith of Lawndale avenue. Another man is said to have killed himself a few years ago for love of the same young woman. If all the fair members of the entire Smith family are going to prove so fatal the question of the overpopulation of the world promises to be speedily settled.

It is stated upon eminent authority that the emperor of Germany is negotiating with Denmark for the latter country's possessions in the Antilles, especially St. Thomas. The kaiser wishes more colonial influence and an excuse to increase the navy. It is anticipated, however, that in view of the Monroe doctrine the United States will protest against the sale of the island to Germany.

Prof. Mohr, the location of whose chair is not named, however, has not only seen the sea-serpent, but has made a sketch of him. He and his son caught the big water snake apparently asleep in shallow water near Lynn, Mass., and as four or five minutes elapsed before the animal woke up and betook himself elsewhere, the professor was able to make an excellent picture of him. Hurray, at last. (Nit?)

A New York scientist asks the press to spread broadcast the information that "headaches are due to impoverished blood containing poisonous matter absorbed from badly digested food." We gladly comply with this request, but feel that it is only fair to add that headaches can be caused by other things than those the professor has discovered. Any one who ever has done any municipal decorating understands that fact the morning afterward.

Mr. and Mrs. Milkegan of La Grange Ind., were hopelessly divided on the question of politics. Mr. Milkegan is a Republican and his wife is a Democrat. There is no telling what might have happened had it not been for the appearance on the scene of an accommodating pair of twins. It was decided to name one of the little chaps William McKinley and the other William Jennings Bryan and this proved a happy solution of the difficulty. The commissioners of indirect taxes have published an interesting return giving the number of bicycles in France. At the time of the exhibition of 1889 it was estimated that they numbered about 50,000, but it was not until 1892 that a tax was levied upon them, and there were then 119,000. The total went up to 132,000 in 1893, while at the end of last year the tax was paid upon nearly 160,000, this being at the rate of four for every 1,000 inhabitants. THE NEWS IN IOWA

SUIT FOR BIG DAMAGES.

DES MOINES, Aug. 29.—A petition will be filed in the district court in a suit brought by the Dorr Cattle company against W. W. Lyons, for $25,000 damages for slander. Plaintiff is a large concern which does an extensive business througout the state in live stock and especially in buying, feeding and marketing cattle. Defendant is president of the Iowa Bankers' State bank. The petition will allege that about a year ago, when plaintiff had business with the defendant's bank, defendant made certain statements, unfounded and unwarranted, reflecting on the business methods of the company and its credit, which have resulted in serious injury to the business, pecuniary loss and damage to the good credit it had before enjoyed.

A FEARFUL CRIME.

Terrible Deed Perpetrated by Masked Men Near Libertyville.

OTTUMWA, August 29.—Three masked men visited the home of a farmer, E. W. Warner, near Libertyville, where his daughter, Nellie, 20 years old, was alone in the house. They bound and gagged her, ransacked the house, assaulted the girl and left her bound. She managed to free herself and give the alarm. A sheriff's posse of 300 men gave chase and caught three men believed to be the ones. With difficulty they were landed safely in jail at Fairfield. The girl is in a critical condition and not able to identify the men. Circumstanial evidence is accumulating against them.

TWO FARMERS FOUND DEAD.

One at Independence and One Near Oxford.

INDEPENDENCE, August 28.—Robert Burk, a farmer just east of the city, died while on the road to town, of hemorrhage of the lungs. He was found on the bridge, lying in a pool of his own blood. He leaves a wife and four children.

IOWA CITY, August 28.—Andy B. Sjonell, a young man without family, was found dead on the farm of Charles Stratton, four miles south of Oxford. The cause of his death is unknown

ROBBERY AT SEARSBORO.

Thieves Secure About $100 Worth of Material From a General Store.

SEARSBORO, August 29.—Thieves entered the general store of George Jackson and plundered the contents thereof, carrying away some $100 worth of clothing, jewelry and other material. It appears that confederates of the robbers were in waiting, and when the work was completed the stolen goods were loaded into a wagon and driven away. No clues are in the hands of the local officers.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

While Cooking Mrs. John Knutson Was Horribly Burned.

WEST BEND, Aug. 28.—What will probably prove a fatal accident occurred to Mrs. John Knutson, living two miles east of town. She was preparing dinner when the flames were in some manner communicated from the stove to her dress, burning her terribly. Her husband rushed to her rescue and was seriously burned about the hands and arms, but the doctors say he was too late.

DAILY NEWS' GREAT STROKE.

Subscription Price Temporarily Reduced to $1 a Year.

DES MOINES, August 27.—The Des Moines Daily News, which already has double the circulation of any other daily paper in Iowa, has just made a master stroke of business policy by reducing its subscription price to $1 a year. The offer is good only till January 1, 1897.

SIOUX NATIONAL FAILS.

Doors of Sioux City's Big Bank are Closed.

SIOUX CITY, Aug. 29.—The Sioux National Bank has failed. A notice posted on the door says that large withdrawals and slow collections are the cause and that depositors will be paid in full.

Loses a Foot.

MISSOURI VALLEY, Aug. 30.—Henry Weilinger lost a foot in a mowing machine. He stopped his team to remove a barrel in front of the sickle and the rustling grass frightened his mules, when they ran away, catching his left foot in the sickle just above the ankle, entirely severing it. Parties near by happened to see the accident and saved his life by prompt service.

Judge Thompson Dead.

MASON CITY, August 28.—Judge W. E. Thompson is dead. He was in the employ of the New York Tribune under Horace Greeley and worked with James A. Garfield on the Erie canal. He had been a resident of Cerro Gordo county since 1863.

UNREQUITED LOVE—SUICIDE.

Sad But Foolish Act of a Youth at Logan.

LOGAN, August 31.—A young man from Page county named John Dempster committed suicide. He had been waiting on a daughter of Butler Kellogg. She did not favor his suit. It is reported that a few days ago his sister wrote Miss Kellogg that he was coming to see her and that she must promise to marry him or he would kill her and himself. When he called, Miss Kellogg refused to speak with him alone. He went out behind some corn cribs and shot himself through the head.

CUT EXPENSES IN TWO.

Sioux City Council Discharges Many Clerks and Reduces Salaries.

SIOUX CITY, Aug. 30.—The Sioux City council has cut municipal expenses in two by chopping off the heads of clerks in all departments, making a general reduction in salaries and trimming police, fire and street cleaning departments to a minimum. The city has long been running behind and retrenchment was necessary. The city will doubtless be sued by many of the ex-employes, who claim they were entitled to serve out their terms at the salaries they were employed at.

FAILURE AT WATERLOO.

Miller & Daugherty, Extensive Dry Goods Dealers, Forced to Assign.

WATERLOO, August 30.—Miller & Daugherty, dry goods dealers in Waterloo, have made an assignment. The liabilities are scheduled at $42,500 with assets estimated at $50,000. The firm also runs a store at Washington, which is included in the assignment. Mortgages to the amount of $13,000 were filed previous to assignment. The cause of the failure is said to be the attempt of eastern firms to enforce collections. It is claimed that the liabilities will all be realized.

BICYCLE COASTER KILLED.

Twelve-Year-Old Boy Pays for Recklessness With His Life.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Aug. 30.—A fearful accident happened here. Bert Schuweiler, a 12-year-old boy, while coasting down a steep hill on his bicycle, collided with a load of hay. He was thrown under the horses and severely trampled and then run over, the hind wheel passing diagonally across the body. He was terribly mangled and died within an hour.

GLENWOOD BLAZE.

Fire in the Institution for the Feeble-Minded.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Aug. 30.—The east wing of the institution for the feeble-minded children at Glenwood was destroyed by fire at 3 o'clock a. m. during a heavy storm. The fire originated by lightning. All the inmates were safely marched out. The loss is $75,000.

BREVITIES.

A light frost visited portions of Iowa on the morning of the 27th.

Fourth district republicans have renominated Congressman Updegraff.

The Kinder brothers were recently arrested at Foster charged with assault with intent to do great bodily injury upon the person of Thomas Boyle, an old soldier. They are alleged to have knocked him down, broken his arm, and trampled his face after he was down. Both of the alleged assailants are young men.

Fort Dodge dispatch: Supervisor Manchester, of Burnside, reports that the hog cholera is in that vicinity and makes a clean sweep wherever it appears. Wick Beem lost 100 and other farmers report heavy losses. It is also in the vicinity of Moorland, and seems spreading through the country south of here. Farmers who have hogs not yet affected are rushing them to market.

Charles Ray, a tinner in the employ of Wm. Probert, was accidently shot in the abdomen at Cowan's park, near Eagle Grove, recently by George Christensen, an employe of the Standard Oil company. They had been shooting at an old valise with a 22 calibre rifle and the weapon was discharged while Ray had the valise in his hands. The wound is considered very dangerous.

The Aborn House, Des Moines, Ia., is taking rank among the best $2 and $2.50 per day hotels in the state. It is supplied with elevators, electric light and call bells, and about $10,000 is being expended in remodelling the office and reading room, putting in a new lavatory and placing steam heat in every room. Frank H. Connell, the new proprietor, is striving to make "The Aborn" a comfortable ... home-like place for travelers while in Des Moines.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

OPENED FIRE.

British Warships Bombard Zanzibar and Capture the Sultan.

LONDON, August 28.—The foreign office has received dispatches from Zanzibar stating that the usurping sultan, Said Khalid, having refused to surrender, in accordance with the terms of the British consul's ultimatum, the palace was bombarded by the warships. The palace and old custom house were totally destroyed. Said Khalid escaped to the German consulate, where he took refuge. During the bombardment of the palace, the steamer Glasgow, which was owned by the late sultan and carried a number of guns, was fired upon by the British warships and immediately sunk. The bombarding of the palace lasted fifty minutes. The firing was done by the warships Raccoon, Thrush and Sparrow. The followers of Said Khalid were stationed behind barricades and kept up a steady fire upon the British soldiers and marines until their positions were carried.

ZANZIBAR, Aug. 27.—The sultan of Zanzibar is dead, aged 40. He succeeded to the throne in 1893. Ceyyid has occupied the palace, taking possession of that building immediately after the death of Hamad Bin Thwain Bin Said became known. He proclaimed himself sultan and barricaded himself in the palace with 700 armed askares. Sailors from the British war ships Phiolomel, Thrush and Sparrow have been landed to protect property ashore and all the ladies have been lodged in the British consulate, which is guarded by the sailors. Trouble is feared.

ZANZIBAR, August 30.—During the bombardment of the palace by the British warships, the forces of Said Khalid, the self-proclaimed sultan, in and about the palace numbered 3,000. Of this number it is estimated that fully 500 were killed and wounded.

MAY ANNEX THE ISLANDS.

Minister Willis Has a Proposition to Make to President Dole.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 29.—Steamer Alameda, from Honolulu, brings advices that Minister Willis has resumed his duties. It is rumored his recent visit to the United States was for the purpose of conferring with President Cleveland on an annexation policy. As a result of the conference, it is said he was empowered to enter into negotiations for either annexation, a monarchical form of government with Kaiulani on the throne, or an American protectorate. Choice of either form of government to be left to a vote of the people. Minister Willis made a formal call on the government soon after his return to the city. Nothing definite will be known regarding Mr. Willis' instructions until the return of President Dole, who is on the Island of Maui at present.

LI HUNG CHANG ARRIVES.

Meets With a Magnificent Reception at New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The steamer St. Louis, bearing Li Hung Chang, arrived off quarantine and was immediately boarded by the welcoming officers from the cruiser Dolphin, who extended to the Chinese statesman, in behalf of President Cleveland, a welcome to the United States. Then the St. Louis moved up the bay amid great cheers, a chorus of steam whistles from all sorts of crafts and the explosion of giant firecrackers. The cruiser New York fired the first salute of twenty-one guns and the other warships dipped their colors. Arriving at the pier the distinguished Chinamen was met by a detachment of United States cavalry and escorted to the hotel Waldorf.

NEW YORK, August 31.—President Cleveland received Li Hung Chang privately at the residence of ex-Secretary Whitney. Short addresses were made by each. In the evening Li Hung Chang was the guest of honor at a banquet in the Waldorf given by former United States ministers to China.

EXCITEMENT IS INTENSE.

Transvaal Visitors Treated to Cold Lead —One Fatally Wounded.

LONDON, August 27.—A dispatch to the Telegraph from Loronzo Maute says the authorities at the naval station recently deliberately fired on a party of Transvaal visitors who were traveling in a steam launch, fatally wounding Mrs. Landsorg. The consul representing the Transvaal government has demanded that inquiry be made into the affair. There is intense excitement and trouble is feared in consequence.

Evasive Answer Will Not Go.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 28.—The U. S. minister, Alexander W. Terrill, has notified the Turkish govenment that the latter's answer to the demands of the United States for indemnity as a result of the burning of the American missions at Kharput and Marash is not satfisactory.

GREATEST OF ALL.

The Brooklyn Surpasses Other Vessels of Her Class in Speed.

BOSTON, August 29.—The new cruiser Brooklyn has proved herself to be the greatest naval vessel of her class in the world by covering a distance of 83 knots in a continuous run at an average speed of 21.92-100 knots per hour. She still further showed that she is capable of greater speed than 21.92-100, by maintaining an average of 22.9-10 knots during a portion of her run. By her performance she earns for her builders the Messrs. Cramp, of Philadelphia, a bonus of at least $350,000, premium of $50,000 being allowed for each full quarter knot over 20. The vessel behaved grandly.

HAMMOND MILLS TO CLOSE.

Hundreds of Steel Workers to be Thrown Out of Employment.

HAMMOND, Ind., Aug. 28.—The Illinois Steel Company's mills have been closed for an indefinite period. General depression in business is the cause attributed for the shut-down, but it is given out by Geo. P. Hyde, assistant superintendent, that the concern will never be operated again by the Illinois Steel Company. Since the signing of the new scale in July the mill has been running steadily with three shifts, and the shut-down will throw 420 skilled mechanics and laborers out of employment, which means a loss of from $5,000 to $6,000 every week.

CONDEMNED TO DEATH.

Former Prominent Officials of Salvador Charged With Treason.

NEW YORK, August 29.—The Herald's correspondent at San Salvador says the court martial condemns Carlos Ezeta, formerly president, and Antonio Ezeta, formerly vice-president, to death for treason, rebellion and sedition on June 22, 1890. They are both now out of the reach of Salvadorian justice and probably will never return to that country.

Three Cuban Expeditions Landed.

KEY WEST, Fla., Aug. 23.—General Roloff and Col. Nunez have arrived here. Roloff and his party report the landing in Cuba of 3 expeditions, said to have brought 1,500 rifles, 2,000,000 cartridges, 700 machetes, three field pieces, medicine and other supplies.

Colgrove Chancellor.

TERSE NEWS.

Major McKinley has issued his formal letter of acceptance.

The New York republicans have nominated Frank S. Black, of Troy, for governor.

At Newport, R. I., recently the wedding of Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, eldest daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt, to Harry Payne Whitney, eldest son of William C. Whitney, ex-secretary of the navy, occurred at the Vanderbilt summer residence, "The Breakers." The bride's dowery was $5,000,000.

Athens dispatch: The porte has signified its willingness to accept the terms of the proposal for the settlement of the Cretan troubles which originated with Count Golouchowski, Austrian minister of foreign affairs. The report is that Turkey will grant Crete a new constitution, the main features of which are the appointment of a Christian governor and the establishment of Cretan financial autonomy, with the payment of tribute to the sultan under the general guarantee of the European powers, the amount of tribute to be paid annually to be based upon the ratio of revenues of the islands. The terms of the proposal were also submitted to the Christian deputies of Crete by the foreign consuls at Constantinople, and a majority of the deputies have signified their adherence to its conditions.

At Frederick, Md., recently forty persons were more or less injured by the brakes of a trolley car failing to work on the steep mountain incline on the Frederick & Middletown Electric railway. The car on which the accident occurred started from Braddock Heights at 7 o'clock. There were 100 persons on the car, many more than its capacity, when the start was made. The motorman applied the brakes, but they would not hold, and the speed rapidly increased. The motorman tried to reverse, but the trolley slipped the wire and he was powerless. As the car neared the sharp curve, two miles and a half from the mountain top, there was a crash and the car bounded from the rails and turned over. People were piled on top of one another and jammed in a mass of wreckage. Many persons who had seen the car tearing down the mountain side hurried to the rescue and the bruised and maimed passengers were removed to their homes. No fatalities occurred

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"THE SOFT TONGUE" LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Text: "A Soft Tongue Breaketh the Bone"—Proverbs, Chapter 25, Verse 15 — Solomon's Wisest Saying.

When Solomon said this he drove a whole volume into one phrase. You, of course, will not be so silly as to take the words of the text in a literal sense. They simply mean to set forth the fact that there is a tremendous power in a kind word. Although it may seem to be very insignificant, its force is indescribable and illimitable. Pungent and all-conquering utterance: "A soft tongue breaketh the bone."

If I had time, I would show you kindness as a means of defense, as a means of usefulness, kindness as a means of domestic harmony, kindness as best employed by governments for the taming and curing of criminals, and kindness as best adapted for the settling and adjusting of international quarrel; but I shall call your attention only to two of these thoughts.

And first, I speak to you of kindness as a means of defense. Almost every man, in the course of his life, is set upon and assaulted. Your motives are misinterpreted or your religious or political principles are bombarded. What to do under such circumstances is the question. The first impulse of the natural heart says: "Strike back. Give as much as he sent. Trip him into the ditch which he dug for your feet. Gash him with as severe a wound as that which he inflicted on your soul. Shot for shot. Sarcasm for sarcasm. An eye for an eye. A tooth for a tooth." But the better spirit in the man's soul rises up and says: "You ought to consider that matter." You look up into the face of Christ and say: "My Master, how ought I to act under these difficult circumstances?" And Christ instantly answers: "Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you." Then the old nature rises up again and says: "You had better not forgive him until first you have chastised him. You will never get him in so tight a corner again. You will never have such an opportunity of inflicting the right kind of punishment upon him again. First chastise him, and then let him go." "No," says the better nature, "hush, thou foul heart. The soft tongue that breaketh the bone." Have you ever in all your life known acerbity and acrimonious dispute to settle a quarrel? Did they not always make matters worse and worse and worse? About fifty-five years ago there was a great quarrel in the Presbyterian family. Ministers of Christ were thought orthodox in proportion as they had measured lances with other clergymen of the same denomination. The most outrageous personalities were abroad. As, in the autumn, a hunter comes home with a string of game, partridges and wild ducks, slung over his shoulder, so there were many ministers who came back from ecclesiastical courts with long strings of doctors of divinity whom they had shot with their own rifle. The division became wider, the animosity greater, until after awhile some good men resolved upon another tack. They began to explain away the difficulties; they began to forgive each other's faults; and lo, the great church quarrel was settled; and the new school Presbyterian church and the old school Presbyterian church became one. The different parts of the Presbyterian order, welded by a hammer, a little hammer, a Christian hammer that the Scripture calls "a soft tongue."

You have a dispute with your neighbor. You say to him, "I despise you." He replies, "I can't bear the sight of you." You say to him, "Never enter my house again." He says, "If you come on my door sill I'll kick you off." You say to him, "I'll put you down." He says to you, "You are mistaken; I'll put you down." And so the contest rages; and year after year you act the unchristian part, and he acts the unchristian part. After awhile the better spirit seizes you, and one day you go over to the neighbor, and say, "Give me your hand. We have fought long enough. Time is so short, and eternity is so near, that we cannot afford any longer to quarrel. I feel you have wronged me very much; but let us settle all now in one great hand-shaking, and be good friends for all the rest of our lives." You have risen to a higher platform than that on which before you stood. You win his admiration, and you get his apology. But if you have not conquered him in that way, at any rate you have won the applause of your own conscience, the high estimation of good men, and the honor of your Lord who died for his armed enemies.

"But," you say, "what are we to do when slander assaults us, and there come acrimonious sayings all around about us, and we are abused and spit upon?" My reply is: Do not go and attempt to chase down the slanders. Lies are prolific, and while you are killing one, fifty are born. All your demonstrations of indignation only exhaust yourself. You might as well on some summer night when the swarms of insects are coming up from the meadows and disturbing you and disturbing your family, bring up some great "swamp angel," like that which thundered over Charleston, and try to shoot them down. The game is too small for the gun. But what, then, are you to do with the abuses that come upon you in life? You are to live them down! I saw a farmer go out to get back a swarm of bees that had wandered off from the hive. As he moved amid them they buzzed around his head, and buzzed around his hands, and buzzed around his feet. If he had killed one of them they would have stung him to death. But he moved in their midst in perfect placidity until he had captured the swarm of wandering bees. And so I have seen men moving amid the annoyances, and the vexations, and the assaults of life in such calm, Christian deliberation, that all the buzzing around about their soul amounted to nothing. They conquered them, and, above all, they conquered themselves. "O," you say, "that's a very good theory to preach on a hot day, but it won't work." It will work. It has worked. I believe it is the last Christian grace we win. You know there are fruits which we gather in June, and others in July, and others in August, and others in September, and still others in October; and I have to admit that this grace of Christian forgiveness is about the last fruit of the Christian soul. We hear a great deal about the bitter tongue, and the sarcastic tongue, and the quick tongue, and the stinging tongue; but we know very little about "the soft tongue that breaketh the bone." We read Hudibras, and Sterne, and Dean Swift, and the other apostles of acrimony, but give little time to studying the example of him who was reviled, and yet reviled not again. O that the Lord, by his Spirit, would endow us all with "the soft tongue that breaketh the bone."

I pass now to the other thought that I desire to present, and that is, kindness as a means of usefulness. In all communities you find sceptical men. Through early education, or through the maltreatment of professed Christian people, or through prying curiosity about the future world, there are a great many people who become sceptical in religious things. How shall you capture them for God? Sharp arguments and sarcastic retort never won a single soul from scepticism to the Christian religion. While powerful books on "The Evidence of Christianity" have their mission in confirming Christian people in the faith they have already adopted, I have noticed that when sceptical people are brought into the kingdom of Christ, it is through the charm of some genial soul, and not by argument at all. Men are not saved through the head; they are saved through the heart. A storm comes out of its hiding-place. It says: "Now we'll just rouse up all this sea;" and it makes a great bluster, but it does not succeed. Part of the sea is roused up—perhaps one-half of it or one-fourth of it. After awhile the calm moon, placid and beautiful, looks down, and the ocean begins to rise. It comes up to high-water mark. It embraces the great headlands. It submerges the beach of all the continents. It is the heart-throb of one world against the heart-throb of another world. And I have to tell you that while all your storms of ridicule and storms of sarcasm may rouse up the passion of an immortal nature, nothing less than the attractive power of Christian kindness can ever raise the deathless spirit to happiness and to God. I have more faith in the prayer of a child five years old, in the way of bringing an infidel back to Christ and to heaven, than I have in all the hissing thunderbolts of ecclesiastical controversy. You cannot overcome men with religious argumentation. If you come at a sceptical man with an argument on behalf of the Christian religion, you put this man on his mettle. He says: "I see that man has a carbine. I'll use my carbine. I'll answer his argument with my argument." But if you come to that man, persuading him that you desire his happiness on earth and his eternal welfare in the world to come, he cannot answer it.

What I have said is as true in the reclamation of the openly vicious. Did you ever know a drunkard to be saved through the caricature of a drunkard? Your mimicry of the staggering step, and the thick tongue, and the disgusting hiccough, only worse maddens his brain. But if you come to him in kindness and sympathy; if you show him that you appreciate the awful grip of a depraved appetite; if you persuade him of the fact that thousands who had the grappling-hooks of evil inclination clutched in their soul as firmly as they now are in his, have been rescued, then a ray of light will flash across his vision, and it will seem as if a supernatural hand were steadying his staggering gait. A good many years ago there lay in the streets of Richmond, Va., a man dead drunk, his face exposed to the blistering noonday sun. A Christian woman passed along, looked at him, and said, "Poor fellow." She took her handkerchief and spread it over his face, and passed on. The man roused himself up from his debauch and began to look at the handkerchief, and, lo! on it was the name of a highly respectable Christian woman of the city of Richmond. He went to her, he thanked her for her kindness; and that one little deed saved him for this life, and saved him for the life that is to come. He was afterward attorney-general of the United States; but, higher than all, he became the consecrated disciple of Jesus Christ. Kind words are so cheap, it is a wonder we do not use them oftener. There are tens of thousands of people in these cities who are dying for the lack of one kind word. There is a business man who has fought against trouble until he is perfectly exhausted. He has been thinking about forgery, about robbery, about suicide. Go to that business man. Tell him that better times are coming, and tell him that you yourself were in a tight business pass, and the Lord delivered you. Tell him to put his trust in God. Tell him that Jesus Christ stands beside every business man in his perplexities. Tell him of the sweet promises of God's comforting grace. That man is dying for the lack of just one kind word. Go to-morrow and utter that one saving, omnipotent, kind word. Here is a soul that has been swamped in sin. He wants to find the light of the Gospel. He feels like a ship-wrecked mariner looking out over the beach, watching for a sail against the sky. O, bear down on him. Tell him that the Lord waits to be gracious to him, that though he has been a great sinner, there is a great Saviour provided. Tell him that though his sins are as scarlet, they shall be as snow; though they are red like crimson, they shall be as wool. That man is dying forever for the lack of one kind word. There used to be sung at a great many of the pianos all through the country a song that has almost died out. I wish somebody would start it again in our social circles. There may not have been very exquisite art in the music, but there was a grand and glorious sentiment:

Kind words never die, never die;
Cherished and blessed.

O, that we might in our families and in our churches try the force of kindness. You can never drive men, women, or children into the kingdom of God. A March northeaster will bring out more honeysuckles than fretfulness and scolding will ever bring out Christian grace. I wish that in all our religious work we might be saturated with the spirit of kindness. Missing that, we miss a great deal of usefulness. There is no need of coming out before men and thundering to them the law unless at the same time you preach to them the Gospel. The world is dying for lack of kindness.

These young people want it just as much as the old. The old people sometimes seem to think they have a monopoly of the rheumatisms, and the neuralgias, and the headaches, and the physical disorders of the world; but I tell you there are no worse heartaches than are felt by some of these young people. Do you know that much of the work is done by the young? Raphael died at thirty-seven; Richelieu at thirty-one; Gustavus Adolphus died at thirty-eight; Innocent III. came to his mightiest influence at thirty-seven; Cortez conquered Mexico at thirty; Don John won Lepanto at twenty-five; Grotius was attorney-general at twenty-four; and I have noticed amid all classes of men that some of the severest battles and the toughest work come before thirty. Therefore we must have our sermons and our exhortations in prayer meeting all sympathetic with the young. And so with these people further on in life. What do these doctors and lawyers and merchants and mechanics care about the abstractions of religion? What they want is help to bear the whimsicalities of patients, the browbeating of legal opponents, the unfairness of customers, who have plenty of fault-finding for every imperfection of handiwork, but no praise for twenty excellences. What does that brain-racked, hand-blistered man care for Zwingle's "Doctrine of Original Sin," or Augustine's "Anthropology?" You might as well go to a man who has the pleurisy and put on his side a plaster made out of Dr. Parr's "Treatise of Medical Jurisprudence."

* * *

It was all for another that Sir Matthew Hale took off his robe and put on the garb of a miller. And so Christ took off his robe of royalty and put on the attire of our humanity, and in that disguise he won our eternal portion. Now are we the sons of God. Joint heirs! We went off from home sure enough, but we got back in time to receive our eternal inheritance. And if Christ was so kind to us, surely we can afford to be kind to each other.

BOLTING DEMOCRATS.

Meet at Des Moines and Nominate Electors.

DES MOINES, Aug. 27.—The following electors were placed in nomination by the bolting "sound money" democrats: First district, L. A. Palmer, Henry; Second, J. T. Beem, Iowa; Third, A. A. Cooper, Dubuque; Fourth Judge John Cliggett, Cerro Gordo; Fifth, Senator T. P. Perry, Monona; Seventh, N. T. Guernsey, Polk; Eight, J. A. Bradley, Appanoose; Ninth, L. L. Delane, Cass; Tenth, John McCarthy, Greene; Eleventh, L. H. Brown, Woodbury; at large, W. W. Witmer, Polk, and J. E. E. Markley, Cerro Gordo.

The following delegates to the Indianapolis convention were selected: First district, John Walbank, Henry, and John M. Morton, Van Buren; Second, Henry Vollmer, Scott, and Sam Cohn, Muscatine; Third, Robert Bonson, Dubuque, and M. Ricker, Blackhawk; Fourth, J. H. McConlogue, Cerro Gordo, and Samuel G. Sloane, Floyd; Fifth, Martin Lee, Tama, and H. M. Carpenter, Jones; Sixth, W. R. Hollingsworth, Keokuk, and F. M. Hunter, Wapello; Seventh, S. J. Gilpin, Madison, and Joel Witmer, Polk; Eighth, S. H. Mallory, Lucas, and A. M. Hammond, Fremont; Ninth, W. J. Burk, Harrison, and Charles F. Chase, Cass; T. M. Mitchell, Webster, and J. J. Russell, Greene; Eleventh, John C. Kelly, Woodbury, and Marcus Snyder, Dickinson. At large, Col. L. M. Martin, Marshalltown; William Groneweg, Council Bluffs; W. I. Babb, Mt. Pleasant; Col. Joseph Eiboeck, Des Moines; John Cliggett, Mason City; Joel Stewart, Poweshiek; M. B. Hendrick, Allamakee; W. E. Mitchell, Fremont.

The resolutions adopted declare the platform of the Chicago convention to be undemocratic. J. E. E. Markley, of Mason City, temporary chairman and Judge W. I. Babb, of Mt. Pleasant, permanent chairman.

RIOTS IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Armenians Said to Have Incited a Genuine Rebellion.

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 28.—A score of men armed with revolvers and bombs invaded the Ottoman bank, killing a number of soldiers on guard. The invaders mounted the roof of the building and from the windows fired at the police in the street below. The police returned the fire in a vigorous fashion and several were killed and wounded. The riot then became general. Shops were sacked and bazars invaded and the wildest excitement prevailed throughout certain quarters of the city. A report says that there is no doubt but what the movement is revolutionary in plan and scope and that it had its origin in the secret meetings of the Armenians. Advices from the disorderly sections of the city are to the effect that the riots still continue and that the mobs are constantly in the galata quarter. A bomb exploded in Constantinople near a guard house. Many soldiers were killed and wounded. Her majesty's steamship, Dryad, at once left the Rapia, where she was anchored, and proceeded to the city.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 28.—The disturbance which occurred in the Ottoman bank is ended and everything is well with the bank and quiet in the city, thanks to the energetic intervention of the sultan.

WASHINGTON, August 28.—United States Minister Terrell telegraphed from Constantinople that during the rioting in the Ottoman bank several hundred Armenians were killed. The Armenians exploded bombs in the streets, killing thirty Turkish soldiers. All houses in the city were closed and the revolutionists deported.

LONDON, August 29.—A dispatch to the Chronicle from Rome says that private letters just received from Constantinople state that the Turkish government is on the eve of being overturned, and that a provisional government will be appointed.

CANEA, Island of Crete, August 29.—The wildest excitement prevails at Retimo, where famished crowds are sacking the provision shops.

LONDON, August 29.—A dispatch from Constantinople says it is estimated that from 3,000 to 4,000 persons were killed in the recent riots in the different portions of the city. The whole thing could have been stopped in an hour if the government had desired, but the members of the mob pretend to have received permission to loot, burn and destroy the Armenian quarters for a certain length of time.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The British press unanimous in expressing the opinion that the attack upon the Ottoman bank has done immeasureable harm to the Armenian cause and news of fresh massacres of Armenians in the provinces as resprisals is hourly expected. The liberal newspapers, however, express the gravest doubts at the genuineness of the affair. They believe it was got up by agents sent out to provoke the Armenians.

MILWAUKEE, August 27.—At the meeting of the National League of Republican Clubs, D. D. Woodmansee, of Ohio, was elected president.

POWERS TO HELP CRETE.

Turkey Will Be Forced to Grant Autonomy to the Island.

A London dispatch says: The Cretan situation is being rapidly simplified. The powers have virtually agreed upon a policy which will compel Turkey to grant the island reforms not falling far short of autonomy. The entire matter will be left to the ambassadors at Constantinople. They will receive definite instructions after the forthcoming meetings between Nicholas, Franz Josef and Wilhelm. Meanwhile the French consul at Canea and the Russian naval commander there have received identical instructions to assume the protection of all Cretan Christians. This promising condition of things is directly traceable to Lord Salisbury's refusal to join in a blockade of Crete in the sultan's interest, and to his alternative suggestion that the powers ought to unite to compel Turkey to grant reasonable concessions to the islanders. The probability is that the eventual outcome will be some sort of autonomous regime, under the supervision of the foreign consuls at Canea. At Athens the feeling is sanguine that a speedy and satisfactory settlement is near at hand. This, at all events, is the belief in official circles. There is no such thing practicable now as political union of the island with Greece, and the mutual jealousies of the powers are too strong to allow either of them to appropriate it. The only way to put an end to a dangerous agitation was for the powers to make themselves arbiters of the situation unasked. This seems to be what they have done, and the next fortnight will probably witness their ultimatum to Abdul Hamid.

BRAZIL AND ITALY MAY FIGHT.

Situation in Rio Janeiro is Becoming Very Serious.

BUENOS AYRES, Argentina, August 28.—A correspondent in Rio Janeiro, Brazil, sends word that the situation in relation to the Italian trouble is very dangerous. Great crowds are in the streets, and they constantly shout: "Down with Italy; long live Menelik!" Menelik's portrait is distributed on all hands. Police in strong force guard the Italian legation. It will be remembered that Menelik is the Abyssinian king, whose forces crushed the Italians at Adowa. Protests will be made in Rio Janeiro against the Brazilian agitation.

WEYLER'S NEW DECREE.

Suspension of Gathering of the Coffee Crop Ordered in Cuba.

MADRID, Aug. 28.—According to dispatches from Havana, Weyler, in an interview, has confirmed the report that he intends to issue a decree ordering the suspension of the gathering of the coffee crop. He explained that a large quantity of arms and amunition were landed in Cuba last week, and asserted that this could not have been done without money and says: "As we cannot punish the authors, as in the case of the Competitor, we must deprive the rebels of subsidies from the planters."

ADVANCE ON DONGOLA.

Reports from the Soudan Announce the Forward Movement.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Advices received from Koseh indicate that the advance of the British troops upon Dongola has commenced. The entire garrison at Saurdeh has advanced and occupied Absarat, while a large convoy has started for that place by the desert route.

POWDER MILLS BLOW UP.

Several Killed at Goes Station in Ohio.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, August 27.—The powder mills at Goes station, on the Pennsylvania railroad, blew up with a terrific shock. The report was heard distinctly here and smoke could be seen thirty-five miles away. Several men are reported killed.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, August 31.—C. Diddy and D. N. Kratzer, of Des Moines, have been granted a copyright for an artistic engraving adapted for use as a campaign badge. The title is "Silver Write." W. A. Michels, of Beaver, Iowa, has been allowed a patent for a wagon rack adapted for carrying hogs and other animals advantageously. H. L. Fisher and J. McKercher, of Des Moines, have been allowed a patent for a portable fire extinguisher in which an acid and alkali are held in solution separately so they can be instantly mixed to produce a gas that can be readily directed therefrom in a steady flow and with force as required to extinguish a fire. A patent was issued last week to John Miller, of Stuart, Iowa, for a composition and process for hardening copper. It seems to be the recovery of a lost art. He has edge tools made of copper that warrant the prediction that hardened copper will supercede the use of steel for many purposes. One of the directors of the largest company in England manufacturing alloys is testing the invention with a view of controling it in England and other foreign countries that grant patents.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicine referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup, Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by J. L. HARR.

CHAPTER XXIII.

FAR into the night Margie sat reading the closely written sheets, penned by the hand now pulseless in death. All was made clear: Archer Trevlyn was fully exculpated. He was innocent of the crime which she had been influenced to believe he had committed. She fell on her knees and thanked God for that. Though lost to her it was a consolation ineffable to know that he had not taken the life of a fellow-mortal.

Her resolution was taken before morning. She had deeply wronged Archer Trevlyn, and she must go to him with a full confession, confess her fault, and plead for his forgiveness.

Castrani, who came in the morning, approved her decision, and Nurse Day, who was told the whole story, and listened with moist eyes, agreed with them both. So it happened that on the ensuing morning Margie bade farewell to the quiet home which had sheltered her through her bitterest sorrow, and accompanied by Castrani set forth for New York.

She went to her own home first. Her aunt was in the country, but the servants gave her a warm welcome, and after resting for an hour, she took her way to the residence of Archer Trevlyn, but a few squares distant.

A strange silence seemed to hang over the palatial mansion. The blinds were closed—there was no sign of life about the premises. A thrill of unexplained dread ran through her frame as she touched the silver-handled bell. The servant who answered her summons seemed to partake of the strange, solemn quiet pervading everything.

"Is Mr. Trevlyn in?" she asked, trembling in spite of herself.

"Left the country? When did he go?"

"Some days ago."

Margie leaned against the carved marble vase which flanked the massive doorway, unconsciously crushing the crimson petals of the trumpet flower which grew therein. What should she do? She would write to him. His wife would know his address. She caught at the idea.

"Mrs. Trevlyn—take me to her! She was an old friend of mine."

The man looked at her curiously, hesitated a moment, and motioning her to enter, indicated the closed door of the parlor.

"You can go in, I presume, as you are a friend of the family."

A feeling of solemnity, which was almost awe, stole over Margie as she turned the handle of the door and stepped inside the parlor. It was shrouded in the gloom of almost utter darkness.

Margie stopped by the door until her eyes became accustomed to the gloom, and then she saw that the center of the room was occupied by a table, on which lay some rigid object—strangely long and still and angular—covered with a drapery of black velvet, looped up by dying water lilies.

Still controlled by that feeling of strange awe, Margie stole along to the table and lifted the massive cover. She saw beneath it the pale, dead face of Alexandrine Trevlyn. She dropped the pall, uttered a cry of horror, and sank upon a chair. The door unclosed noiselessly, and Mrs. Lee, the mother of the dead woman, came in.

"Oh, Margie! Margie!" she cried, "pity me! My heart is broken! My darling! My only child is taken from me!"

It was long before she grew composed enough to give any explanation of the tragedy—for tragedy Margie felt sure it was.

The story can be told in a few brief words. Alexandrine and her husband had had some difficulty. Mrs. Lee could not tell in relation to what, but she knew that Alexandrine blamed herself for the part she had taken. Mr. Trevlyn left her in anger to go to Philadelphia on business. He was expected to be absent about four days. Meanwhile his wife suffered agonies of remorse, and counted the hours until his return should give her the privilege of throwing herself at his feet and begging his forgiveness.

But he did not return. A week, ten days passed, and still no tidings. Alexandrine was almost frantic. On the eleventh day came a telegraphic dispatch, brief and cruel as those heartless things invariably are, informing her that Mr. Trevlyn had closed his business in Philadelphia and was on the eve of leaving the country for an indefinite period. His destination was not mentioned, and his unhappy wife, feeling that if he left Philadelphia without her seeing him, all trace of him would be lost, hurried to the depot and set out for that city.

There had been an accident about half way between New York and Philadelphia and Alexandrine had been brought back to her splendid home—a corpse! That was all.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE summer days fled on and brought the autumn mellowness and splendor. Margie, outwardly calm and quiet, lived at Harrison Park with her staid maiden aunt.

A year passed away thus monotonously, then another, and no tidings ever came of Archer Trevlyn. Margie thought of him now as we think of one being dead, with tender regret, and love almost reverent. He was dead to her, she said, but it was no sin to cherish his memory.

In the third year Margie's aunt married. It was quite a little romance. An old lover, discarded years before in a fit of girlish obstinacy, came back, after weary wanderings in search of happiness, and seeking out the love of other days, wooed and won her over again.

There was a quiet wedding, and then the happy pair decided on a trip to Europe. And, of course, Margie must accompany them. At first she demurred; she took so little pleasure in anything, she feared her presence might mar their happiness, and she dreaded to leave the place where she had passed so many delightful hours with him. But her aunt and Doctor Elbert refused to give her up, and so, one beautiful September morning, they sailed for Liverpool in the good ship Colossus.

For many days the voyage was prosperous, but in mid-ocean they fell upon stormy weather and the ship was tossed about at the mercy of the winds and waters. It was a terrible storm, and great apprehensions were entertained that the vessel might founder, but she would doubtless have weathered the blast in safety if she had not sprung a leak.

The fearful intelligence was announced just at the closing in of a dark dismal night, and every heart sank and every face was shrouded in gloom. Only for a moment! The men sprang to the pumps and worked with a will—as men will work for their lives—but their efforts were vain. The water increased in the hold, and it soon became evident that the Colossus would hardly keep afloat until morning.

But just when they were most helpless, most despairing, the lights of a strange ship were seen. They succeeded in making their desperate condition known, and by day-dawn all were safe on board the steamer, for the stranger proved to be a steamer on her way to New York.

The decks were crowded; Doctor Elbert was looking after his wife, and Margie, clinging to a rope, stood frightened and alone. Some one came to her, said a few words which the tempest made inaudible, and carried her below. The light of the cabin lamps fell full on his face. She uttered a cry, for in that moment she recognized Archer Trevlyn.

"Margie Harrison!" he cried, his fingers closing tightly over hers. "Margie! Mine! Mine at last! The ocean has given you up to me!"

"Oh, Archer, where have you been? It has been so weary! And I have wanted to see you so much—that I might tell you how I had wronged you—that I might ask you to forgive me. Will you pardon me for believing that you could ever be guilty of that man's death? If you knew all—if you knew how artfully it was represented to me—what overwhelming proofs were presented, you would not wonder—"

"I do know all, Margie; Alexandrine told me. My poor wife! God rest her. She believed me guilty and yet her fatal love for me overlooked the crime. She deceived me in many things, but she is dead, and I will not be unforgiving. She poisoned my mind with suspicions of you and Louis Castrani, and I was fool enough to credit her insinuations. Margie, I want you to pardon me."

"I do, freely, Castrani is a noble soul. I love him as I would a brother."

"Continue to do so, Margie. He deserves it, I think. The night I left home Alexandrine revealed to me the cause of your sudden rejection of me. We quarreled terribly. I remember it with bitter remorse. We parted in anger, Margie, and she died without my forgiveness and blessing. It was very hard, but perhaps at the last she did not suffer. I will believe so."

"If she sinned it was through love of you, Archer, and that should make you very forgiving toward her."

"I have forgiven her long ago. I know the proofs were strong against me. I am not sure but that they were sufficient to have convicted me of murder in a court of law. You were conscious of my presence that night in the graveyard, Margie?"

"Yes. I thought it was you. I knew no other man's presence had the power to thrill and impress me as yours did."

"I meant to impress you, Margie. I brought all the strength of my will to bear on that object. I said to myself, she shall know that I am near her, and yet my visible presence shall not be revealed to her. I had found out which was your window from one of the servants, and I watched its light which burned through the dusky twilight like the evening star. I wonder if you had a thought for me that night, Margie—your wedding night?"

"I did think of you—" she blushed, and hid her face on his shoulder—"I did think of you. I longed inexpressibly to fly to your side and be forever at rest."

"My darling!" he kissed her fondly, and went on: "I saw you leave your room by the window and come down the garden path. I had felt that you would come. I was not surprised that you did. I had expected it. I followed you silently, saw you kneel by the grave of your parents, heard you call out upon your father for pity. O, how I loved and pitied you, Margie—but my tongue was tied—I had no right to speak—but I did kiss your hand. Did you know it, Margie?"

"Yes."

"You recognized me then? I meant you should. After that I hurried away. I was afraid to trust myself near you longer, lest I might be tempted to what I might repent. I fled away from the place and knew nothing of the fearful deed done there until the papers announced it next day."

"And I suspected you of the crime! O, Archer! Archer! how could I ever have been so blind? How can you ever forgive me?"

"I want forgiveness, Margie. I doubted you. I thought you were false to me, and had fled with Castrani. That unfortunate glove confirmed you, I suppose. I dropped it in my haste to escape without your observation, and afterward I expected to hear of it in connection with the finding of Linnere's body. I never knew what became of it until my wife displayed it, that day when she taunted me with my crime. Poor Alexandrine! She had the misfortune to love me, and after your renunciation, and your departure from New York—in those days when I deemed you false and fair—I offered her my hand. I thought perhaps she might be happier as my wife, and I felt that I owed her something for her devoted love. I tried to do my duty by her, but a man never can do that by his wife, unless he loves her."

"You acted for what you thought was best, Archer."

"I did. Heaven knows I did. She died in coming to me to ask my forgiveness for the taunting words she had spoken at our last parting. I was cruel. I went away from her in pride and anger, and left behind me no means by which she could communicate with me. I deserved to suffer, and I have."

"And I also, Archer."

"My poor Margie! Do you know, dear, that it was the knowledge that you wanted me which was sending me home again? A month ago I saw Louis Castrani in Paris. He told me everything. He was delicate enough about it, darling; you need not blush for fear he might have told me you were grieving for me; but he made me understand that my future might not be so dark as I had begun to regard it. He read to me the dying confession of Arabel Vere, and made clear many things regarding which I had previously been in the dark. Is all peace between us, Margie?"

"All is peace, Archer. And God is very good."

"He is. I thank Him for it. And now I want to ask one thing more. I am not quite satisfied."

"Well?"

"Perhaps you will think it ill-timed—now that we are surrounded by strangers, and our very lives perhaps in peril—but I cannot wait. I have spent precious moments enough in waiting. It has been very long, Margie, since I heard you say you loved me, and I want to hear the words again."

She looked up at him shyly.

"Archer, how do I know but you have changed?"

"You know I have not. I have loved but one woman—I shall love no other through time and eternity. And now, at last, after all the distress and the sorrow we have passed through, will you give me your promise to meet whatever else fortune and fate may have in store for us, by my side?"

She put her face up to his, and he kissed her lips.

"Yours always, Archer. I have never had one thought for any other."

So a second time were Archer Trevlyn and Margie Harrison betrothed.

On the ensuing day the storm abated, and the steamer made a swift passage to New York.

Doctor and Mrs. Elbert were a little disappointed at the sudden termination of their bridal tour, but consoled themselves with the thought that they could try it over again in the spring.

Trevlyn remained in the city to adjust some business affairs which had suffered from his long absence, and Margie and her friends went up to her old home. He was to follow them thither on the ensuing day.

And so it happened that once more Margie sat in her old familiar chamber dressing for the coming of Archer Trevlyn. What should she put on? She remembered the rose-colored dress she had laid away that dreadful night so long ago. But now the rose colored dreams had come back, why not wear the rose-colored dress?

To the unbounded horror of Florine, she arrayed herself in the old-fashioned dress, and waited for her lover. And she had not long to wait. She heard his well-remembered step in the hall, and a moment after she was folded in his arms.

CHAPTER XXV.

AT CHRISTMAS there was a bridal at Harrison Park. The day was clear and cloudless—the air almost as balmy as the air of spring. Such a Christmas had not been known for years.

The sun shone brightly, and soft winds sighed through the leafless trees. And Margie was married and not a cloud came between her and the sun.

Peace and content dwelt with Archer Trevlyn and his wife in their beautiful home. Having suffered, they knew better how to be grateful for, and to appreciate the blessings at last bestowed upon them.

At their happy fireside there comes to sit sometimes, of an evening, a quiet, grave-faced man. A man who Archer Trevlyn and his wife love as a dear brother, and prize above all other earthly friends. And beside Louis Castrani, Leo sits, serene and contemplative, enjoying a green old age in peace and plenty. Castrani will never marry, but sometime in the hereafter, I think he will have his recompense.

(THE END.)

A DANGEROUS BIRD.

What Will Happen Some Day to an Incautious Hunter of Blue Herons.

"Some of these days," said the 'longshore hunter, "I expect to open my daily paper and see a headline something like this: 'Killed by a blue heron,' and I'll tell you why. The blue heron is a big, powerful bird which has already disfigured the faces of several men. The men have wounded a bird and then thinking to capture it alive they went up to it. Why I'd as soon try to kiss a wounded grizzly. The birds grow as tall as six feet and have necks like a fish rod and just the kind of muscles to move it the quickest with the most strength. They could drive their bill points through a quarter-inch panel.

"The hunter goes up to the bird and sees it lying there looking as innocent as a robin, with only a broken wing. 'What a fine pet it would make,' the fool hunter thinks. Then he picks the bird up and starts for home in a wagon or a boat, with the bird between his knees. The bird's neck is drawn back like a letter 'S.' All of a sudden the bill shoots up and gives the man a gash alongside the eye three inches long. That is what always has happened. The wounded bird has missed its aim, but sometimes, and you want to remember it, this feathered spearman will drive its bill far into its enemy's eye, and like a steel umbrella stick the point of the bill will penetrate the man's brain. I guess the bird's aim has always been spoiled by the pain of its wounds, and so many a human life has been saved. I don't monkey with wounded bitterns, or cranes—well, scarcely."

The Earth's Swift Motion.

Everybody knows that the earth makes one complete revolution on its axis once in each twenty-four hours. But few, however, have any idea of the high rate of speed at which such an immense ball must turn in order to accomplish the feat of making one revolution in a day and a night. A graphic idea of the terrific pace which the old earth keeps up year after year may be had by comparing its speed to that of a cannon ball fired from a modern high-pressure gun. The highest velocity ever attained by such a missile has been estimated at 1626 feet per second, which is equal to a mile in 3 1-5 seconds. The earth, in making one complete revolution in the short space of twenty-four hours, must turn with a velocity almost exactly equal to that of the cannon ball. In short, its rate of speed at the equator is exactly 1507 feet per second. This is equal to 17 miles a minute.

People with bicycles and people without bicycles are so sorry for each other.

Colonies and No Colonists.

What the French colonies covet above all things are colonists. The need is for more men. But in colonizing, as in all other things, the factor of competition appears. Only a definite number of colonists leave Europe every year and for them the colonies of the world informally compete, offering this or that advantage to the intending settler. But one of the first things the colonist wants to know is whether living will be fairly cheap in the place of which he is thinking. "Can I get the things I want to build my house and work my farm reasonably cheap, and will the comforts I shall want for myself and my family be procurable at moderate prices?"

These are the sort of questions that occur to the "balancing" colonist. But as regards the French colonies a close investigation can prove only one thing—namely, that settlers in them are handicapped by high tariffs and the dear prices that follow high tariffs. Hence the French colonies find it extremely difficult to attract colonists. Italians, Germans and Englishmen who are going to leave Europe find the French colonies too dear, and even the few Englishmen who voluntarily "exile themselves" prefer places where they will not be pursued by the general tariff. The result is that the French colonies are without colonists.—Spectator.

How Two Candidates Were Utilized by a Farmer's Wife.

"If it is not too early I would like to tell you a campaign story," remarked the chief of one of the bureaus of a downtown department. "One of the actors in it is to-day very frequently spoken of as a possible candidate before the Chicago convention, though he is by no means the most prominent, and the other, by a peculiar combination of events, had been spoken of in connection with the nomination as governor of his state.

"The scene was in a Western state, though neither of the gentlemen resides in that state now. Both were candidates for a small country office, and both then, as they are now, were hustlers for anything they were after. They were making a house-to-house canvass, which was necessary at that time, owing to the sparse population, and while they endeavored to work in different sections, they frequently found themselves in the same neighborhood at the same time. The occurrence which I refer to was at a farm about a mile distant from the village where both candidates were to speak the following day. The candidates kept their eyes pretty well on each other during the early part of the day, but during the afternoon they started out to do some missionary work at farmhouses. By a singular circumstance they landed at the same farm, though one did not know the other was there until later on.

"The man first referred to, finding that the owner of the farm was absent, devoted himself to the wife, and, of course, said all kinds of nice things to her, making special inquiry after the children, whether they had caught the measles, which prevailed at the time, etc. The lady seemed charmed with the attention shown her, but said she would have to be excused, as she had to milk the cow. The candidate kindly offered to assist in that performance, saying that, though he could not milk, he could keep the flies off the cow, or at least hold her tail.

"While engaged in holding the cow's tail he ventured to ask if his competitor for the office had been around yet. 'Oh, yes,' answered the wife, 'he is here now. He is in the back barn and is holding the calf, for this cow will not give down her milk if the calf is in sight.'"—Baltimore Herald.

The Vastness of Siberia.

A graphic idea of the immense size of Siberia may be gleaned from the following comparison: All of the states, kingdoms, principalities, empires, etc., of Europe (except Russia), and all of the United States, including Alaska, could be placed side by side in Siberia and yet but little more than cover that immense country.

No Cows.

"I wish I knew of a summer boarding place where there are no cows; I would engage board there to-morrow."

"Try our milkman; he's going to take boarders."—Detroit Free Press.

Dishonored Drafts.

When the stomach dishonors the draft made upon it by the rest of the system, it is necessarily because its fund of strength is very low. Toned with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters it soon begins to pay out vigor in the shape of pure, rich blood, containing the elements of muscle, bone and brain. As a sequence of the new vigor afforded the stomach, the bowels perform their functions regularly and the liver works like clockwork. Malaria has no effect upon a system thus reinforced.

Sizing Him Up.

"This feller Li is a sheriff, aint he?" asked the senator from Billville.

"This who?"

"This feller, Li."

"I don't understand you."

"Why, you fool, don't you see the newspapers say 'Li Hung Chang?'"

Modest Comparison.

"Tommy, how are you getting along in your spelling?"

"Oh, 'bout as good as George Washington."

The astounding assertion is made that there is more gold in the sacred vessels, medals, chains, etc., preserved at the Vatican, than in the circulation of the whole of Europe.

Since 1851, it is estimated 48,219 men have been killed by mining accidents in Great Britian.

A Matrimonial Comedy in Three Acts—Affection Delicately Expressed—A Cool Spot—Mental Strength—In the Museum—He Liked Jam and Cake.

HE SAID he was a nobleman—a rich man's child was she.
They loved each other madly, as madly as could be.
Two souls with but a single thought expressed the matter pat—
She thought he had a title and she loved him so for that.
He knew she had the plunkets—I'm not cynical, you know—
But I fancy that's the reason that he loved the maiden so.
A week of wedded bliss was theirs, when the parental gent
Assigned and shuffled off this coil and left her not a cent—
And incompatibility of temper was the plea
That caused the learned judge to grant the usual decree.
So then she went upon the stage and made a great success.
And he is doing every one that he can do—I guess.

Legend of the Magpie.

One day as a Magpie had taken a seat on a limb of a tree near the highway, two travelers came along and halted under the tree to rest. They soon observed the bird, and never having seen one of its species before, one of them called out:

"Behold the eagle! What a noble bird!"

"How beautiful! how grand!" added the other.

Filled with conceit, the Magpie began to chatter her satisfaction at these words, but she had scarcely opened her month when one of the travelers exclaimed:

"What fools we are! I know from what I have read that this bird is only a common Magpie."

"And let her begone!" added his friend, as he picked up a stone and sent it whizzing at her head.

"I don't think very much of him," said the girl in blue.

"Why, I thought I saw him throwing kisses to you on the beach," expostulated the girl in white.

"You did," answered the girl in blue. "That is why I say I don't think very much of him. He isn't as strong mentally as I should like a man to be."

"I don't believe I quite follow you."

"Why, think of the absurdity and the waste of throwing from a distance what ought to have been delivered in person?"

"Where is he?"

SOMETHING TO KNOW.

It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegetable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centres in the stomach, gently stimulates the liver and kidneys, and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood. Electric Bitters improves the appetite, aids digestion and is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very best blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

Although truth is mighty and all of that, it cannot travel half as fast as error.

The world is too apt to inquire whether a man's faults ought not to be charged to his wife.

Things that are simply sharp when practiced by our friends become knavish when adopted by an opponent.

The man who can utter a sentence that people will remember is greater than he who can only deliver an oration.

Numerous football teams are already going into training and barbers are laying away their scissors in tissue paper and sachets.

A brass band tournament was given at Oconomowoc, Wis., the other day, and one of the audience went home at its conclusion and shot himself. No wonder.

A California man named George W. Teasdale has made a remarkable bequest in his will. He leaves $1,000 to be deposited in a bank, the interest of which shall be spent yearly for candy for school children, in return for which he requests his little beneficiaries to see to it that his grave shall never be disturbed.

If the story be true that Gen. Weyler forced a young Spanish lieutenant to commit suicide because he was suspected of treachery it is not the first time this has occurred. It was said in Germany some years ago that one of the emperor's most celebrated generals instructed his son to kill himself because he had contracted gambling debts that he could not pay.

James Montgomery Ward, formerly the idolized shortstop of the Giants (so-called before they became pigmies) is out with another admirable letter on the base ball situation, and the best means of preventing the noble game from being wholly given over to rowdyism of the worst sort. He now proposes to abolish all coaching, thus removing this most objectionable element, and making the base-runner dependent more upon his own cleverness in stealing bases.

The Cusab brothers, aeronauts of Walkerton, Ind., are constructing an airship. The ship consists of a cigar-shaped balloon with a car underneath. The balloon will be fifteen feet long and four feet in diameter. It will be made of oiled silk. The car will be five feet long. A battery for the manufacture of gas will be placed in the car, which will supply the ship with a continuous stream of gas. There will be one propeller at the rear of the ship and two in front. The airship is being built for public tests, and if it proves satisfactory the Cusab brothers are confident they can solve the problem of aerial navigation.

Perhaps the heartlessness of the rich was never illustrated more graphically than by the proceedings at Newport. There a young lady was wedded amid four bushels of diamonds, ten bushels of pearls and three pecks of rubies by actual measurement, while somewhere in the cold and bleak outside lingered that young lady's own brother and his beautiful bride with only one peck of jewels between them—one poor little scrap of a peck into which their bitter young tears fell with dismal, agonizing plashes. Did that bride, as she poured her precious stones into two washtubs, reflect upon the wretched lot of her brother, with a mere overcoat pocket full of gems to his name? Was she secretly sad as she shook a couple of million dollars' worth of diamonds out of her hair, on his account? Alas, we fear not.

A correspondent of an eastern paper gives in brief the reasons why the Cubans fight—taxes, debt, discrimination against them in trade, oppression, disfranchisement. Of the twenty-six millions paid in taxes, barely 2 per cent goes to the island itself. The Cuban pays twice what a Spaniard pays in Europe and gets absolutely nothing in return. A debt of four hundred millions is laid on the people of Cuba, the heaviest tax by nearly twofold of any country in the world. And meanwhile 'the ports are practically closed to foreign commerce.' Shipments, even of American flour, go first to Spain and afterwards to Cuba. All this cost is added to the goods the Cuban buys. It is shown, further, that by the election laws only about three in a hundred of the Cubans have a vote. Scarcely one has ever sat in the Spanish Cortes. All the offices are held by Spaniards, and the corruption among officials is almost beyond belief. Even the reforms sometimes reluctantly granted by the Cortes are not carried out. Campos himself did not dare guarantee their enforcement."

HELD THE TOWN AT BAY.

J. B. McVay, of Leon, Drew a Gun and Refused to Submit to Arrest.

LEON, Sept. 6.—J. H. McVay, who has been county attorney for four years, got into trouble over a political argument, and it is alleged struck Phil Deck, with whom he was arguing, and for which he was arrested by Marshal Carmena, who started with him for the mayor's office. When he reached the foot of the stairs leading to the mayor's office he refused to go any farther, declaring he would kill any man who laid hands on him, and at the same time stepping back and pulling his gun on the crowd of some fifty people who had gathered around. After holding the crowd at bay for some time he started off down the principal street of the town, which was at that time crowded, firing off his gun as he went. He then went to his home, where it is presumed he reloaded his gun, went to the livery barn and had his horse hitched up and took his wife out driving. New warrants were sworn out and placed in the hands of officers, but it is presumed they are not very anxious to serve them, as Sheriff Beck, Deputy Brown, Marshal Carmena and Constable Kline were in the crowd he held at bay. He has not yet been arrested.

DAMAGES WANTED.

For the Killing of a Little Girl by a Railroad Train.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Sept. 6.—A. H. Turner, administrator of the estate of Leona Turner, has brought suit in the superior court to recover $2,000 damages, claimed to be due on account of the killing of Leona Turner, a child of 9 years, whose name was in Watkins, west of Cedar Rapids. The petition alleges that about a year ago Leona was on the railroad track through no fault of her own, and that a Northwestern train came along at a high rate of speed, but failed to make any effort to stop in order to save the child. It is alleged that when she saw the train coming she became frantic with fear, and losing her presence of mind, failed to get off the track. It is claimed that there was plenty of time for the train to have stopped, but the trainmen made no effort in that direction.

HELP FOR GLENWOOD.

Asylum for Feeble Minded Will Be Allowed to Expend $25,000 at Once.

DES MOINES, Sept. 4.—The trustees of the institution for the care of feeble minded children, at Glenwood, had an audience before the executive council. The institution had one of its large buildings badly damaged by fire a few days ago, and the problem of caring for the inmates, even temporarily, has been serious. The trustees asked the council for authority to repair the damage, and it was granted. The terms are that $25,000 may be expended, with which the trustees believe they can put the building in fair condition.

SUICIDE AT INDEPENDENCE.

A Furniture Dealer of Livermore Ends His Troubles.

INDEPENDENCE, Sept. 5.—John Lane, a furniture dealer of Livermore, hung himself at the home of his mother, one mile north of Independence. Lane formerly lived in Independence and belonged to a wealthy family. He has recently met financial reverses. He came to town to raise funds, but failed. He left the house angered, and returned in the night and hung himself in a scale house. He leaves a wife and four children at Livermore. He was 40 years of age. This makes four attempts at suicide in as many weeks.

Robbers at Geneva.

GENEVA, Sept. 7.—A masked robber made an unsuccessful attempt to sandbag and rob Deputy Postmaster Rogers near the postoffice. The blow was no effective and the robber was frightened away by Rogers' cries for help. Rogers had about $200 in stamps and currency on his person.

Brakeman Killed.

ANAMOSA, Sept. 5.—Wm. Wilds, a young man of this place and a brakeman on the Milwaukee road, was killed at Marion. He apparently walked off the top of a box car. Both arms were cut off and his chest crushed in.

Not a Failure After All.

DUBUQUE, Sept. 4.—The Walker & Rhomberg failure, it is claimed by the firm, is not a failure. They have secured all creditors except the Sioux City judgment, and that will be eventually satisfied.

Bremerman Gives Bond.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Sebt. 4.—Postmaster Bremerman, of Boone, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Wright. He waived examination, and was bound over under $500.

R. G. Phelps Recovering.

ATLANTIC, Sept. 4.—The condition of R. G. Phelps, who was stricken with paralysis, is much improved. He will recover, but with partial paralysis.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

One Iowan Killed and Two Badly Injured.

WHITING, Sept. 3.—George Clark, Charles Dividen and Robert McAllister were struck by the south bound passenger train. Clark was instantly killed and Dividen and McAllister badly injured. The train was passing through at a very high rate of speed, and as it got to the main crossing it struck the men, who were in a buggy, driving home. Dividen had his collar bone broken and received a scalp wound. McAllister has not regained consciousness, and it is believed he is badly hurt internally. Clark was picked up seventy-five feet from the crossing. Clark had paid his insurance in the Modern Woodmen about five minutes before he was killed.

NECK BROKEN AND ALIVE.

Wonderful Case of Matnes Johnson, a Hostler, at Burlington.

BURLINGTON, Sept. 6.—Matnes Johnson, a hostler in a private livery stable, was found at the bottom of a ladder leading into the loft with his neck broken. The doctors were astonished to find he was still alive, and after working with him awhile he regained consciousness and conversed freely. He says he started up the ladder and had just reached the loft above when someone seized him by the shoulders and hurled him back to the floor below. His neck is completely broken and his entire body paralyzed, but his mind is clear. The doctors say it is a most wonderful case and that he will certainly die.

RIOT IN CEDAR RAPIDS.

Citizens Attack a Paving Gang and Bricks Are Thrown Promiscuously.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Sept. 6.—What came very near being a revolt took place bemen working on the paving and citizens. A dispute arose between tween some of Likes' men and a local groceryman, which led to the indiscriminate throwing of bricks. Several were severely hurt before the police arrived. The people in that part of town are very bitter against paving, as they have been led to believe that poor brick was being used, while good brick was being laid where the wealthier classes live.

Bank Robbers at Russell.

OTTUMWA, Sept. 7.—An attempt was made to rob the Bank of Russell. The robbers ruined the safe with an explosion of dynamite and the currency was made easily accessible, but the explosion alarmed the night watchman, whose approach frightened the robbers away.

BREVITIES.

Sac county wouldn't grant permission for saloons to be established.

It is announced that a disease closely resembling and supposed to be Texas fever is rapidly killing cattle at Wilton Junction, twelve miles north of Muscatine. It is confined to a region near the stock yards. A rigid quarantine has been established.

A gang of some fifteen tramps, just west of Denison, on the Northwestern railroad, recently got into a quarrel over a keg of beer and a man who gave his name as Joe Wilson was shot through the hips. Most of the gang were arrested. The guilty man escaped. Wilson will probably die.

The district court of Jackson county has convened, Hon. C. M. Waterman, of Davenport, presiding for the hearing of the well known Watson case. This is a suit by the alleged illegitimate son of Mott Watson to obtain the entire estate of three hundred thousand dollars. It is thought that the trial will last fully three or four weeks.

A Davenport dispatch says: Conrad Mann, a laborer in the employ of Detief Brammer, of McCausland, is under arrest, charged with criminally assaulting Brammer's two daughters, aged 13 and 15 years respectively. The father charges Mann with having repeatedly committed the assaults and Mann does not deny the charges, but says that the girls are to blame, having visited his room at night and awakened him. The elder girl is in a delicate condition. Mann was bound over to the grand jury in $500 bail.

Sioux City dispatch: Mrs. Speckhart was cooking on a gasoline stove. She was singing gaily, and talking with her husband and brother and their friend, who were in the dining room adjoining. The gasoline in the stove was about to burn out, and she brought in the can from the woodshed. As she was about to pour the oil into the tank the fire went out. She poured some of the oil into the hot generating cup, and the flames shot up. She grasped the cup and started for the outside door, when her dress ignited. She gave a piercing scream, and her husband ran from the dining room through the kitchen and out of doors to her assistance. When he threw his arms around her he was badly burned. She died a few hours later

CHINA TO BOOM.

Will Be Thrown Open to Trade With the World.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 6.—Reports are in circulation in circles of the highest authority to the effect that the interior of China will soon be thrown open to free trade with the rest of the world. When Li Hung Chang was in England, one of his staff said that the main object of his tour was to sound the European governments regarding an increase in China's tariff. He added that it is understood that Russia, Germany and France were favorable to an increase, but the British premier brought forward several important counter propositions, and it is now certain that China is inclined to concede these conditions; that as a preliminary the tariff be increased and all transit dues in the interior of China be abolished, and later free trade established throughout the empire. The preliminary increase in the tariff is made necessary in order to secure necessary loans. It is expected that if Great Britain advances the money China will place orders for a large number of warships with the British ship yards and that British officers instead of German will be detailed to reorganize the Chinese army. This, of course, is decidedly the English view of the case. It is also understood that China has practically decided to extend her railroads, and a foreign commission will be entrusted with the task.

ANXIETY IN TURKEY.

No Further Disturbance, But There May Be.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 7.—Great anxiety still prevails here, but there has been no further disturbance. The ambassadors have sent a collective note to the British government, dwelling upon the organized character of the massacre and citing several cases bearing this out. They quote the declaration of two Musselmans, who assert that they were requisitioned by the police, who provided them with weapons and sent them to kill the Armenians. Other and similar evidence was also presented, and the ambassadors finally demanded a strict inquiry into the causes of the outbreak and that steps be taken to suppress it and insist upon the severe punishment of the culprits.

LI HUNG CHANG.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Li Hung Chang visited Grant's tomb, on which he laid a wreath of flowers, winding up the day by a visit to the house of Col. Fred D. Grant, where he had tea and remained for an hour.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 4.—Imposing civic and military honors were showered upon Li Hung Chang upon his arrival here. The viceroy comes primarily as the guest of ex-Minister to China John Russell Young, but the city shared in the reception.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—Upon his arrival in this city, Li Hung Chang visited the capitol, where he spent several hours. He was the guest of honor at a banquet given by ex-Secretary Foster.

INDEPENDENT ACTION.

British Ambassador to Turkey Will Not Consult Other Ambassadors.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—It is learned in the foreign office circle that Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador to Turkey, who has just started on his return to Constantinople, left England with instructions in dealing with the sultan to act independently of the other ambassadors to the porte if the occasion should require it. Sir Philip, according to this source of information, is also to have free command of British naval aid to enforce such demands as he may make. The sultan will be at once notified of the change in England's policy in Turkey.

FRANCIS SWORN IN.

New Secretary of the Interior Takes the Oath.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4.—Ex-Govereor David R. Francis took the oath of office as secretary of the interior yesterday. The oath was administered by Associate Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court. Mr. Francis assumed his active duties this morning.

KRUPP WILL BUILD SHIPS.

Famous Gun Manufacturer of Esson Buys The Germania Plant.

BERLIN, Sept. 6.—Herr Krupp, the iron king of Esson, has purchased the Germania shipbuilding works for 6,325,000 marks. The entire plant will be transferred to Herr Krupp Oct. 1, and the capacity for building ships will be increased considerably.

Crete Accepts the Reform Plan.

CANEA, Crete, Sept. 6.—The assembly, after consulting with the revolutionary committee, has accepted the reform plans drawn up by the powers and approved by the sultan of Turkey.

HAMMOND INTERVIEWED.

Johannesburg Committee's Lips Were Tightly Sealed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—In an interview John Hays Hammond, the American engineer concerned in the recent troubles in the Transvaal, said that he and other members of the Johannesburg committee had their lips sealed because they did not want to prejudice Dr. Jameson's case. Now that he has been convicted, however, Hammond declares it will be conclusively shown during the coming parliamentary investigation that it is not true that the Johannesburg committee deserted Jameson, but that he came in spite of express orders to the contrary. Hammond declares he not only telegraphed Jameson not to come, but sent two of his own officers, telling him on no account to start. Hammond did not attempt to disguise the fact that the committee intended to establish an independent republic, but declared it was not then. He thinks the time has now arrived for Jameson to speak out and exonerate the committee.

HANNA'S OPINION.

Nomination of Palmer and Buckner Pleases Hanna.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 5.—National republican Chairman Hanna said concerning the result of the Indianapolis convention: "I think the action of the convention will be of assistance to us. Palmer is a strong, reliable man man and has a heavy following among the democrats of Illinois. His nomination following that of a gold standard democrat for governor of that state will weaken the other democrats of Illinois very materially. The nomination of Buckner will also do us good. He is strong in Kentucky and throughout the south, and will help us very much."

CHOLERA SCOURGE IN CAIRO.

Sixty-One New Cases and Fifty-Four Deaths in Three Days.

CAIRO, Sept. 6.—After weeks of practical freedom from cholera in Cairo, fifty-four deaths have occurred during three days, out of sixty-one cases. The sanitary authorities are greatly alarmed at this sudden outbreak, particularly as cases are widely scattered along the Khaleag Canal, traversing the city. All the British medical officers attached to the sanitary department have been summoned here.

TWO JUDGES NAMED.

Vacant Federal Benches in North and South Dakota Filled.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The president has appointed Charles F. Amiden of North Dakota to be United States district judge for the district of North Dakota, and John E. Carland of South Dakota to be United States district judge for the district of South Dakota.

All the Passengers Saved.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The steamer Rosedale, with 150 passengers on board, was struck off Broome street, East river, by a Twenty-third street ferry boat, and sank in about five minutes. The Rosedale was on her way from Bridgeport at the time. All the passengers, it is said, were picked up by passing craft. They saved none of the effects, however.

Four Killed.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Sept. 7.—A special from Middlesboro states that a bloody battle occurred in the northern portion of Bell county, Kentucky, between moonshiners over the division of money made by selling liquor. Three men and a boy are reported killed.

Investigation On.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 5.—The special tribunal for the trial of the authors of the recent outrage, resulting in the killing of several thousand Armenians, has opened. Indictments against 142 Mussulmans and Armenians were handed in by the public prosecutor.

TERSE NEWS.

Washington dispatch: Ten thousand employes under the war department have been classified under the civil service in accordance with the sweeping order of the president of May 6 last, which extended the operations of the law to practically all government employes except those laborers whose work did not require any great amount of technical skill or intelligence above an ordinary degree.

Wichita, Kan., dispatch: Joseph H. C. Swan, "the sage of the Whitewater," widely known for his correct forecast of the St. Louis cyclone and other meteorological phenomena, makes the following prediction: "The winter of 1896-97 will be very long and cold, with much snow in all localities where snow is a factor. Blizzards will be numerous, highways and railways will be blockaded, all to be followed by much rainfall and high water most of the year. Do not be in haste to get in spring crops. Plant large and late varieties of corn. Wet weather will be your trouble. Provide good shelter for self and stock and do not forget the suffering, hungry and poor of our land."

THE ARTIST'S STORY.

TELL you, ladies," declared handsome and cynical Wilton Robeley, the artist, "a fortune teller showed me the image of my wife two years before I ever saw her in the flesh and thousands of miles from the place I first met her."

"You are the last man in the world whose mind I would think obscured by the clouds of mysticism," replied the rich Mrs. Austyn, his friend and patron. "You have never shown any patience with the charlatans who pretended to expose and expound the secrets that a wise Providence has ordained we should not fathom. And yet you are taxing our credulity with a statement that would be marvelous, if true."

"I must insist upon my veracity in this instance," smiled the artist.

"Now, don't stop to argue, mamma," urged the elder of the Austyn girls. 'There is a story in this, and after Mr. Robeley has told it you can reclaim him from the darkness of his superstitions and air your theories. Now do tell us all about it;" and three pretty sisters sighed their curiosity in chorus.

"Just so you don't ask me to explain," said the artist with a quizzical look. "I shall give you the remarkable facts and leave you to wrestle with them. Eight years ago I was in Paris, pursuing my studies, and lived the life of a Bohemian from choice rather than from necessity. We fellows held the responsibilities of life very lightly and laughed at all human phenomena that would not yield to the test of materialism. I was chief among the scoffers, and found bare-faced fraud in everything from clairvoyancy to the piercing of the future through the medium of tea grounds.

"Then as now I occasionally broke entirely away from my usual surroundings and was one day sauntering alone through Rue de Bouges. As I passed one of the most pretentious houses I was startled by a scream for help and dashed through the open doorway to find a woman battling with flames that with great leaps and flashes were consuming the white draperies of what struck me as a consecrated altar out of place. Our combined efforts soon mastered the incipient conflagration. As the woman anointed my hands with some soothing lotion I saw that she was as dark as a gypsy. Her hair rippled back from her forehead in waves of blue black, her eyes were brilliant in the same deep coloring, and her strong, even teeth suggested polished ivory. She was an amazon in size, yet the sweeping curves of beauty were such as to fascinate the artist while her motions were as supple and graceful as those of a tiger.

"'You are a gentleman, and there is but one way in which I can offer return for your services,' she said as I turned to leave. Her voice was soft as the notes of a lute and her accent gave unsuspected charms to my mother tongue. 'I was born of royal blood in India. Through study of the sacred Vedas and the pure doctrine of Karma I attained the power of divination. Your people would classify me among fortune tellers; but I am poles apart from the vulgar humbugs that trade upon ignorance and superstition. Promise you will come to-morrow, for I am upset by this accident. Then I will be both your historian and your prophet. I shall count on you, m'seur.'

"Though I mentally sneered at the woman's pretensions and lay awake half the night assuring myself that I would never seek her out, I was at her door ten minutes before the appointed time next day. She had either assumed her professional air or was under the spell of her supernatural attainments. I will not describe the 'Inner Temple of Mysteries' to which she conducted me, but in the weird effect of its hangings, mirrors, grotesque carvings and mythical symbols it challenged the most hardened skepticism. Throwing the white light of a golden lamp upon my face with a powerful reflector, she generalized upon my past life as any shrewd judge of human nature might do. Then suddenly knitting her brows and leaning closer she slowly spelled out 'Marcia Arnold.'

"'That is the name of the girl you will marry,' she announced in a dreamy voice, 'and there you see her.'

'With that the lights faded to the dimness of deep twlight, and there followed the darkness of a dungeon Opposite me as if in life was the image of the sweet and beautiful woman you know as Mrs. Robeley. Never before had I been dominated by the tender passion, but there I was fathoms deep in love with what might have been an enchanting illusion or a superb painting. So deeply was I impressed that after leaving in a bewilderment of doubt I sketched the magnificent creature so indelibly impressed upon my memory.

"Eighteen months later I was in southern California enjoying the medicinal virtues of the climate, and finding subjects in some of the delightful scenery. One morning I had my easel at the edge of a wooded precipice overlooking a charming spread of landscape. The velvet carpeting of grass and moss had failed to warn me of approaching footsteps, and when I turned it was the startled movement caused by a half-suppressed scream. There were two ladies, the elder anxiously supporting the younger, whose face was blanched and whose eyes were fastened upon me as though I were a terrifying apparition. It was the girl the Indian sorceress had shown me in Paris; but what did she know of me? As she sank down under the weight of her emotions I hastened to a nearby spring for water, and when I returned her eyes were upon me in that same fixed and troubled look.

"'What can be the matter, daughter? You have always been so strong and so vigorous.'

"'Is your name Henry Morton?' asked the younger of me, without heeding the mother's question.

"'It is Wilton Robeley,' I responded quietly. At that instant it flashed upon me that in a desire to conceal my identity I had given the name of Henry Morton to the fortune teller. Then with the inspiration of an anxious lover I added: 'But I have a cousin of that name who bears a striking resemblance to me.'

"My immediate reward was a revival of strength and spirits on the part of the young lady. The mother introduced herself as Mrs. Gilsen, her daughter as Miss Gilsen, and then said: 'Lucy, we had best get back to the hotel.'

"'Lucy Gilsen?' and yet it was her presence that had been conjured up as my bride to be. She was the girl of my sketch and my dreams. The next day I called at the hotel to inquire after her. I called often. We walked, drove, painted and boated together. I came to know through the intuition of love that she was not indifferent to me. One evening as we drifted lazily through the water lilies she handed me a sketch of myself and asked: 'Is that a picture of Henry Morton?'

"'It's perfect,' I answered though dumfounded. A shadow of anger crossed her face, and she was about to tear the picture to pieces when I caught her hands and suddenly showed the reproduction of herself that I had made in Paris. It was her turn to be surprised, and when I told her of my experience at the fortune teller's on Rue de Bouges, giving her the date, she quickly exclaimed:

"'Why, I was there with Marcia Arnold. Mamma and I did Europe that season, and we two girls visited that Indian princess just for a lark. That was where I saw Henry Morton, whom I was told fate had decreed as my future husband.'

"Before we rowed home it was all explained, and the sequel of our strange experience was a happy marriage. The dusky prophetess who had confused the name of the two girls was a cultivated fraud. It was all a trick of the mirrors, ladies."

A College Girl, Too.

She was a college girl of lofty ideas and superior attainments, such as college girls have in their early days. When she left her family to rest in the mountains for awhile, she said haughtily:

"No; I'll not take an evening gown. And please don't put any of that paper-covered literature into my trunk. I have some philosophy to read and I don't intend to mix with the hotel people. Nature, my work and serge frocks are enough for me."

Then she departed. At the end of four days her mother was startled by a telegram. It read:

"Send two party frocks, a hammock and some reliable face powder at once."

So easily are love of nature and love of labor overcome.—Exchange.

A Dissenter.

"The voice of the people," said the man who was aching to talk about the coming election, "the voice of the people is the voice of God."

"Rats!" said the man he had cornered.

"Beg pardon?"

"Rats, I said; r-a-t-s, rats. Just wait until you have been compelled to decide a home player out at third a few times and then you will know how much ice the voice of the people cuts. Yes."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"FULL CORN-CRIBS" LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Text: "And Juda Spoke Unto Him Saying, the Man Did Solemnly Protest Unto Us Ye Shall Not See My Face"—Gen., 43:3.

NOTHING to eat! Plenty of corn in Egypt, but ghastly famine in Canaan. The cattle moaning in the stall. Men, women and children awfully white with hunger. Not the failing of one crop for one summer, but the failing of all the crops for seven years. A nation dying for lack of that which is so common on your table, and so little appreciated; the product of harvest field and grist mill and oven; the price of sweat and anxiety and struggle—Bread! Jacob, the father, has the last report from the flour bin, and he finds that everything is out; and he says to his sons, "Boys! hook up the wagons and start for Egypt and get us something to eat." The fact was, there was a great corn crib in Egypt. The people of Egypt have been largely taxed in all ages, at the present time paying between seventy and eighty per cent of their products to the government. No wonder in that time they had a large corn crib, and it was full. To that crib they came from the regions around about—those who were famished—some paying for the corn in money; when the money was exhausted, paying for the corn in sheep and cattle and horses and camels; and when they were exhausted, then selling their own bodies and their families into slavery.

The morning for starting out on the crusade for bread has arrived. Jacob gets his family up very early. But before the elder sons start they say something that makes him tremble with emotion from head to foot, and burst into tears. The fact was that these elder sons had once before been in Egypt to get corn, and they had been treated somewhat roughly, the lord of the corn-crib supplying them with corn, but saying at the close of the interview, "Now, you need not come back here for any more corn unless you bring something better than money—even your younger brother Benjamin." Ah! Benjamin—that very name was suggestive of all tenderness. The mother had died at the birth of that son—a spirit coming and another spirit going—and the very thought of parting with Benjamin must have been a heart-break. The keeper of this corn-crib, nevertheless, says to these elder sons, "There is no need of your coming up here any more for corn unless you can bring Benjamin, your father's darling." Now Jacob and his family very much needed bread; but what a struggle it would be to give up this son. The Orientals are very demonstrative in their grief, and I hear the outwailing of the father as these elder sons keep reiterating in his ears the announcement of the Egyptian lord, "Ye shall not see my face unless your brother be with you." "Why did you tell him you had a brother?" says the old man, complaining and chiding them. "Why, father," they said, "he asked us all about our family, and we had no idea that he would make any such demand upon us as he has made." "No use of asking me," said the father, "I cannot, I will not, give up Benjamin." The fact was that the old man had lost children, and when there has been bereavement in a household, and a child taken, it makes the other children in the household more precious. So the day for departure was adjourned and adjourned and adjourned. Still the horrors of the famine increased, and louder moaned the cattle, and wider open cracked the earth, and more pallid became the cheeks, until Jacob, in despair, cried out to his sons, "Take Benjamin and be off." The elder sons tried to cheer up their father. They said, "We have strong arms and a stout heart, and no harm will come to Benjamin. We'll see that he gets back again." Farewell!" said the young men to the father, in a tone of assumed good cheer. "F-a-r-e-w-e-l-l!" said the old man; for that word has more quavers in it when pronounced by the aged than by the young.

Well, the bread party, the bread embassy, drives up in front of the corn-crib of Egypt. Those corn-cribs are filled with wheat and barley and corn in the husk, for modern travelers in those lands, both in Canaan and in Egypt, tell us there is corn there corresponding with our Indian maize. Huzza! the journey is ended. The lord of the corn-crib, who is also the Prime Minister, comes down to these newly-arrived travelers, and says, "Dine with me to-day. How is your father? Is this Benjamin, the younger brother, whose presence I demanded?" The travelers are introduced into the palace. They are worn and bedusted of the way; and servants come in with a basin of water in one hand and a towel in the other, and kneel down before these newly-arrived travelers, washing off the dust of the way. The butchers and poulterers and caterers of the Prime Minister prepare the repast. The guests are seated in small groups, two or three at a table, the food on a tray; all the luxuries from imperial gardens and orchards and aquariums and aviaries are brought there, and are filling chalice and platter. Now is the time for the Prime Minister, if he has a grudge against Benjamin, to show it. Will he kill him, now that he has him in his hands? O, no! This lord of the corn-crib is seated at his own table, and he looks over to the tables of his guests; and he sends a portion to each of them, but sends a larger portion to Benjamin, or, as the Bible quaintly puts it, "Benjamin's mess was five times as much as any of theirs." Be quick and send word back with the swiftest camel to Canaan to old Jacob, that "Benjamin is well; all is well; he is faring sumptuously; the Egyptian lord did not mean murder and death; but he meant deliverance and life when he announced to us on that day, 'Ye shall not see my face unless your brother be with you.'"

Well, my friends, this world is famine-struck of sin. It does not yield a single crop of solid satisfaction. It is dying. It is hunger-bitten. The fact that it does not, cannot feed a man's heart was well illustrated in the life of the English comedian. All the world honored him—did everything for him that the world could do. He was applauded in England and applauded in the United States. He roused up nations into laughter. He had no equal. And yet, although many people supposed him entirely happy, and that this world was completely satisfying his soul, he sits down and writes:

I never in my life put on a new hat that it did not rain and ruin it. I never went out in a shabby coat because it was raining and thought all who had the choice would keep indoors, that the sun did not come out in its strength and bring with it all the butterflies of fashion whom I knew and who knew me. I never consented to accept a part I hated out of kindness to another, that I did not get hissed by the public and cut by the writer. I could not take a drive for a few minutes with Terry without being overturned and having my elbow broken, though my friend got off unharmed. I could not make a covenant with Arnold, which I thought was to make my fortune, without making his instead, than in an incredibly short space of time—I think thirteen months—I earned for him twenty thousand pounds, and for myself one. I am persuaded that if I were to set up as a baker, everyone in my neighborhood would leave off eating bread.

I want to make three points. Every frank and common-sense man will acknowledge himself to be a sinner. What are you going to do with your sins? Have them pardoned, you say. How? Through the mercy of God. What do you mean by the mercy of God? Is it the letting down of a bar for the admission of all, without respect to character? Be not deceived. I see a soul coming up to the gate of mercy and knocking at the corn-crib of heavenly supply; and a voice from within says, "Are you alone?" The sinner replies, "All alone." The voice from within says, "You shall not see my pardoning face unless your divine Brother, the Lord Jesus, be with you." O, that is the point at which so many are discomfited. There is no mercy from God except through Jesus Christ. Coming with him, we are accepted. Coming without him, we are rejected.

Am I right in calling Jesus Benjamin? O, yes. Rachel lived only long enough to give a name to that child, and with a dying kiss she called him Benoni. Afterward Jacob changed his name, and he called him Benjamin. The meaning of the name she gave was, "Son of my Pain." The meaning of the name the father gave was, "Son of my Right Hand." And was not Christ the Son of pain? All the sorrow of Rachel in that hour when she gave her child over into the hands of strangers, was as nothing compared with the struggle of God when he gave up his only Son. And was not Christ appropriately called "Son of the Right Hand?" Did not Stephen look into heaven and see him standing at the right hand of God? And does not Paul speak of him as standing at the right hand of God making intercession for us? O, Benjamin—Jesus! Son of pang! Son of victory! The deepest emotions of our souls ought to be stirred at the sound of that nomenclature. In your prayers plead his tears, his sufferings, his sorrows, and his death. If you refuse to do it, all the corn-cribs and the palaces of heaven will be bolted and barred against your soul, and a voice from the throne shall stun you with the announcement, "You shall not see my face except your brother be with you."

The world after that was a blank to me. I went into the country, but found no peace in solitude. I tried to get into society, but I found no peace in society. There has been a horror hanging over me by night and by day, and I am afraid to be alone.

How many unutterable troubles among you! No human ear has ever heard that sorrow. O, troubled soul, I want to tell you that there is one salve that can cure the wounds of the heart, and that is the salve made out of the tears of a sympathetic Jesus. And yet some of you will not take this solace; and you try chloral, and you try morphine, and you try strong drink, and you try change of scene, and you try new business associations, and anything and everything rather than take the divine companionship and sympathy suggested by the words of my text when it says, "You shall not see my face again unless your brother be with you." O, that this audience to-day might understand something of the height and depth and length and breadth of immensity and infinity of God's eternal consolations.

I go further and find in my subject a hint as to why so many people fail of heaven. We are told that heaven has twelve gates, and some people infer from that fact that all the people will go in without reference to their past life; but what is the use of having a gate that is not sometimes to be shut? The swinging of a gate implies that our entrance into heaven is conditional. It is not a monetary condition. If we come to the door of an exquisite concert we are not surprised that we must pay a fee, for we know that fine earthly music is expensive; but all the oratorios of heaven cost nothing. Heaven pays nothing for its music. It is all free. There is nothing to be paid at that door for entrance; but the condition of getting into heaven is our bringing our divine Benjamin along with us. Do you notice how often dying people call upon Jesus? It is the usual prayer offered—the prayer offered more than all the other prayers put together—"Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." One of our congregation, when asked in the closing moments of his life, "Do you know us?" said, "O, yes, I know you. God bless you. Good-by. Lord Jesus, receive my spirit;" and he was gone. O, yes, in the closing moments of our life we must have a Christ to call upon. If Jacob's sons had gone up toward Egypt, and had gone with the very finest equipage, and had not taken Benjamin along with them, and to the question they should have been obliged to answer, "Sir, we didn't bring him, as father could not let him go; we didn't want to be bothered with him," a voice from within would have said, "Go away from us. You shall not have any of this supply. You shall not see my face because your brother is not with you." And if we come up toward the door of heaven at last, though we come from all luxuriance and brilliancy of surroundings, and knock for admittance and it is found that Christ is not with us, the police of heaven will beat us back from the bread-house, saying, "Depart. I never knew you."

If Jacob's sons, coming toward Egypt, had lost everything on the way; if they had expended their last shekel; if they had come up utterly exhausted to the corn-cribs of Egypt, and it had been found that Benjamin was with them, all the store-houses would have swung open before them. And so, though by fatal casualty we may be ushered into the eternal world; though we may be weak and exhausted by protracted sickness—if, in that last moment, we can only just stagger and faint and fall into the gate of heaven—it seems that all the corn cribs of heaven will open for our need and all the palaces will open for our reception; and the Lord of that place, seated at his table, and all the angels of God seated at their table, and the martyrs seated at their table, and all our glorified kindred seated at our table, the King shall pass a portion from his table to ours, and then, while we think of the fact that it was Jesus who started us on the road, and Jesus who kept us on the way, and Jesus who at last gained admittance for our soul, we shall be glad if he has seen of the travail of his soul and been satisfied, and not be at all jealous if it be found that our divine Benjamin's mess is five times larger than all the rest. Hail! anointed of the Lord. Thou art worthy.

My friends, you see it is either Christ or famine. If there were two banquets spread, and to one of them only, you might go, you might stand and think for a good while as to which invitation you had better accept; but here is feasting or starvation. If there were two mansions offered, and you might have only one, you might think for a long while, saying, "Perhaps I had better accept this gift, and perhaps I had better accept that gift;" but here it is a choice between palaces of light and hovels of despair. If it might say, "I prefer the 'Creation,'" or, "I prefer the 'Messiah;'" but here it is a choice between eternal harmony and everlasting discord. O, will you live or die? Will you sail into the harbor or drive on the rocks? Will you start for the Egyptian corn-crib, or will you perish amid the empty barns of the Canaanitish famine?

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicine referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup, Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by J. L. HARR.

Europe In America.

Europe has much larger possessions in America than many people imagine. The areas are thus stated: British, 3,634,782 square miles; French, 48,040; Danish, 86,614; Holland, 46,463. The population of these dependencies is as follows: British, 6,753,507; French, 377,203; Danish, 114,229; Holland, 107,865.

Recommended.

A Boston lady who had been recommended to go west on account of the ill health of herself and family wrote to the postmaster of a small town asking for information of various kinds regarding the healthfulness, cost of living, state of morality and church privileges in his town. His reply caused her to remark that she "preferred death in Boston," for he wrote:

"Dere maddam, come on. This town is all rite. The general health can't be beat. If it wasn't for the little scraps of a Saturday night and when the cowboys come in to make us a little visit we'd have no need of a graveyard. Natural deths are unknown, and we ain't had but 14 funerals here in three months. Sowciety is away up. Free dances come off every night and on Sunday nights we have a grand free dance and sacred concert in the operry house. Don't go home till morning and joy rules the roost. All bad characters are lynched as soon as caught. One has just been caught, and I must shut up the postoffice and go up to what we call Lynchin hill and see the fun, so I can't rite no more at present. But you come on. Let me know when you'll git here, and I'll meet you at the depot with a brass band. Come rite on!"—Detroit Free Press.

Russian Dirt.

One has heard of Russian dirt. Moscow is its highest expression, I'm sure. Our baker is excellent (what a kalatch for breakfast this morning!), but he has been put into prison twice for having such a dirty shop. In Russia! What must it have been! This beautiful house was discovered to be in a state of filth. Eight muzhiks were sent for, and two women, and they and St. Petersburg servants set to work yesterday. The superintending is difficult, for the men in Russia—noble creatures!—will not scrub, neither will they wash windows, and they needed much persuading, precept and example.—Mary Grace Thornton in Century.

It is the harmony of the whole people on the progressive plan that lifts a town out of the ruts and puts it on a solid road of unalloyed success." That exchange is correct. No town on earth can prosper with the citizens pulling different ways. A long pull and a strong pull is what counts.

WOMAN DISCOVERS WHY THE MOORE BROTHERS FAILED.

Fatal Number on Their Door — Hotel Clerks Have Difficulty with Guests in Attempting to Assign Them to Rooms with the Odd Figures.

THE prime cause of the great failure which has shaken the foundations of the financial world is known and is about to be disclosed to a breathless and waiting public. Moreover, this important discovery was made by a woman unfamiliar with business affairs, says the Chicago Journal. It does very well to talk about margins and options and things unintelligible to the lay mind, but the woman who has unearthed the new theory is sure of her ground. Moore Bros. occupied a suite of rooms in whose number the ominous figure 13 appeared.

"I knew their prosperity could not last forever," a fashionably dressed woman was heard to observe to her friend in a street car the other day. "One of the Moore Bros. was a great friend of my husband's, and I have visited the offices several times. The moment my eye first fell upon the 13 painted on the office transom I knew that firm was doomed. My husband was once upon the point of renting an office numbered 13, but I begged him not to do so, and he heeded me for once;" and the woman heaved a sigh of self-gratulation as she considered what might have been had her husband ignored the advice.

It is little short of astonishing to note how generally the ancient superstition regarding the figure 13 is entertained. The proof of this is to be had by observation of hotels, apartment houses and to a certain extent office buildings, where the figure 13 in the labeling of doors is conspicuous by its absence.

Many of the hotels especially omit the undesirable figure, among those to eschew it being the Great Northern hotel. In those hostelries where the fatal figures prevail difficulty is often experienced in assigning the corresponding room.

Robert L. Grant, clerk in the Palmer house, has had much experience in this connection. He had one sample of the prevailing superstition during the recent convention.

The first day of the convention a delegate from Kentucky approached the desk and asked to be assigned to a room with a bath.

Mr. Grant wrote 213 on the register opposite the newly-inscribed name and as he did so the man from Kentuky turned pale.

"What do you take me for, sah?" he gasped. "Do you imagine that I will occupy a room in whose number the figure 13 appears?"

The clerk explained that there was no other apartment provided with a bath vacant at the time. All of the unassigned rooms were smaller.

"That makes no difference, suh," indignantly retorted the southern gentleman. "I am not accustomed to such treatment, suh. I desire a room whose number is not a menace to the party I represent. I am a believer in free silver, suh, and do not propose to sacrifice my principles for the sake of a measly bathtub."

The delegate was given a small upper room without a bath and then appeared to be satisfied.

"I occupied room 513 in a hotel in Cincinnati for several years," said Mr. Grant. "I never experienced any bad luck there, but it is a funny thing about that room, too. One day an invalid guest was brought to the hotel and no other room being available I had the invalid conveyed to my room, No. 513. Although his immediate death was not dreamed of, he died within fifteen minutes after entering the apartment. His people were positive the number was responsible for their relative's sudden demise."

At this point a guest lounging near interrupted with a reminiscence.

"When I was across the water," he said, "I remember of being assigned with a friend to room 13 in a hotel there. The individual who saw us to the room was evidently onto the fact that there might be a kick coming if we noticed the number, so he covered it with his hand as we entered.

"I noticed the action, but my friend did not. When he discovered the number he was for moving, but the room was so much better than any other then vacant that I was determined to remain. My friend finally pasted a piece of paper upon which the figure 1 was inscribed over the objectionable 3, after which he was content to stay there with me."

A copper half-cent is among the numerous coins authorized by congress, the law to this effect being passed in 1792 and the coinage begun the following year.

HELENA BANK FAILS.

Heavy Withdrawals and Demands of Eastern Creditors the Cause.

HELENA, Mont., Sept. 6.—The failure of the First National Bank of this city has been announced by the posting of a notice that the bank is unable to meet withdrawals demanded of it. The notice was signed by E. D. Edgerton, vice-president and manager, who says depositors will be paid in full. The directors refuse to talk and no statement of assets and liabilities has been made. It is said the failure is due to the bank's inability to realize on assets to cover demands of eastern creditors. Heavy demands have been made on the bank for the past week, it is said, and, coming so close together, caused trouble.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 6.—The Columbus Central Street Railway Company has gone into the hands of a receiver. The cause of the failure was insufficient business. Liabilities are $1,850,194, of which $1,500,000 is bonded indebtedness. The managers claim the property will pay out.

TOPEKA, Sept. 6.—United States District Judge Foster has appointed receivers for the J. B. Watkins Land and Mortgage Company, of Lawrence, Kas., the largest concern of the kind in the state. Liabilities are $4,250,000 in debenture bonds held in the east. The application for receivers was made by the Girard Life Insurance Annuity and Trust Company, of Philadelphia. J. B. Watkins, president of the company, is considered one of the wealthiest men in Kansas, and is principal owner of the Kansas City, Watkins & Gulf railroad.

ON A POLITICAL CHARGE.

Samuel Tolen, an American, Taken From a Steamship and Locked Up.

HAVANA, Sept. 6.—Samuel T. Tolen, an American citizen, and recently a resident of the province of Matanzas, has been arrested on board the Ward Line steamship Seneca, on a political charge, and is now in custody ashore. Mr. Tolen, who is said to be a merchant of prominence, was arrested just as the steamer was upon the point of sailing. It is said that the police have been trying for twenty days to effect his capture. United States Consul General Fitzhugh Lee has been communicated with, and it is reported that he has entered a protest against Mr. Tolen's arrest and has notified the authorities at Washington.

GRAND ARMY MEN.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 3.—In the grand parade of the Grand Army men the route was shortened to about two miles through the principal streets. The way was lined with cheering people and many grand stands along the route were crowded with spectators. General Walker and his staff headed the parade.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 4.—On roll call Buffalo was decided on for the G. A. R. encampment for 1897, Denver receiving, however, a small vote. The recommendation of the committee in favor of the Pickler bill to revise pension legislation, was adopted unanimously. A resolution was adopted favoring the union of the Women's Relief Corps and the ladies of the G. A. R. as one organization under the Relief Corps.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 5.—Major Thaddeus S. Clarkson, of Omaha was elected commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the republic by acclamation by the national encampment.

SPAIN'S TROUBLES.

Fighting Begun in the Philippine Islands.

MADRID, Sept. 6.—An official dispatch from Manilla, the capital of the Philippine Islands, announces that 2,000 insurgents have collected at Cavite. The troops have routed 500 insurgents at Baccore, killing fourteen and capturing eighteen. Reinforcements have been summoned from Vue Vacciga.

MADRID, Sept. 7.—An official dispatch from Manilla, the capital of the Philippine islands, announces that the insurgents are entrenched at Navalette, on the Cavite isthmus. They will be attacked by Spanish gunboats and operations against the insurgents in the province will begin next week. A number of influential men have been arrested at Manilla on the charge of being concerned in the insurrection. According to private dispatches the report that the Germans are implicated in the insurrection is confirmed.

Iceland Earthquake.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—Steamers arriving at Stornoway, Scotland, from Iceland, report that the severest earthquake since 1784, occurred on the night of August 26. The report says that two churches were destroyed, cattle killed and farms destroyed. The center of the disturbance seemed to be the volcano Hecla.

Three Hanged.

PARIS, Texas, Sept. 4.—George L. Wheeler (white) and Silas Lee and Hickman Freeman (colored), convicted of murder in the Indian territory, were hanged here.

PALMER AND BUCKNER.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 2.—The bolting "sound money" democrats were called to order at 12:30 p. m. by Senator Palmer, of Illinois. After prayer was offered and the call read, the report of the committee recommending ex-governor Flower, of New York for temporary chairman, was adopted. At the close of Chairman Flower's address the states were called for the selection of members of the committees on credentials, rules and resolutions. The convention then adjourned until 4 p. m.

At 4:26 the report of the committee on credentials, stating that there were 824 delegates present, representing forty-one states and three territories out of fifty-one, was presented and adopted. The committee on permanent organization recommended Senator Caffery, of Louisiana, for chairman and J. H. Wilson, of Indiana, for secretary. Senator Caffery made a brief address, after which John P. Irish, of California, was called for. At the close of his remarks adjournment was taken to 11 a. m.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 3.—The convention was called to order at 11:40, and upon being called for W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, addressed the delegates. He was followed by F. W. Lehman, of St. Louis. Senator Vilas reported the platform and it was adopted. The convention then proceeded to the nomination of a candidate for president. The names of Henry Watterson, of Kentucky; John M. Palmer, of Illinois; and General Bragg, of Wisconsin, were placed in nomination. Palmer was nominated on the first ballot.

The convention proceeded to the selection of a candidate for vice-president and General Buckner, of Kentucky, was nominated by acclamation. Resolutions giving the national committee power to exercise the offices of the convention offered by Broadhead of Missouri, were adopted. They also instructed the committee to see that the names of the candidates were placed on the ballot in every state. Adjourned sine die.

The national committee held a meeting immediately after the convention adjourned. It was decided to have an executive committee of nine to manage the campaign, and W. D. Bynum was elected without opposition for the chairman of the committee. Mr. Bynum was appointed to select the other members of the committee. John P. Frenzel, of Indianapolis, was chosen for treasurer, and the choice of secretary was left with the committee. Both the presidential and vice-presidential candidates will be notified of their nomination in Louisville on September 12. Headquarters of the executive committee will probably be located in Chicago.

The Platform.

This convention has assembled to uphold the principles upon which depend the honor and welfare of the American people; in order that democrats throughout the union may unite their patriotic efforts to avert disaster from their country and ruin from their party.

The democratic party is pledged to equal and exact justice to all men of every creed and condition; to the largest freedom of the individual consistent with good government; to the preservation of the federal government in its constitutional vigor and to the support of the states in all their just rights; to economy in the public expenditures; to the maintenance of the public faith and sound money; and it is opposed to paternalism and all class legislation.

The declarations of the Chicago convention attack individual freedom, the right of private contract, the independence of the judiciary and the authority of the president to enforce federal laws. They advocate a reckless attempt to increase the price of silver by legislation to the debasement of our monetary standard and threaten unlimited issues of paper money by the government. They abandon for republican allies the democratic cause of tariff reform to court the favor of protectionists to their fiscal heresy.

In view of these and other grave departures from democratic principles, we cannot support the candidates of that convention nor be bound by its acts. The democratic party has survived many defeats, but could not survive a victory won in behalf of the doctrine and policy proclaimed in its name at Chicago.

The conditions, however, which make possible such utterances from a national convention are the direct result of class legislation by the republican party. It still proclaims as it has for years, the power and duty of government to raise and maintain prices by law, and it proposes no remedy for existing evils except oppressive and unjust taxation.

The national democracy here reconvened therefore renews its declaration of faith in democratic principles, especially as applicable to the conditions of the times.

Taxation, tariff, excise or direct, is rightfully imposed only for public purposes, and not for private gain. Its amount is justly measured by public expenditures, which should be limited by scrupulous economy. The sum derived by the treasury from tax and excise levies is affected by the state of trade and volume of consumption. The amount required by the treasury is determined by the appropriations made by congress. The demand of the republican party for an increase in tariff taxation has its pretext in the deficiency of revenue, which has its causes in the stagnation of trade and reduced consumption, due entirely to the loss of confidence that has followed the populist threat of free coinage and depreciation of our money and the republican practice of extravagant appropriations beyond the needs of good government.

We therefore denounce protection aid its conventions of Chicago and St. Louis for their co-operation with the republican party in creating these conditions which are pleaded in justification of a heavy increase of the burdens of the people by a further resort to protection.

We therefore denonnce protection and its ally, free coinage of silver, as schemes for the personal profit of a few at the expense of the masses, and oppose the two parties which stand for these schemes as hostile to the people of the republic whose food and shelter, comfort and prosperity are attacked by higher taxes and depreciated money. In fine, we reaffirm the history of the democratic doctrine of tariff for revenue only.

We demand that henceforth modern and liberal policies towards American shipping shall take the place of our imitation of the restricted statutes of the eighteenth century, which were long ago abandoned by every maritime power but the United States, and which, to the nation's humiliation, have driven American capital and enterprise to the use of alien flags and alien crews, have made the stars and stripes an almost unknown emblem in foreign ports and have virtually extinguished the race of American seamen. We oppose the pretense that discrimination in duties will promote shipping; that scheme is an invitation to commercial warfare upon the United States, un-American in the light of our great commercial treaties, offering no gain whatever to American shipping, while greatly increasing ocean freights on our agricultural and manufactured products.

The experience of mankind has shown that by reason of their natural qualities, gold is the necessary money of the large affairs of commerce and business, while silver is conveniently adapted to minor transactions, and the most beneficial use of both together can be ensured only by the adoption of the former as a standard of monetary measure, and the maintenance of silver at parity with gold by its limited coinage under suitable safeguards of law. Thus the largest possible enjoyment of both metals is gained with a value universally accepted throughout the world, which constitutes the only practical bimetallic currency, assuring the most stable standard and especially the best and safest money for all who earn their livelihood by labor or the produce of husbandry. They cannot suffer when paid in the best money known to man, but are the peculiar and most defenseless victims of a debased and fluctuating currency, which offers continual profits to the money changer at their cost.

Realizing these truths, demonstrated by long public inconvenience and loss, the democratic party, in the interests of the masses and of equal justice to all, practically established the legislation of 1834 and 1853, the gold standard of monetary measurement and likewise entirely divorced the government from banking and currency issues. To this long established democratic policy we adhere and insist upon the maintenance of the gold standard, and of the parity therewith of every dollar issued by the government, and are firmly opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver and to the compulsory purchase of silver bullion. But we denounce also the further maintenance of the present costly patchwork system of national paper currency, as a constant source of injury and peril.

We assert the necessity of such intelligent currency reform as will confine the government to its legitimate functions completely separated from the banking business, and afford to all sections of our country a uniform, safe and elastic bank currency under governmental supervision, measured in volume by the needs of business.

The fidelity, patriotism and courage with which President Cleveland has fulfilled his great public trust, the high character of his administration, its wisdom and energy in the maintenance of civil order and the enforcement of the laws, its equal regard for the rights of every class and every section, its firm and dignified conduct of foreign affairs, and its sturdy persistence in upholding the credit and honor of the nation, are fully recognized by the democratic party, and will secure to him a place in history beside the fathers of the republic.

We also commend the administration for the great progress made in the reform of the public service, and we endorse its efforts to extend the merit system still further. We demand that no backward step be taken, but that the reform be supported and advanced until the undemocratic spoils system of appointments shall be eradicated.

We demand strict economy in the appropriations and in the administration of the government.

We favor arbitration for the setlement of international disputes.

We favor a liberal policy of pensions to deserving soldiers and sailors of the United States.

The supreme court of the United States was wisely established by the framers of our constitution as one of the three co-ordinate branches of the government. Its independence and authority to interpret the law of the land without fear or favor must be maintained.

We condemn all efforts to degrade that tribunal or impair the confidence and respect which it has deservedly held.

The democratic party ever has maintained and ever will maintain the supremacy of law, the independence of its judicial administration, the inviolability of contract, and the obligations of all good citizens to resist every illegal trust, combination and attempt against the just rights of property, and the good order of society, in which are bound up the peace and happiness of our people.

Believing these principles to be essential to the well-being of the republic, we submit them to the consideration of the American people.

MINNEAPOLIS CROWDED.

Delegates to Pythian Convention Reach the City by Hundreds.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 3.—Over railroads blocked by such an immense passenger traffic as was never before known in the northwest, the Knights of Pythias, hours behind their schedule time, continued to pour into Minneapolis from all points of the country. At 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon took place the ceremony of transferring the command of the camp from Adjutant General Wheaton of the executive committee to General Loper of Iowa, who is in command. Addresses were delivered by Mayor Pratt, chairman; William Henry Eustis of the local committee; Colonel E. R. Millhan of Minnesota, and the visiting brigadier generals.

Explosion of Blasting Powder.

Alton, Ill., Sept. 3.—A terrific explosion occurred Tuesday morning at East Alton, where 5,000 pounds of blasting powder exploded at the Equitable Powder mills and wrought fearful havoc. The explosion shook the country like an earthquake for miles around; windows were broken all over Alton, which is five miles from the scene of the disaster. Henry Ragus and William Roettgers, who were at work in the presser at the time of the explosion, were blown to atoms, and Thomas Keefer was instantly killed by being struck with a heavy timber, which tore his head from his body. All the other employes escaped. The damage to the property was slight.

Quick Time . .

Mr. O. B. Ross, Spencer, Iowa, filed his first application May 11, 1896, and it was allowed August 4, 1896. This application was pending in the Patent Office 85 days only, and was considered by the parties interested to be rather rapid work. Mr. Ross filed his second application July 13, 1896; it was acted upon July 25, 1896; was amended July 27, 1896, and allowed August 5, 1896. This application was pending in the Patent Office 23 days only, and is without doubt the quickest time in which a mechanical patent ever was examined, amended and allowed. May we do the same thing for you we did for Mr. Ross?

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

ANNA IVOR'S REQUEST.

Personal letters reach Mrs. Pinkham by thousands; some asking advice, and others, like the following, telling of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done and will ever continue to do in eradicating those fearful female complaints so little understood by physicians.

All womb and ovarian troubles, irregularities, whites, bearing-down pains, displacements, tendency to cancer and tumor are cured permanently.

"I feel as if I owed my life to your Vegetable Compound. After the birth of my babe I was very miserable. I had a drawing pain in the lower part of my bowels, no strength, and a terrible backache. Every day I failed. My husband said if I would try a bottle of your Vegetable Compound, he would get it for me. The change was wonderful. After I had taken the first half bottle I began to have great faith in it. When I had taken three bottles, I was well and growing stout. It is a pleasure for me to write this to you. I only ask women in any way afflicted with female troubles to try it."—MRS. ANNA IVOR, Pittsford Mills, Rutland Co., Vt.

MISCELLANY.

Teacher—What celebrated event occurred at Plymouth Rock? Tommie—I know. Teacher—Well, let us hear you tell the class what it was. Nobody else seems to know. Tommie—They started a new breed of chickens there.—Cleveland Leader.

Gouverneur Morris of New York, in 1772, proposed to the Continental congress a decimal currency system. He suggested ten units equal one penny; ten pennies, one bill; ten bills, one dollar; ten dollars, one crown. In 1784 Jefferson proposed the system as now in use; Congress in July, 1785, resolved that the coinage should conform to the decimal system.

Claude Joseph Rouget de l'Isle, a French writer, composed the "Marseillaise." He is said to have written the song and composed the music one evening in a burst of patriotic frenzy. He called it the "Song of the Army of the Rhine." It was sung by the volunteers from Marseilles and the south of France as they entered Paris, Aug. 10, 1792, and received its present name from them.

FAST MAIL TRAIN TO OMAHA.

One of the Best Trains to be Found in the World.

"If you will go down to the Union depot almost any evening now you will see the finest mail train in the United States or elsewhere for that matter," said Chief Clerk P. M. Coates of the Railway Mail Service in charge of the Chicago and Omaha fast mail. The cars have nearly all been remodeled, renovated, and painted anew. The third set of cars is now in the Burlington company's shops undergoing treatment. All the old oil lamps have been removed and instead the entire train of five cars is lighted with Pintsch gas. There are seven lamps of four burners to each car.

The cars have been refitted with new trucks or the old ones taken apart and refitted piece by piece. All the most modern appliances in the matter of couplings and air brakes help to give the flyer the best possible equipment of and train extant.

The new fast mail engine No. 590, built especially for service on trains Nos. 7 and 8, by which Uncle Sam's trains on the "Q" between Chicago and Omaha are known, has been trained into fine service, and others of the same pattern will soon be on the rails. The government train now makes Omaha in eleven and one-half hours, running 500 miles between 3 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.

Chief Clerk Coates says that he cannot remember of a single instance when Uncle Sam's flyer has been one minute late at the Union Pacific transfer this year.

"Very: I ran down two women, a baby and a dog last week without falling off."

Urgent.

Todd—Is it a case of necessity?

Nodd—I should say say so. My wife will come back if I don't.

THE JOKER'S CORNER.

CURRENT WIT AND HUMOR, ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Latest Edition of Auld Lang Syne—A Lie Run to Earth—A Terrible Calamity—A Dreadful Contingency—A Delicate Compliment.

SHOULD auld acquaintance be forgot
And never more revive,
Until a long-forgotten friend
Asks me to lend him five?

Then here's the V, my rusty friend,
And give no note of thine,
And don't go take a whisky straight
For auld lang syne.

For auld lang syne, old pal,
For auld lang syne,
And don't repeat this borrowing act
For auld lang syne.

For I have had my leg pulled oft
By many a soapy line,
Dropped deftly from the distant past:
For auld lang syne.

For auld lang syne, old pal,
For auld lang syne,
And please don't touch me once again
For auld lang syne.

—Boston Budget.

A Dreadful Contingency.

"Your money, and quick, too!" said the tall burglar.

"For goodness sake, don't make so much noise," hissed the unhappy householder as he sat up in bed.

"Why not?"

"You'll wake the baby."

The short burglar laughed brutally. He had heard the old gag when he was a child at his mother's knee.

"Wot if we do wake the baby?" said the tall burglar.

"If the baby cries," groaned the unhappy victim, "it will sour the temper of my wife's pet dog, and then there'll be hades to pay."

With a glance of deep commiseration the burglars softly stole away.

Paid No Attention to the Bell.

From Blackwood's Magazine: Sheep, so I am told, are just as stupid about bicycles as they are about everything else that goes on wheels. A young lady in Devonshire, riding down a grass slope, came across a sheep which was lying down exactly in her way. Much to the consternation of her friends, who were watching the performance, she apparently attempted to jump the animal. Over rolled the trio, with the result that the bicycle was more or less damaged, the sheep's feelings were hurt and the lady got a black eye.

"But why did you do it?" they asked her.

"I do it!" was the indignant reply; "I rang my bell as loud as I could, but the silly creature would not get out of the way."

Sanctum Mysteries.

Humorist's wife—What in the world are you sending all these mother-in-law and plumber jokes to the Daily Blowhard for? They are as old as the hills.

Humorist—Yes, my dear; but the editor who selects the humorous matter for that paper is a young fellow just out of college, and they'll be all new to him.

Terrible.

New Boarder—"This rain is good for the farmer. Brings things up out of the ground, you know."

Farmer—"Gosh, don't talk that way. I've just buried my third wife."

A Delicate Compliment.

"Mabel," said the man who favors free silver, "that young man who calls to see you remains altogether too late. It was after half-past 12 when he started for home last night."

"I can't help it, father."

"Can't you give him some kind of a hint?"

"I did; but he said he had too much respect for your sentiments to think of leaving until sixteen minutes to 1."

Alaska gold hunters are returning with tales of woe instead of the glittering metal.

Cashier Taylor of Argentine, Kan., has dropped out of sight. So have the surplus funds of the bank.

Everybody seems to know just what David B. Hill is going to do—everybody but David B. himself.

There is a rumor that the powers will remonstrate with the sultan over the massacer in Constantinople, but it is not believed that they will go further than to think of remonstrating.

It is announced that in the national headquarters of one of the political parties no work will be done on Sundays during the campaign. This departure from previous custom will not cost that party a single vote, and it will increase the respect for a management which recognizes the fact that God's laws are not silent, even in the fightings and tumults of a natural canvass.

A Chicago Scotchman has been notified by the police to either give up playing on his bag-pipes or move to the country. It is an awful thing to wean a loyal highland heart from the beloved "doodlesack," but the alternative is even more cruel. Who ever heard of a bag-piper playing to a lonely stretch of woodland and meadow? An audience seems to be an essential thing for the best notes of the gay instrument, judging by the pompous air of the performer as he strides up and down in all the glory of his chilly knees, shattered rainbow plaids and freshly brushed sunny curls.

Iowa sets an example to Boston. After a discussion of three hours, the statue committee has decided that the beautiful figure of "Iowa" is perfectly proper and therefore the state will accept it. The figure is nude from the waist up and the hands support the breasts, signifying Iowa's offering of nourishment to the whole world, surely a most poetic and beautiful idea. The faction against accepting the statue was led by Senator Harlan and Judge Trimble, but they have lost. Now let Boston accept the Bacchante statue, and let us in the name of all that is beautiful in art, and all that is nauseous in mock-modesty, put an end to this sort of thing for all future time.

It looks as if the Turkish empire were approaching a point where its further existence would be impossible. It is to be hoped that such is the case, provided a stable form of government can take its place. In Syria the Druses are waging a successful war against the national troops; in Crete the inhabitants are fighting the invaders, falling back on their mountain fastnesses when defeated; in Macedonia the Greek inhabitants have raised the standard of revolt, while Armenia is anything but tranquil. There are other regions that will be found in open rebellion when revolts in other parts of the empire become more threatening. The Arabs of the Arabian peninsula have always been dissatisfied with the rule of the Turks, and have more than once in the past centuries flown to arms and made head against the family of Othman. They are held down now by force of arms, and by that force alone. They do not regard the present head of the empire as deserving to be the head priest of the whole Moslem world. The troubles with the Christians in Crete may lead to more widespread upheavals than at present indicated.

The United States consul-general at Singapore, in his last report, calls attention to the great increase that has taken place in the production of Sumatra tobacco and the high price it commands on account of its superiority, especially for wrapping purposes, and he gives some interesting particulars of the origin and growth of the industry. It was in the year 1862 that an Arab drew the attention of a commercial house in Batavia to the district of Deli, on the east coast of Sumatra, a country where pepper and tobacco were being produced, and where a good market could be found for European goods. This led to a commercial expedition to Deli in March, 1863, which expedition was joined by a tobacco planter from Java, with the special object of inspecting the soil in Deli and seeing whether it was suitable for tobaccco cultivation. The result of this expedition was that the planter in question obtained a firm footing in Deli, and being provided with the necessary funds by a firm in Rotterdam, he sent his first fifty bales to Europe in 1865, and, in 1866, 189 bales. This tobacco attracted the attention of experts, and it was decided by a group of financiers in the Netherlands to embark capital in the enterprise. This was done, and a company was established in November, 1869, with a capital of 300,000 guilders.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

TRAVELED ON HIS WITS.

Smooth Confidence Man Swindles Union County People.

CRESTON, Sept. 9.—C. W. White, claiming Rennselaer, Ind., as his home, is in jail here for swindling Union county people. He claimed to be a wealthy farmer and contracted for 640 acres of land, giving checks on the Commercial State bank, of Rennselaer, Ind., for forfeit contract money. It was learned later he had no money in the bank. Ingratiating himself into the confidence of many leading citizens he secured $20 at the national bank, representing he had money in the Indiana bank. He secured $15 at Lorimor through the bank there, issuing a check on the Creston National, of Creston. He gave a check for $64.25 on a Watseka, Ill., bank, in favor of George Ross in payment for a $54 bill of hardware, getting $10 in cash in return. It is thought the latter is a forgery. White borrowed money promiscuously about town. It is thought he intended to escape before his peculations became known.

WIFE MURDER.

Farmer Killed His Wife, While Crazed by Drink.

DAVENPORT, Sept. 11.—George P. Stickelberger, a farmer living one mile north of Buffalo, a little town ten miles north of Davenport, on the southwestern division of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific road, walked into his wife's bed room while drunk and shot her through the heart with a revolver, killing her instantly. It seems that Stickelberger had been drinking heavily lately, neglecting his business and family in consequence. Mrs. Stickelberger, a month or so ago, made application to the district court to have a guardian appointed over her husband, as she believed strong drink had so impaired his mind that he was incapacitated for attention to his own affairs. Stickelberger took the matter much to heart and brooded over it constantly, drinking heavier than ever, and while crazy drunk committed the deed.

MYSTERIOUS POISONING.

Guests at a Bondurant Wedding Receive a Close Call.

BONDURANT, Sept. 11.—Immediately after a recepition and banquet following a wedding in this city, a number of the guests began to feel ill and take to vomiting. A doctor was sent for at once. Some of the sufferers were very low on his arrival and it looked doubtful if some could survive. Mrs. C. I. Thorp was probably the lowest. Her pulse could not be felt, her jaws were set, and she was getting cold. It was a very close call. All are now out of danger. Eighteen persons were affected. The cause of the poisoning is not known, but it is possible it might have been in the chicken pie, which was cooked in copper dishes. Chemists will probably be called upon by the state to determine.

ENGINES COLLIDE FOR SPORT.

Locomotives Meet and Smash to Pieces Before 80,000 Persons.

DES MOINES, Sept. 11.—The collision between two railway locomotives on the state fair grounds brought together the largest crowd ever gathered together in Iowa. More than 80,000 people witnesed the thrilling encounter. The engines were forty ton ten-wheelers from the Des Moines Northern & Western. One was labeled "silver bug" and the other "gold bug." The engines met with a tremendous crash at a speed of nearly forty miles an hour and were utterly demolished, rising to smite each other. Thousands of people made a mad rush for the wreck and swarmed over it for relics as soon as the smash occurred.

Bad Cutting Scrape.

DES MOINES, Sept 10.—George Frank, the young man who was so frightfully stabbed during an unprovoked street fight at the corner of Sixth and Walnut streets by William Harris, is dead. The Harris brothers were arraigned in police court on the charge of murder. They pleaded not guilty and were ordered committed without bail until after the preliminary hearing.

Guilty of Murder.

DES MOINES, Sept. 12.—The verdict of the coroner's jury, which held an inquest over the death of George Frank, was to the effect that he was wilfully murdered by William Harris. The jury also held that Mac Harris aided and abetted the murderer, and recommended that he held as accessory to the crime.

Coe College's President Dead.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Sept. 13.—Dr. James Marshall, president of Coe college, in this city, a prominent educator and Presbyterian divine, died of pneumonia. Dr. Marshall had been ill but two days. He was born in Grove township, Allegheny county, New York, October 4, 1834.

CHILDREN FIND BONDS.

Former Mayor of Bellevue Cleared of Unjust Suspicion.

BELLEVUE, Sept. 13.—The bond investigation, which has occupied the attention of the city council for some days, has been cleared up. It appears in 1894 the city of Bellevue issued ten bonds of the denomination of $1,000 each for the erection of a system of waterworks. As there seemed to be some technicalities as to there validity, a new series were issued and negotiated. The old bonds were then ignored, and afterward suspicion seemed to attach to ex-Mayor S. L. Baker as to their whereabouts and in whose possession they were last known to have been. Last fall Mr. Baker's house burned and his furniture was stored in a neighboring barn. While some children were playing in the barn they found the blank bonds, which were delivered to the proper authorities. This fully exonerates Mr. Baker from any suspicion.

BLOWS HIS HEAD OFF.

Terrible Manner of Suicide Chosen by an Iowa Farmer.

WEBSTER CITY, Sept. 12.—A horrible case of suicide is reported from Ellsworth township, Emmet county. B. S. Palsey was living alone, a mile or more from neighbors. After removing all his outer clothing he lay down on the bed and placed a stick of dynamite under his pillow, attached to an electric battery. The explosion ended his life. The windows of the house were all broken by the force of the explosion, a hole was torn in the roof and the room spattered with clotted blood, brain and feathers. The man's head was blown to fragments. Palsey came to Emmet county from Story county in 1891, and contracted for 450 acres of land, which he occupied up to the time of his death. He was a widower and leaves a family of four grown sons, two of whom reside in Emmet county, the others in Nevada, Iowa.

POPULIST CONVENTION.

DES MOINES, Sept. 11.—The populist state convention unanimously endorsed the ticket nominated by the democrats at Ottumwa. Fusion was complete in every respect. Not a voice was against it. The Ottumwa ticket was made a part of the resolutions and adopted on motion of Gen. J. B. Weaver. Charles A. Lloyd, of Muscatine, was temporary chairman of the convention, while W. H. Robb, of Creston, was permanent chairman.

The resolutions adopted reaffirm the principles of the populist party and endorse the Bryan and Sewall electors and the nominees named by the democratic convention at Ottumwa.

SUICIDE BY DROWNING.

William Hagedorn Couldn't Stand Financial Trouble.

CRESTON, Sept. 13.—The body of William Hagedorn has been found floating in Summitt lake. Hagedorn left home on the 8th. Near the place where his body was found was a fishing pole and a can of bait. Hagedorn may have fallen into the lake, but the impression prevails that he committed suicide. He had been acting strangely of late, and created considerable excitement a few days before his death by absenting himself from home. It is said financial troubles had something to do with the case.

JEALOUSY CAUSES MURDER.

Mrs. Ada Williams Shot Probably Fatally by Mrs. Mable Hill.

CENTERVILLE, Sept. 14.—A lively shooting scrape in this city may cause the death of one of Centerville's notorious colored women, Mrs. Ada Williams. It happened at a rough and rowdy dance given by the colored people. Mrs. Mabel Hill did the shooting, the reason for which was jealousy. Mrs. Williams is still alive but fatally wounded.

MORPHINE POISONING.

Dr. Felcon Takes an Overdose—Was Probably Suicide.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Sept. 13.—Dr. Felcon, of Prairiesburg, this county, died suddenly. The cause of death is pronounced morphine or opiate administered by Dr. Felcon's own hand, the attending physicians think with suicidal intent. No cause is assigned.

SUICIDE AT EIGHTY.

An Old Man at Birmingham Jumped Down a Well.

FAIRFIELD, Sept. 14.—Smith Culbertson, a resident of Birmingham, nine miles south of here, committed suicide by jumping into a deep well. He died before he was rescued. The deceased was 80 years old and in feeble health.

Death in a Mine.

DES MOINES, Sept. 14.—Frank Morse, a Belgian miner working for the Carbondale Coal company, was killed by a blast in the mine.

BREVITIES.

The silver democrats of Burlington are to have a new daily paper.

ALL OVER THE WORLD.

PAR'S TORNADO.

Small Storm Sweeps Through the City, Killing a Number of Persons.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A dispatch to a news agency says that a cyclone from the southwest passed over Paris doing much damage in the center of the city. Several persons are known to have been killed and many others are injured. A reporter of the Temps, who witnessed the cyclone from the top of an omnibus says that it did not last more than a minute. He suddenly saw what appeared to be a tall pillar of smoke advancing, and imagined that there was a large fire. But almost immediately he saw the branches of trees snapped off and countless chimney-pots hurled to the ground. The storm immediately passed away. The west end of the city wholly escaped the fury of the storm, but eastward, along the riverway, much destruction was caused. Between the Pont St. Micheal and Pont Neuf forty large trees were torn out of the ground and blown into the Seine. Many persons, who were passing across the bridge or along the river front were caught up by the wind and thrown into the river, but so far as known all of these were rescued, not much the worse for their involuntary bath beyond being badly frightened. Some of those in the path of the storm were dashed against houses and injured. Many cabs were literally blown to pieces, so violent was the force of the wind.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—Several newspapers estimate the number of persons injured during the recent cyclone at 150, of whom forty vere seriously hurt. The Journal confirms the police statement that only three persons were so seriously injured as to be in danger of losing their lives.

DEPOSITION OF THE SULTAN.

It Has Been Decided Upon as the Only Means of Making Peace.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 14.—There is the greatest anxiety in all circles, and no doubt a crisis of extreme gravity is reached. The powers are discussing the deposition of the sultan as the only means of restoring quiet in the Turkish empire. The British fleet is within easy striking distance. Should an emergency arise, it is believed Great Britain would not hesitate to act alone should the other powers delay too long. The extraordinary tribunal which has been trying the men accused of massacreing the Armenians in Constantinople has turned out to be merely a whitewashing court. The culprits, thoroughly proven guilty, were acquitted. This has aroused the interest among the foreign population, and served greatly to increase the uneasiness on all sides. This condition, it is admitted, cannot last long, as business is at a standstill, and the impoverished condition of the treasury is adding discontent in army, navy and official circles generally.

CUBAN EXPEDITION LANDED.

A Successful Fillibuster Movement—Spain's Troubles.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The Herald says: Information has reached the city that the steamer Three Friends, which left Jacksonville recently, has again been successful in landing an expedition in Cuba, in spite of the watchfulness of the Spanish war vessels which constantly patrol the coast. The expedition landed precisely where the Spanish navy department exerts the greatest vigilance, on the coast of Pinar del Rio province. The cargo is said to consist of 1,000 rifles, 460,000 cartridges, a pneumatic dynamite gun, 2,000 pounds of dynamite, 1,000 machettes, medical stores and clothing. It is thought in Cuba that Maceo will now attack the trocha in Pinar del Rio as soon as Gomez moves from the east upon Havana.

SPAIN WILL BE ACTIVE.

Efforts to Be Made to Put Down the Cuban and Philippine Rebellions.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The Standard publishes a dispatch from Madrid saying that the Spanish government has resolved to proceed energetically with measures for the suppression of the risings in Philippine Islands and Cuba. The members of the revolutionary junta in Madrid, who have been proved to be in correspondence with the rebels and with refugees in Florida and New York, have been sent for trial before a summary court martial. They include noted lawyers and two wealthy merchants.

BOMB FACTORY FOUND.

Evidence That the Armenians Planned to Blow Up the Government Magazine.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 13.—An Armenian bomb factory has been discovered by the police, located underneath the Armenian church near the Kassim Pasha cemetery. From the factory a long tunnel had been excavated in the direction of a government powder magazine, the intention obviously having been to undermine the magazine and blow it up.

GERMANY RESISTS ENGLAND.

Boers Did It In Transvaal—Germans Do It In Zanzibar.

ZANZIBAR, Sept. 12.—The belief is prevalent that Germany does not intend to acquiesce in the action taken by the British government through Rear Admiral Rawson in appointing Hammoud Bin Mohammed Ben Said sultan of Zanzibar. Said Khalid, the alleged usurper, has been at the German consulate ever since the fall of the palace, August 27, and in spite of the request of the British consul for his surrender, there has been no disposition manifested on the part of the German officials to give him up. It is now said that it is the intention of the German authorities to reinstate Said Khalid to the throne from which he was deposed by force of British arms. These rumors have caused great enthusiasm in Zanzibar. There is a feeling that Germany is not acting in a friendly spirit, and is seeking to make an issue with Great Britain.

Alaskan Miners Suffer.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Information received at the treasury department indicates that there is likely to be much suffering among the miners at Cook's inlet, who are returning from the Alaskan gold fields unless the commercial companies which took them north provide for their passage home. More than a year ago the department notified the commercial companies that thereafter the government could not furnish transportation for these miners, and that if the companies took the miners north they should look out for their return. It is said that if all the cutters in Bering Sea were pressed into service they could not accommodate more than 120 men. There is said to be nearly 1,000 of these returning miners now at Cook's Inlet.

Make it 75,000.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 11.—The Post-Dispatch's Little Rock, Ark., special says: The latest returns from the state election indicate a democratic majority of 75,000 to 80,000.

Greek Officers Must Die.

ATHENS, Sept. 11.—Sixteen Greek officers have been condemned to death for taking part in the Cretan rebellion, and a number of others are under trial.

TERSE NEWS.

The British Trades Union Congress at Edinburg recently adopted a resolution declaring for limitation of the work day to eight hours in all trades.

In a race between John R. Gentry and Star Pointer at Glen Falls, N. Y., John R. Gentry equalled the world's pacing record, made by Robert J. at Terra Haute two years ago, going the mile in 2:01½.

On the 9th Bryan made public his formal letter of acceptance of the nomination for president by the democratic party, and Hobart gave the press his letter accepting the nomination for vice-president by the republicans.

New York dispatch: B. J. Wefers, the world's champion runner, established a new record for 300 yards at the New Jersey Athletic Club carnival at Bergen Point, N. J. His was a wonderful performance, as he had to round two turns to go the distance. There were three timers and two of them made the time 31 seconds flat, while another stopped his watch at 30 4-5.

Word has been received of a battle which was fought near Pampanga, on the island of Luzon. The official report of the affair states that the rebels were defeated, 58 of them being killed and many wounded. The government is said to have lost 8 killed and 22 wounded. Large reinforcements of Spanish troops have arrived at Manilla to aid in quelling the revolt.

At Benton Harbor Mich., last week eleven lives were lost by the burning of Yore's Grand Opera House and the Frick Block. There are four persons persons badly injured and $75,000 worth of property destroyed. Falling walls wrought the carnage in human life and brought greater sorrow to Benton Harbor and St. Joseph than any calamity since the sinking of the Chicora took twenty-six fathers and husbands from the small communities of the west Michigan shore. The dead and injured were members of the Benton Harbor and St. Joseph fire departments, the latter department having been appealed to for assistance when the spreading flames threatened to destroy Benton Harbor. The insurance on the property destroyed is $25,000. The catastrophe, by which eleven heroic men were buried under a mass of red-hot bricks, burning timbers and blistering iron-work, was due to the falling of the upper portion of the east wall of the theater. This wall faced on an alley, in which there were twenty firemen of the two departments hauling hose or hoisting it up ladders. They had but an instant's warning when the crash came. Five of the twenty made their escape, leaving but four of the rest to be later brought out of the furnace, living, but mangled and burned.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"THE CITIES SAVED," LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

"And the Streets of the Cities Shall Be Full of Boys and Girls Playing in the Streets Thereof"—Zachariah, Verses, 8—5.

GLIMPSES of our cities redeemed! Now, boys and girls who play in the streets run such risks that multitudes of them end in ruin. But, in the coming time spoken of, our cities will be so moral that lads and lasses shall be as safe in the public thoroughfares as in the nursery.

Pulpit and printing press for the most part in our day are busy in discussing the condition of the cities at this time; but would it not be healthfully encouraging to all Christian workers, and to all who are toiling to make the world better, if we should for a little while look forward to the time when our cities shall be revolutionized by the Gospel of the Son of God, and all the darkness of sin and trouble and crime and suffering shall be gone from the world?

Every man has a pride in the city of his nativity or residence, if it be a city distinguished for any dignity or prowess. Caesar boasted of his native Rome, Virgil of Mantua, Lycurgus of Sparta, Demosthenes of Athens, Archimedes of Syracuse, and Paul of Tarsus. I should have suspicion of baseheartedness in a man who had no especial interest in the city of his birth or residence—no exhilaration at the evidence of its prosperity or its artistic embellishments, or its intellectual advancement.

I have noticed that a man never likes a city where he has not behaved well! People who have had a free ride in the prison van never like the city that furnishes the vehicle. When I find Argos, and Rhodes, and Smyrna trying to prove themselves the birthplace of Homer, I conclude that Homer behaved well. He liked them and they liked him. We must not war on laudable city pride, or with the idea of building ourselves up at any time, try to pull others down. Boston must continue to point to its Fanueil Hall and to its Common, and to its superior educational advantages. Philadelphia must continue to point to its Independence Hall, and its mint, and its Girard College. Washington must continue to point to its wondrous Capitoline buildings. If I should find a man coming from any city, having no pride in that city, that city having been the place of his nativity, or now being the place of his residence, I would feel like asking: "What mean thing have you done there? What outrageous thing have you been guilty of that you do not like the place?"

I know there are sorrows, and there are sins, and there are sufferings all around about us; but as in some bitter, cold winter day, when we are threshing our arms around us to keep our thumbs from freezing, we think of the warm spring day that will after awhile come; or in the dark winter night we look up and see the northern lights, the windows of heaven illuminated by some great victory—just so we look up from the night of suffering and sorrow and wretchedness in our cities, and we see a light streaming through from the other side, and we know we are on the way to morning—more than that, on the way to "a morning without clouds."

I want you to understand, all you who are toiling for Christ, that the castles of sin are all going to be captured. The victory for Christ in these great towns is going to be so complete that not a man on earth, or an angel in heaven, or a devil in hell will dispute it. How do I know? I know just as certainly as God lives and that this is holy truth. The old Bible is full of it. If a nation is to be saved, of course all the cities are to be saved. It makes a great difference with you and with me whether we are toiling on toward a defeat, or toiling on toward a victory.

Now, in this municipal elevation of which I speak, I have to remark there will be greater financial prosperity than our cities have ever seen. Some people seem to have a morbid idea of the millennium, and they think when the better time comes to our cities and the world people will give their time up to psalm-singing and the relating of their religious experience, and, as all social life will be purified there will be no hilarity, and, as all business will be purified there will be no enterprise. There is no ground for such an absurd anticipation. In the time of which I speak, where now one fortune is made, there will be a hundred fortunes made. We all know business prosperity depends upon confidence between man and man. Now when that time comes of which I speak, and when all double dealing, all dishonesty, and all fraud are gone out of commercial circles, thorough confidence will be established, and there will be a better business done, and larger fortunes gathered, and mightier successes achieved.

The great business disasters of this country have come from the work of godless speculators and infamous stock gamblers. The great foe to business is crime. When the right shall have hurled back the wrong, and shall have purified the commercial code, and shall have thundered down fraudulent establishments, and shall have put into the hands of honest men the keys of business, blessed time for the bargain-makers. I am not talking an abstraction, I am not making a guess. I am telling you God's eternal truth.

In that day of which I speak, taxes will be a mere nothing. Now, our business men are taxed for everything. City taxes, county taxes, State taxes, United States taxes, stamp taxes, license tax, manufacturing taxes—taxes, taxes, taxes! Our business men have to make a small fortune every year to pay their taxes. What fastens on our great industries this awful load? Crime, individual and official. We have to take care of the orphans of those who plunged into their graves through sensual indulgences. We have to support the municipal governments, which are vast and expensive just in proportion as the criminal proclivities are vast and tremendous. Who support the almshouses and police stations, and all the machinery of municipal government? The taxpayers.

In our great cities the churches are not to-day large enough to hold more than a fourth of the population. The churches that are built—comparatively few of them are fully occupied. The average attendance in the churches of the United States today is not four hundred. Now, in the glorious time of which I speak, there are going to be vast churches, and they are going to be all thronged with worshippers. Oh, what rousing songs they will sing! Oh, what earnest sermons they will preach! Oh, what fervent prayers they will offer! Now, in our time, what is called a fashionable church is a place where a few people, having attended very carefully to their toilet, come and sit down—they do not want to be crowded; they like a whole seat to themselves—and then, if they have any time left from thinking of their store, and from examining the style of the hat in front of them, they sit and listen to a sermon warranted to hit no man's sins, and listen to music which is rendered by a choir warranted to sing tunes that nobody knows! And then after an hour and a half of indolent yawning they go home refreshed. Every man feels better after he has had a good sleep!

In many of the Churches of Christ in our day the music is simply a mockery. I have not a cultivated ear, nor a cultivated voice, yet no man can do my singing for me. I have nothing to say against artistic music. The two or five dollars I pay to hear any of the great queens of song are a good investment. But when the people assemble in religious convocation, and the hymn is read, and the angels of God step from their throne to catch the music on their wings, do not let us drive them away by our indifference. I have preached in churches where vast sums of money were employed to keep up the music, and it was as exquisite as any heard on earth, but I thought, at the same time, for all matters practical I would prefer the hearty, outbreaking song of a backwoods Methodist camp-meeting.

Let one of these starveling fancy songs sung in church get up before the throne of God, how would it seem standing amid the great doxologies of the redeemed? Let the finest operatic air that ever went up from the Church of Christ get many hours the start, it would be caught and passed by the hosanna of the Sabbath School children. I know a church where the choir did all the singing, save one Christian man, who, through "perseverance of the saints," went right on, and, afterward, a committee was appointed to wait on him and ask him if he would not please stop singing, as he bothered the choir.

Let those refuse to sing
Who never knew our God;
But children of the Heavenly King
Should speak their joys abroad.

"Praise ye the Lord: let everything with breath praise the Lord." In the glorious time coming in our cities, and in the world, hosanna will meet hosanna, and hallelujah, hallelujah.

In that time also of which I speak, all the haunts of iniquity and crime and squalor will be cleansed and will be illuminated. How is it to be done? You say, perhaps, by one influence. Perhaps I say by another. I will tell you what is my idea, and I know I am right in it: The Gospel of the Son of God is the only agency that will ever accomplish this.

A gentleman in England had a theory that if the natural forces of wind and tide and sunshine and wave were rightly applied and rightly developed it would make this whole earth a paradise. In a book of great genius, and which rushed from edition to edition, he said: "Fellow-men, I promise to show the means of creating a paradise within ten years, where everything desirable for human life may be had by every man in superabundance without labor and without pay—where the whole face of nature shall be changed into the most beautiful farms, and man may live in the most magnificent palaces, in all imaginable refinements of luxury, and in the most delightful gardens—where he may accomplish without labor in one year more than hitherto could be done in thousands of years. From the houses to be built will be afforded the most cultured views that can be fancied. From the galleries, from the roof, and from the turrets, may be seen gardens as far as the eye can see, full of fruits and flowers, arranged in the most beautiful order, with walks, colonnades, aqueducts, canals, ponds, plains, amphitheatres, terraces, fountains, sculptured works, pavilions, gondolas, places of popular amusement, to lure the eye and fancy. All this to be done by urging the water, the wind, and the sunshine to their full development."

In that day of which I speak, do you believe there will be any mid-night carousal? Will there be any kicking off from the marble steps of shivering mendicants? Will there be any unwashed, unfed, uncombed children? Will there be any inebriates staggering past? No. No wine stores. No lager beer saloons. No distilleries, where they make the three X's. No bloodshot eye. No bloated cheek. No instruments of ruin and destruction. No fist-pounded forehead. The grandchildren of that woman who goes down the street with a curse, stoned by the boys that follow her, with the reformers and philanthropists and the Christian men and the honest merchants of our cities.

Oh, you think sometimes it does not amount to much! You toil on in your different spheres, sometimes with great discouragement. People have no faith, and say: "It does not amount to anything; you might as well quit that." Why, when Moses stretched his hand over the Red Sea it did not seem to mean anything especially. People came out, I suppose, and said, "Aha!" Some of them found out what he wanted to do. He wanted the sea parted. It did not amount to anything, this stretching out of his hand over the sea. But, after awhile, the wind blew all night from the east, and the waters were gathered into a glittering palisade on either side, and the billows reared as God pulled back on their crystal bits! Wheel into line; O, Israel! march! march! Pearls crashed under feet. Flying spray gathers into rainbow arch of victory for the conquerers to march under. Shout of hosts on the beach answering the shout of hosts amid sea. And when the last line of Israelites reach the beach, the cymbals clap, and the shields clang, and the waters rush over the pursuers, and the swift-fingered winds on the white keys of the foam play the grand march of Israel delivered and the awful dirge of Egyptian overthrow.

So you and I go forth, and all the people of God go forth, and they stretch forth their hand over the sea, the boiling sea of crime, and sin, and wretchedness. "It don't amount to anything," people say. Don't it? God's winds of help will, after awhile, begin to blow. A path will be cleared for the army of Christian philanthropists. The path will be lined with the treasures of Christian beneficence, and we shall be greeted to the other beach by the clapping of all heaven's cymbals, while those who pursued us, and derided us, and tried to destroy us, will go down under the sea, and all that will be left of them will be cast high and dry upon the beach, the splintered wheel of a chariot, or thrust out from the foam, the breathless nostril of a riderless charger.

How High Can Man Go?

Prof. Ugolino Mosso of Turin has made some interesting experiments on the effects experienced in ascending to high altitudes. All climbers of lofty mountains are aware that at great heights, such as the summit of Mont Blanc, respiration becomes more or less troublesome, the heart beats rapidly and sometimes irregularly, and a feeling of exhaustion, often accompanied by nausea, is experienced. These effects arise largely from the rarity of the air, and since the atmosphere becomes less dense the higher one goes, it is evident that a limit must soon be reached above which man cannot ascend. Professor Mosso made his first experiments on Monte Rosa, next to Mont Blanc, the highest peak of the Alps, where he ascended to an elevation exceeding 15,000 feet without serious inconvenience. Returning to Turin he made his next ascent, so to speak, without ascending at all. In other words, he produced an imitation of the rare atmosphere of a very lofty mountain-top by partially exhausting the air from a large pneumatic chamber in which he had shut himself. When the air in the chamber corresponded in density with that which would be found at a height of 24,272 feet above sea-level, he suffered such ill effects that he could not carry the experiment further. The height to which Professor Mosso thus simulated an ascent is almost a mile less than that of Mount Everest, so that it seems improbable that man will ever be able to set his foot on the loftiest peak of the earth.

NANSEN AT CHRISTIANIA.

CHRISTIANIA, Sept. 11.—The arrival here of the Fram, having on board Dr. Nansen and the companions of his Arctic expedition, was made the occasion of an extraordinary demonstration of welcome. The Fram was escorted up the Fjord by a naval squadron of seventy steamers. Dr. Nansen was accorded a triumphal reception. The city was gaily decorated and everything possible was done to express the honor in which the citizens held the returning explorer. Great enthusiasm was manifested. Among those who took part in the demonstration were 12,000 members of the Guilds, many students, etc. They formed a guard of honor along the route leading to the castle, where Nansen was cordially welcomed. Here a banquet was tendered to him and he was decorated by the king and by the crown prince.

FIGHT WITH WINCHESTERS.

Prominent Farmers near Coffeeville, Mississippi, Fight a Duel to the Death.

COFFEEVILLE, Miss., Sept. 11.—W. Johnson and John Wilbourne, two prominent farmers, fought a duel with winchester rifles, which resulted in Johnson's death. A feud had existed between them for some time. They owned adjoining farms and when they met a quarrel arose. There was only one witness to the affair. Wilbourne and the witness, Sam Lewis, had been hunting squirrels and while returning home they met Johnson armed with a winchester rifle. A dispute arose and Johnson opened fire on Wilbourne without warning. Wilbourne returned the fire and regular fusilades were kept up between them which resulted in Johnson being pierced by four balls, Wilbourne escaping without injury. Wilbourne has been placed in jail. He claims that it was a case of self defense.

FEVER IN CUBA.

The Yellow Terror is Increasing at An Alarming Extent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—The malignancy of yellow fever in Cuba is increasing with the advance of the season, and the disease, in a most dreadful type, is now playing havoc with the unacclimated Spanish troops, according to special reports received from the sanitary inspectors of the United States marine hospital service. These show seventy-one deaths in Havana for the week ending August 27, fifty-one of these being in the military hospital, at which 122 new cases were under treatment, twenty-two in Matanzas, the same number in Santiago, twenty-five at Sagua La Grande, with 190 new cases, and similar conditions in all other sections where the Spanish forces are massed.

SOUDANESE CAMPAIGN.

It is Well Under Way and the British Carry All.

CAIRO, Egypt, Sept. 13.—Dispatches just received from the front say the North Staffordshire regiment, numbering about 900, has arrived at Kosheh camp, the southernmost fortified post on the Nile, and will be pushed forward to Absarratt. The Third brigade reached Absarratt safely and the main body of cavalry is arriving there. Cavalry scouts report the Dervishes still in view south of Duglo, but the enemy retreats at the slightest sign of a forward movement. Anglo-Egyptian scouts, feeling the way for the advance guard, are steadily pushing on to Kasbar, fourteen miles further south, which will be the next place occupied

ENGLAND ACTS.

Trying to Check the Drain of Gold to America.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The directors of the Bank of England have advanced the bank's rate of discount from two per cent to two and a half per cent. This is the first time that the bank has increased its discount rate since February 22, 1894. The action of the directors of the bank was unexpected and is regarded as a precautionary measure, having the effect to check the drain of gold to the United States and the continent. The immediate effect of the announcement of the increase was to cause a decline on the stock exchange of consols, home railway shares and American railroad stocks.

CORBETT AND FITZSIMMONS.

Agree to Fight After the Corbett-Sharkey Fight.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—Corbett and Fitzsimmons, at their conference at the Hotel Bartholdi, agreed to fight to a finish for $10,000 a side. Each man posted $5,000, but as it is against the law to sign articles for a prize fight in this state, it was decided to meet in Jersey City, where the articles will be duly signed. George Siler was selected as referee and Al Smith as temporary stakeholder. It was decided that the fight must take place within sixty days after Corbett's fight with Sharkey, or before March 1st, next.

AN OPEN LETTER.

What Mrs. I. E. Bressie Says to American Women.

Speaks of Her Melancholy Condition After the Birth of Her Child.

"I feel as if I was doing an injustice to my suffering sisters if I did not tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me, and its worth to the world.

"From the birth of my child until he was four years old, I was in poor health, but feeling convinced that half of the ailments of women were imagined or else cultivated, I fought against my bad feelings, until I was obliged to give up. My disease baffled the best doctors.

"I was nervous, hysterical; my head ached with such a terrible burning sensation on the top, and felt as if a band was drawn tightly above my brow; inflammation of the stomach, no appetite, nausea at the sight of food, indigestion, constipation, bladder and kidney troubles, palpitation of the heart, attacks of melancholia would occur without any provocation whatever, numbness of the limbs, threatening paralysis, and loss of memory to such an extent that I feared aberration of the mind.

"A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and spoke in glowing terms of what it had done for her.

"I began its use and gained rapidly. Now I am a living advertisement of its merits. I had not used it a year when I was the envy of the whole town, for my rosy, dimpled, girlish looks and perfect health.

"I recommend it to all women. I find a great advantage in being able to say, it is by a woman's hands this great boon is given to women. All honor to the name of Lydia E. Pinkham; wide success to the Vegetable Compound.

"Yours in Health, MRS. I. E. BRESSIE, Herculaneum, Jefferson Co., Mo."

EMERGENCY HINTS.

If a vein is severed compress below the spurting surface. Blood in veins returns to the heart.

Remember that Irish potatoes grated and applied as a poultice is a quick and sure relief for scalds and burns.

When an artery is severed compress above the spurting surface. Blood from the arteries enters the extremities.

When dust gets into the eyes avoid rubbing with the fingers, but dash cold water into them. Remove cinders with a camel's hair brush.

When choking from any cause go upon all fours and cough, if there is no one present to render the old-time assistance of "pounding on the back."

If a high fever comes on at evening bathe the feet and wrap in a blanket, put warm irons to the feet and give aconite in water every hour until the patient is in a "good sweat," then keep well covered.

In fracture of the skull with compression and loss of consciousness, examine the wound and if possible raise the broken edges of the skull so as to relieve the pressure on the brain. Prompt action will often save life.

A man will sit on an inch board and talk politics for three hours; but put him in a church pew for forty-five minuets, he gets nervous, twists and turns, and goes to sleep. Man will pouch his cheeks with tobacco, juice running down his chin and feel good; but a hair in the butter kills him. He stays out until midnight, wife don't know where he is, comes home when he pleases; but if the meal is not ready he pouts, frowns and says unpretty things. —Ex.

Britt Tribune.—Britt is to have electric lights. The proposition of the electric light company made Monday evening was accepted by the citizens present as being equitable and an ordinance will be published granting a 15 years limited franchise. The city reserving the right to buy the same at any time. It seemed to be concensus of public opinion that we should have "light." The vote stood 149 to 38 in favor of light. It is the intention now to get the plant in running order before cold weather. We therefore confidently expect to see the "shine" by the first of December.

A year like the present one when thousands of acres of pasture lands are for good steers to consume the grass and when corn is selling at a price for which no farmer can afford to grow it and haul it to market, furnishes a practical demonstration of the necessity for the "granger's" cow, a cow that will give a profitable account of herself at the pail and at the same time give birth to calves that will eat our grass and corn and fetch somewhere near the top when finished and sent to the chicago market. There is no longer any question that such cows exist. —Ex.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her; as she did not like to be without them." The medicine referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup, Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by J. L. Harr.

Amsden's
Hog Cholera Preventative.

Hog cholera has baffled science! No remedy has yet been found which will save the hog after it has actually got the cholera.

Hog cholera can be prevented! It has been proven time after time that this medicine will positively protect the hog from this fatal disease.

In 1877 the farmers of the U. S. lost by hog cholera alone over forty-five millions of dollars. The annual loss now (1896) is five million dollars.

Progressive farmers now realize that the old maxim, "an ounce of preventation is worth a pound of cure." works well in this case because, while hog cholera cannot be cured, it can be prevented. Amsden's Hog Cholera Preventative is not expensive and is a certain protection to swine herds.

Directions for use.—Give one tablespoonfull for each 200 lb. hog in wet oats, slop, or ground feed. May be given once or twice a day. Manufactured by The Garner Remedy Company, Garner, Iowa. Price $1.00. For sale everywhere.

CHAPTER I.

THE waves came rolling in fierce and sullen clamor against the sharp rocks that formed the precipitous shore of a small island, far away amidst the Pacific group, little known and rarely frequented. The anger of the storm-king still manifested itself in the hoarse bay of the surf, while the moaning of the wind, yet lashing the water to white caps of foam, echoed fitfully along the shore and sea; but the fury of the elemental strife had passed, for where huge masses of sullen clouds were trooping away, showed in the west a broad line of smiling blue.

As the despairing wretch greets the hand that sets him firm upon the pinnacle of joy—as the parched and failing desert traveler hails the music of the fountain's dash—as dying creatures seize at life—so was the sight of that patch of fair sky—that island green and fresh as Hope—welcomed with transport by the ship-wrecked remnant of a staunch and gallant company, who but a few hours before had walked in fearless security on the deck of what was now a dismasted, broken wreck, plunging, tossing, sinking—not safe for the nest of a sea-gull.

Of a freight of forty souls four human creatures alone survived, and these had been drifting to and fro clinging to the caboose, which had been washed from the deck, and fortunately preserved from dashing upon the long sunken coral reef that extended from the island a league or more.

"Courage, sir; didn't I tell you, never say die? I reckon by this time old Nep has tired out his dolphins. I could make a whole rig out of that ere blue patch, and the sign's as sartin here in these heathen parts as in England—God bless her! That fair weather's close alongside; the wind's going down, and the current's a-setting us toward the shore as softly as a cat drops her kitten. I wish for these poor little creturs' sake it would hurry itself a little, though to be sure I'm not above comfortable on my own account. I like salt water, but ain't anxious to soak in it—that's a fact. But avast there! I'm not giving to looking on the black side of things—nary a grumbler could I ever call a good shipmate. It's hard to think of all our poor fellers gone to Davy Jones's locker—but the Lord must have known it, and Tom Harris ain't a-going to question Providence just yet!" And the honest, rough old tar shook his head to dash off the tears that mingled with the briny wave that plunged over their frail retreat.

A sigh came from the individual he addressed—of whose personal appearance just then it would be unfair to judge—with the water trickling down his sharp pallid features, which wore a look of haggard suffering and exhaustion. He changed his position a little to rest the arm that held firmly upon the wreck a boy of nine or ten years, by whose side lay a little girl not more than six years of age, fainting and quite worn out with fright and exposure, her head drooping forlornly against the brawny shoulder of the kind-hearted sailor.

"I hope your brave spirits will hold out, my noble fellow; as for myself, I confess I am growing hopeless. Is there no way to increase our speed or guide this ark of our safety?"

Tom was not so used up but he could laugh.

"If we had oars and row-locks both fixed up on poor old Sambo's palace. I reckon our arms are pretty well used up, sir, and these little things must be held on. We might as well keep cool and let the work be done for us. 'Beggars musn't be choosers!'"

This philosophical reasoning was presently lucidly explained and exemplified. In its own good time the tide brought them to shallow water. With a cheery hallo Tom sprang down from his perch, and, wading along, soon drew the little caboose high and dry on the beach.

"Look a-here now, sir," said he, "see how much better this 'ere was done for us than we could ha' done for ourselves. Don't you see this 'ere is the only smooth place to land? The tide was a mighty sure pilot. Now let me see what's to be done."

The children were too much exhausted to complain, save by an occasional sigh or a groan. The little girl, indeed, was nearly insensible, and Tom, giving no thought to his stiff and aching limbs, went cheerily to work. He carried his little charge to a soft spot of green farther in shore, and then began looking around anxiously for traces of fresh water; his sharp eye was not long in spying out a modest-looking urn-like plant among the luxurious vegetation that crept almost to the pebbles of the beach.

"Water ain't very far off," muttered he, "for this 'ere dumb mouth tells me so; and howsomever human creturs set a bad example, I never knew one o' Natur's sign-boards to lie."

So he went stumbling and reeling about something in the zig-zag course of a drunken man, for his swollen feet were very painful; but he kept the same genial smile, which, like a sunbeam, brightened a rough and uncomely scene into quiet beauty. Presently his eye flashed with the triumph of success, and bending down to lift away a velvety spray of moss, he discovered a tiny spring bubbling up clear and pure enough for a fairy's dainty lip.

Fertile in expedients—for Tom had been taught in the thorough school of necessity—he did not demur at the absence of a drinking vessel, but gathering a broad, glossy leaf, wound it into a roll, filled it and hurried back to his companions. He found the boy clinging to his father and asking piteously for water, while that father sat in icy stoicism—or rather in the apathy of despair—without any attempt to help himself or his child.

Tom Harris looked at him sternly as he raised the insensible little girl and poured the water over her face and began chafing her icy hands; and after a moment's hesitation, with a little tremor of tenderness softening the roughness of the words:

"I don't know nothing about you, sir, but if I may be so bold, I must say I don't think you take a very good way to thank the Power that has saved you from death. 'Pears like it's sinful to sit looking as glum as a man who's had the worst luck in the world, when these little innocents need all our care."

The man he addressed turned fiercely.

"Be still—what do you know about me?" said he. "I tell you this casting upon a desolate, wretched island is fit crown for a life that has never seen a fair hope that has not turned to ashes in my grasp—that has endured more misery than one of your temperament has power to think about. Just heavens! I had but one feeble ray of comfort left in me—the hope of educating that boy to escape from such a life as mine. And this is the end of my hopes—wrecked, nearly naked and destitute, on a deserted, lonely island, to perish as miserably as I have lived—and you talk to me of the gratitude I owe!"

CHAPTER II.

TOM Harris dropped the limp little hand he held to gaze in pitying wonder upon the wild misery that haggard face depicted, and then said soothingly.

"Avast, there, shipmate! I know nothing about you, to be sure, but shiver my topsails if by-and-bye I can't point out something pleasant for you to look at. Jest about this time I'd thank you heartily to help me bring this poor thing back to life. You won't let her die now, will ye?—for if we're to stay here long she'll be the prettiest flower and sunbeam this place will have for us."

The boy crept along wonderingly to the sailor's side, and mechanically his father followed, and began chafing the polished little limbs, until with his earnest exertion came back to his face a calm, sad, but no longer bitter look.

"Go for a little more water, while I roll her to and fro," said he quietly.

After a sharp glance at his face Tom obeyed. When he returned the sufferer's blue eyes were open, and she was murmuring a few broken words, of which "Hannah, Hannah," were alone intelligible.

"Poor little thing!" said Tom; "that was the gal's name who took care of her. I've often talked with 'em on deck. She's gone, and so is the grand-looking gentleman, her father, maybe. Please God, there's one man left to see to her! As long as Tom Harris has a loaf in his locker or a cent in his pocket she shan't want—the lonesome, pretty little thing!" And with an awkward tenderness, inexpressibly touching, the rough sailor lifted the tiny childish hands to his lips—a token to register his silent vow.

Suddenly then the shipwrecked passenger, Paul Vernon, grasped with his thin soft fingers the hard, brown, sinewy hand of the weather-beaten tar.

"God bless you, honest soul!" said he. "I beg your pardon for my ill-humor. On my knees will I beg forgiveness of that overruling Power that has sent me here to be taught by you. Who knows but here my weary, tempest-tossed spirit will find peace and rest?"

He paused, overcome with emotion, while Tom, wringing his hand, said naively:

"I'm sure I'm much obleeged to you, sir, for I was a-puzzling my wits how I was ever to get along without anybody to help and cheer me up. Now I see all's right, and, to be sure, I think we've found a pretty snug berth. Anyhow, we wouldn't change with our poor shipmates, stark and cold in Davy Jones' locker. Now, you see, I was ashore in Injee nigh on to a year after the old 'British Queen' was wrecked in that tormented river o' sand-bars, the Hooghly, and I roamed pretty far into the country and I l'arned a powerful sight more'n I ever knew afore about those trees and plants. I see a bread-fruit tree right back of us, and if the worst comes to the worst, why, we'll have a pretty tolerable home here, I'll be bound. We we get tired of each other the children will make us happy as kings. Besides, I'm tolerable smart for pulling at the work, and I'm glad you're cheering up."

"What does he say, father?" ventured little Walter Vernon, timidly. "Oh, I'm so hungry for some bread. Let me find the tree."

"Wait a moment, my son; the little girl needs our first care, and no doubt Tom will say as I do, that when we explore the island it had better be as a united company."

"All we need to be afeard of, I'm thinking, is of poisonous sarpents. I'll run and strip up a nut, seeing as it's handy. We'll want something to please the poor little thing when she comes to, and take off her thoughts."

Tom disappeared in the luxurious undergrowth of tangled vines and shrubs, and almost immediately returned with a bunch of ripe bananas and a cocoa-nut. He flung the boy a generous share and with the rest he approached the little girl, who was looking around her in affright.

"Don't be afraid, dear little one. See what nice fruit I've brought you. You remember me—don't you know Tom, who made the little ship for you, and how poor Hannah laughed at it? You know Tom, don't you?"

She looked closely a moment, and then burst into tears.

"Good Tom, good Tom, carry me back to Hannah."

Tom's lip quivered.

"Oh, no, don't—that's a darling—don't cry; it makes poor Tom feel so bad to see you. If you'll be good and not cry, nor be asking about Hannah and the rest, I'll find lots o' pretty things for you."

The child still looked grieved and troubled, but Mr. Vernon took her tenderly in his arms, and Walter came shyly to offer her a nicely peeled banana, and she laid her head back on the friendly shoulder, smiled languidly, and in a few moments was sleeping sweetly.

As much relieved as a tired general might be who sees the last column of his victorious army filing off to rest and triumphant peace, Tom motioned for Mr. Vernon to lay her down, and leaving the boy to watch over her, the two men withdrew to a little distance.

By this time the clouds had swept away in airy columns swifter and more noiseless than those victorious troops alluded to, leaving their bright banner of blue spread out—a glorious canopy that smiled down upon the subsiding surf, the Eden-like island, and the shipwrecked group.

"I'm right glad to see the sun again," said Tom Harris, "though it makes me feel womanish to think o' the change since we see it last time. It's nigh about a week since the first storm caught the 'Petrel,' and I'm sure the cap'n never see sun or moon afterward. I heard the mate say they couldn't make out much about their position, because the wind shifted so often and blew so terribly. Well, well, the Lord's will be done; but I never dreamed you and I and these two little ones were to be spared from the gulf that swallowed all the rest."

Here Tom drew his horny hand across his eyes and heaved a deep sigh; then, with the press of working thought, added quite cheerfully:

"We can dry our clothes now, I suppose, after a fashion, but what we're to do for a change is more'n I can make out."

Despite his melancholy, Vernon could not forbear a laugh at Tom's puzzled, rueful face.

"At all events we shall be left to our own resources; neither tailors nor speculators will be likely to molest us."

"I'll hang up my jacket now. 'Twill do for the little girl when her pretty clothes are put in the sun. One thing sartin, I can make some native cloth by-and-bye, else I didn't learn right of old squaw Yellow Cheek."

"Make some cloth!" ejaculated his companion in astonishment.

TURKEY THEIR PREY.

Compact Looking to the Dismemberment of the Sultan's Domain.

Breslau dispatch: It is more than hinted in diplomatic circles here that Germany has consented to the partition of Turkey. From the highest of official sources the information comes that friendly relations have been established with Russia on a basis sounder on the surface than have existed since the days of the Napoleonic wars. This is coupled with the assertion that all existing treaties between the two powers have been confirmed. Thus is the present tour of the czar fraught with events that may change the face of European territory and transform the kingdom of the sultan, long hated by civilized Europe, into a mere dependency of the powers, if, indeed, it is not entirely obliterated from its place on the map. Although undertaken, as announced, mainly for his royal pleasure, diplomats have recognized that the czar's tour was one of the greatest importance politically. It is known that Prince Lobanoff, Russian minister for foreign affairs, who died so suddenly recently in Kieff, was a most earnest advocate of the trip. It was at his solicitation that Austria was the first power visited, and it is known that before his death he effected a treaty with that power by which Austria was to divide the larger portion of Turkey with Russia, taking the Balkan provinces for her principal share. This information, while not official, leaked out through unquestioned channels, and, as will be remembered, created a furor throughout Europe.

BURNING TRAIN'S RUN.

An Express Had to Run Six Miles For Help—Mail Destroyed.

GOSHEN, Ind., Sept. 12.—The Lake Shore through express, carrying mail and express from New York to Chicago, caught fire near Goshen, and thousands of dollars' worth of goods, with much mail matter, were destroyed. When the flames were discovered the train was slowed down and an effort made to extinguish them. It proved unavailing, and a wild run with a blazing train was made for Goshen, six miles away. The fire department was called and the fire was subdued, but not before much of the valuable expressage had been destroyed. The origin of the flames is supposed to have been spontaneous combustion.

IN TURKEY.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The press association announces that a private dispatch from Constantinople, confirms the rumor that the deposition of the sultan is being seriously debated by the powers and important developments are expected shortly.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A dispatch from Athens to the Daily Telegraph says: In response to a note of the powers, the sultan has now ordered an irade to be published commanding a summary cessation of the expulsion of the Armenians.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The Graphic's Odessa special says: Among the judges appointed on the special tribunal at Constantinople to try the cases arising from the Armenian massacre, there is not a single honest, upright man, all being notoriously corrupt and servile palace tools.

MARRIED AN "ANGEL."

Schweinfurth and Five of His Disciples Conform to the Laws.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 11.—Jacob Schweinfurth, the "Rockford Messiah," has at last consented to recognize the accepted proprieties and take to wife one of his "angels." He has married Mary Ann Tuttle at the Church of the Redeemer (Universalist). M. D. Shutter, pastor of the church, officiating. Four disciples followed the example of their leader. They were Albert C. Teft, who married a sister of Schweinfurth, and Will Weldon, whose bride was Bertha Olson. The ceremony was witnessed by C. C. Whitney, whose guest "the Messiah" has been during the summer; a brother of Schweinfurth's and a half dozen other friends.

Fitzsimmons Issues a Defi.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Robert Fitzsimmons, the pugilist, and Martin Julian, his manager, gave a dinner at which James J. Corbett was challenged by Fitzsimmons. Dave Holland was made temporary stake holder and $5,000 forfeit was placed in his hands. It is to remain up for thirty days.

Silver Formal Notification.

LINCOLN, Sept. 10.—William Jennings Bryan has been formally notified that he was nominated for president by the national silver organization in convention at St. Louis, July 22. Chairman Groot made the notification speech. Mr. Bryan responded briefly.

Has Stolen Millions.

BERLIN, Sept. 12.—Herr Schuster, director of the Handels Gesellchaft, has been arrested upon the charge of embezzlement. The amount of Herr Schuster's defalcation is estimated at 3,000,000 marks.

How the Dear Women Love One Another—Darktown Logic—A Grave Situation in Politics or How the Sheriff Is Going to Get Elected.

HAVE crowns and
I have kisses,
I have diamonds
and hearts,
I have titles and caresses,
But they are but counterparts;
And my toys I juggle freely,
Caring nothing
when they
For to me 'tis very easy
Other counterparts to make.
So I toss them hither, thither,
Very few are ever lost,
But the mortals for them striving Seldom realize their cost.

Yet, well hidden in my hamper,
Is a priceless little gem,
Bringing happiness whenever,
In a lover's diadem,
I affix a ray eternal
Of it's radiance divine,
For the heart that knows its splendor
Knows that I have made it mine.

Why They Fume.

They were laughing over at the court house about the way certain of the candidates for sheriff were raising merry tribulation. It is all because somebody told them that one of the clerks in the probate office was working for a rival candidate. This somebody claims to have overheard in a dialogue which runs something like this:

Candidate for marriage license, approaching window:

"I like to get married."

Affable Clerk — Certainly. Your name?

"Adolph Linkenhammer."

"And age?"

"Thirty-two."

"The lady's name and age?"

"Mary Schwartzentroop; twenty-four."

"Yes. Are you a voter, Mr. Linkerhammer?"

"Oh, yes. Six years now."

"Where do you live?"

"Near Jackson Street."

"Pretty well acquainted there?"

"Yes, I know a good many."

"Ever take any interest in politics?"

"Oh, sometimes."

"Well, here are a few of Mr. McConnell's cards. He's a man we want for sheriff. Do what you can for him. I'll have the license ready for you in half a moment."

That's the story that makes the other candidates froth at the mouth.

Sarsaparilla Sense.

Any sarsaparilla is sarsaparilla. True. So any tea is tea. So any flour is flour. But grades differ. You want the best. It's so with sarsaparilla. There are grades. You want the best. If you understood sarsaparilla as well as you do tea and flour it would be easy to determine. But you don't. How should you? When you are going to buy a commodity whose value you don't know, you pick out an old established house to trade with, and trust their experience and reputation. Do so when buying sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been on the market 50 years. Your grandfather used Ayer's. It is a reputable medicine. There are many Sarsaparillas—but only one Ayer's. It cures.

If he had bought a 5 cent piece he would have been able to take it with him.

There is no use buying more than a 5 cent piece of "Battle Ax." A 10 cent piece is most too big to carry, and the 5 cent piece is nearly as large as the 10 cent piece of other high grade tobaccos.

COUGHS, COLDS, LA GRIPPE and THROAT TROUBLES SPEEDILY CURED.

Miss Nellie Penoyer, 1536 So. Tenth St., Omaha, Neb., writes: "Have used your Dr. Kay's Lung Balm for a severe case of La Grippe. Two doses gave relief. My lungs were very sore and in taking the Dr. Kay's Lung Balm I found that it stopped any desire to cough at once. The soreness on my lungs and in my head soon disappeared. It is very pleasant and easy to take and while it does not cause sickness at the stomach, like many cough remedies. It cures quicker than any I have ever tried.

Dr. Kay's Lung Balm

It cures every kind of cough. Sold by druggists or sent by mail for 25 cts. It is perfectly safe for all ages and a sure cure for all lung troubles. Send address for booklet. It has many valuable receipts and gives symptoms and treatment for nearly all diseases and many have said they would not take $5.00 for it if they couldn't get another. THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

A story to be interesting should take an abrupt turn just before the close.

Hal E. Ballou is raising a hullaballo as a congressional candidate in Kansas.

The world is too full of people who mistake abuse for ridicule and profanity for wit.

Kansas has a candidate named Frogleg. He ought to be able to get there on the jump.

Think of the New Jersey bride who kissed the entire wedding party and realized $100 for charity.

Mr. Andree has postponed his balloon voyage to the north pole till next year. Mr. Andree has time to learn a heap in twelve months.

Henry Wilkieson of Jefferson, S. D., went to a doctor the other day to have a porous plaster removed. The doctor gave it a jerk and pulled off $200 worth of skin with it. At least that is the amount Wilkieson has sued for.

Odd election bets are beginning to appear. At English, Ind., the other day Samuel Condon, a stone mason, who is a bachelor, and Mrs. McKinley, who is a prosperous widow, made a novel wager. She agrees to carry the hod or mix mortar for one week if her namesake is elected, while Mr. Condon agrees to build a chimney for the widow if Bryan is elected.

The "largest cave in the world" has just been discovered near Hudson, Mo., and what is better still, this wonderful cave has stalactites that are formed of glittering gold. There is no end to the pure onyx in sight, while the numerous streams that flow through the beautiful caverns are filled with many interesting specimens of fish. Explorers are still exploring, and no knowing what they will yet discover. Strange, isn't it?

The inhabitants of Long Island, in the vicinity of Freeport, have had a very merry time of it for a few days. A tiger escaped from a menagerie and roamed about the country on a prodigious spree. As a matter of fact, he only feasted on dogs, but the country people had not positive assurance that he would not start in on human beings some time when the dog supply got low. Now the circus people have offered a very handsome reward and the farmers are out "en masse" to try and recapture the big beast.

The Anti-Bicycle league, or whatever Mrs. Smith's organization is called, has gained a powerful ally in Li Hung Chang, who has expressed himself in no uncertain words as to what he thinks of women riding wheels. He says it is most immodest for them to do so and that it should not be permitted. Incidentally he asked the person interviewing him—it was a woman—how old she was, and when he was given to understand that we went a little slow about inquiries of that sort, he roared with Homeric laughter.

An English paper says: The large expenditures of the Spanish government upon warships is attracting a good deal of attention. The marine department has given out a contract for two torpedo boat destroyers at a price equivalent to some £60,000 dearer than the tender of one of the leading firms in this class of naval construction in Great Britain on the plea of quicker delivery. It is also publicly stated, and repeated in the press without contradiction on the part of the government organs, that the minister of marine has purchased from a firm of shipbuilders in Genoa two cruisers of under 7,000 tons displacement, with a speed of twenty miles, for the enormous sum of 42,000,000 pesetas, representing at the exchange of the day over £700,000 sterling for each vessel. Nothing short of panic can explain such prodigal expenditure of public money.

England had a misunderstanding with the sultan of Zanzibar, Said Kahlid, last week, and her warships shelled that monarch's palace. It was set on fire and destroyed. The sultan was routed, of course, and England is in practical possession of the island. Zanzibar lies in the Indian ocean, off the coast of British East Africa, and is, together with the island of Pemba, an English protectorate. Zanzibar has an area of 625 square miles, with an estimated population of 125,000. The inhabitants are nearly all Mohammedans. The exports, including those from the mainland, are valued at $4,000,000. Under an arrangement with England, a regular government has been formed, composed of four Englishmen and two Zanzibari. The territories held by the sultan on the main land were part sold to Germany and part leased to the British East Africa company for fifty years.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

FLANAGAN FOUND GUILTY.

Clarinda Murder Trial Ends in a Verdict Against Defendant.

CLARINDA, Sept. 18.—The jury in the case of Thomas Flanagan for the murder of Henry Carmine, brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree. The murder occurred at Blanchard, July 20. Carmine had lived in the lower part of Flanagan's house. He had paid no rent, although frequently urged to do so. Flanagan brought suit to secure immediate possession, and was defeated, the court holding that he must give the customary thirty days' notice. This angered Flanagan beyond all reason, and he shot Carmine while the latter was getting a bucket of water. Mrs. Carmine ran out to help her husband, and she too was shot, but has recovered.

LIMIT TO A RAILROAD'S DUTY.

Not Expected to Always Keep Children From its Tracks.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Sept. 18.—Judge Shiras, of the United States court, after hearing the evidence of the plaintiff in the case of Baker, guardian, against the Milwaukee railroad, decided that no liability existed and took the case from the jury. The person injured was a child only two and one-half years old. The court held that the company was not expected to exercise such care as would prevent an accident to a child that might happen upon the track, even at a point where grown persons were known to pass frequently.

Colonel Guest the Winner.

DES MOINES, Sept. 20.—The long controversy over the brigadier generalship of the First brigade, Iowa National Guard, has culminated in an order being issued from the office of Adjutant General Wright assigning Col. James A. Guest, of Burlington, to the command of the First brigade as brigadier general. His rank dates from February 24, the day on which the contested election was held. Ex-Adjutant General Prime, the candidate who opposed Col. Guest, will commence proceedings to oust Col. Guest from the command of the First brigade.

Swindler Indicted.

CRESTON, Sept. 18.—The grand jury returned an indictment in the case of the state of Iowa vs. C. W. White, charging him with obtaining money under false pretenses. White, it will be remembered, came to Creston and swindled several private parties and two banks out of money. He pretended to be a wealthy Indiana farmer and secured favors through his representations. He was caught and held to the grand jury.

Clipped Her Hair Off.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Sept. 19.—While Miss Grace Griffin and another young lady were returning home from prayer meeting in Marion, a couple of fellows ran up behind them and with a pair of scissors clipped off Miss Griffin's hair, which was hanging down her back in a braid. Before the girl could give the alarm the miscreants had disappeared in the darkness.

A Peculiar Point Settled.

DES MOINES, Sept. 18.—Attorney General Remley has submitted an interesting opinion relative to splits in political parties. He holds that where a political party splits on any question and forms two factions, each claiming the original name, the one which files papers with the county auditor first is entitled to the use of the original name.

Sad Death at Lost Nation.

LOST NATION, Sept. 18.—Anthony Welsh, a farmer living five and one-half miles south of town, was found dead on the railroad track, the body being badly mangled. He was about 50 years old and leaves a wife and seven children. His only companion when he met his sad end was a whisky bottle found in his pocket.

Nearly Drowned at Creston.

CRESTON, Sept. 19.—Charles Mann came near drowning in a creek south of town. The heavy rains had swollen the creek out of its banks and Mann's team was caught in the rushing waters, and he was thrown into the stream, where he remained for nearly two hours, assistance arriving just in time to save his life.

Killed by a Train.

BURLINGTON, Sept. 18.—Fred Lineman, an old citizen of Burlington, was walking on the Burlington road near town, holding an umbrella in front of him to keep off the rain, when he was struck and instantly killed by a freight engine. He leaves a wife and eight daughters.

Ancient Tooth Found.

DUBUQUE, Sept. 19.—The flood of last May unearthed an interesting relic in Catfish creek. It is a tooth of the long extinct Elephas Americanus, or wooly elephant. The tooth is nearly a ten-inch cube, smooth on the ends, but ridged on the sides.

LAND CASES DECIDED.

Finding Returned in the O'Brien and Dickinson County Disputes.

DES MOINES, Sept. 20.—Register Evans of the land office has just decided three of the O'Brien and Dickinson county land cases. The cases were entitled as follows: Max Thorman vs. Marion A. Gisher, John F. and Jessie C. Brett vs. John Meisterling and John Langenhorst vs. Y. P. A. Holm. A tract of 160 acres of land was involved in each suit. The ruling in either of these cases sufficed for the other two, as the same points were involved. Register Evans holds there were no adverse claims, and that all of the contestants were bona fide purchasers and should now be allowed to enter the land from the government by right of preference. More than 150 cases await Register Evans' decision.

BANK FAILURE AT VINTON.

Watson & Sons Go Under With a Quarter of a Million Liabilities.

VINTON, Sept. 19.—The banking house of S. H. Watson & Sons, established some forty years ago, made a general assignment to Mat Gaasch for the benefit of all creditors. The liabilities are estimated at $250,000 and assets at $350,000. All depositors and other creditors will be paid in full. The assignment caused considerable excitement, but will not effect other banks in town.

ANOTHER BANK BREAKS.

West Liberty Concern Goes to the Wall With Big Assets.

MUSCATINE, Sept. 21.—A. Ball & Co., bankers of West Liberty, made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. Inability to realize on assets was the cause of the failure. The bank is fourteen years old, a private institution, and had an extensive business. Its assets are given as $200,000, with but $60,000 liabilities. It is said it will be able to pay dollar for dollar in time.

Last of the Logan Wreck.

LOGAN, Sept. 21.—The Harrison county grand jury has adjourned. No bills were found against Montgomery or Reid, the engineer and conductor of the special that collided with No. 38, July 11.

KELLER KILLED HER.

Iowa Ranchman Murders His Wife and Suicides.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 19.—S. J. Keller, a ranchman from Iowa, came to St. Joseph in search of his runaway wife. He located her in the south part of the city and drawing a revolver shot her dead, after which he turned the revolver on himself, shooting the top of his head off.

BREVITIES.

Fire recently Mason City entirely destroyed the dry goods store of John R. Walter. It is supposed to have started from spontaneous combustion. Stock valued at $10,000; insurance $9,500. Damage to building about $500. Insured.

Joe Ellis, of Given, committed suicide a few days ago by shooting himself with a revolver. He was desperately in love with one Jennie Culirt, of whom he became jealous, and it weighed upon his mind so he decided to end his life. He left a long letter to the public, setting forth his sufferings and making several requests. He was a young man, 26 years old, and was unusually well fixed for one of his age. He owned considerable coal land in and around Given.

Atlantic dispatch: Information has been filed against eight places for selling liquor to minors and contrary to law. This has caused considerable of a flurry, as John Hudspeth, a criminal lawyer, well informed as to their tricks, has been retained by the plaintiff. Under school law, each found guilty pays one hundred dollars, fifty of which goes to plaintiff. The defendants are Windsor, Occidental, Atlantic House, Rudolph Lorenson, Chas. Wolfinger, Ben Wiseman, Wm. Trede, Lit Collins.

Burlington dispatch: I. Pfadnhauer, a well known character living near Burlington, aspired to the hand of one or another of four or five handsome girls living in his neighborhood. These girls did not take kindly to him, however, and preferred the society of Al Swallow, a prominent and well-to-do farmer of that locality. This caused a wild sensation of jealousy to spring up in Pfadnhauer's heart and he determined to avenge himself on Swallow. He went by night and cut down 700 plum trees on Swallow's farm, doing several thousand dollars' worth of damages. Detectives run Pfadnhauer to earth by means of his foot prints and other positive evidence, and he was placed in jail. It took six officers to hold him and he succeeded in nearly denuding himself of clothing in his desperate resistance. A large crowd of people from the neighborhood of Pfadnhauer's desperate deed accompanied him and the officers to Burlington and created much excitement on the streets in their denunciation of his crime.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

SPANIARDS IN CUBA.

Have a Rather Peculiar Way of Managing an Army.

HAVANA, Sept. 20.—In a report to the Japanese government, a spy who has been in Cuba for some time writes as follows: "It seems there is an understanding between Weyler and his soldiers to do no fighting. The former is too busy figuring out the profits on his big contracts for supplying the army with food and clothing to attend to military operations. He never goes outside of the city walls. He is captain general in name only; acting as governor in arresting unarmed citizens and giving civil orders. The army is run on the go-as-you-please plan. Occasionally troops go scouting and return, having killed some stray peasants. They make out false reports of a supposed fight with the object of getting promotion. Since the rebellion started over 1,700 promotions have been made and about 8,000 medals and decorations awarded for supposed defeats of rebels; nevertheless these continue their unmolested work of invasion and destruction.

ENGLAND BACKING DOWN.

Her Resistance to the Sultan Means European War.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The events of the latter part of the week have demonstrated beyond any possibility of doubt that unless Great Britian is prepared to face a general European war nothing is left for her to do but, as stated in a semi-official communication from the foreign office, to stand aside and to hope for a more satisfactory state of affairs. This backdown on the part of Great Britian is due to the fact that the cabinets of the continental powers have concluded that it is more prudent to continue the recent massacres at Constantinople than to raise the eastern question in a forcible manner, and as the Marquis of Salisbury recognizes, it is strength and not sentiment that rules the world. Great Britian cannot face the combined fleets of Russia, France, Germany and Austria, even with the assistance of Italy. Therefore Great Britian must stand aside, and unless Russia prevents it the Turks will have a free hand in the settlement of the Armenian difficulty by the sword and torch or by any other means the porte may think fit to adopt.

LI GOES HOME.

Famous Chinaman Leaves America Fusiladed by Firecrackers.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 18.—Li Hung Chang has brought his visit in America to a close and has departed for home, sailing on the steamer Hong Kong. As the steamer left the wharf the Chinese started a fusilade of firecrackers, which was kept up for over an hour.

A SIGNIFICANT ANSWER.

Sultan Replies to England by Inspecting the Forts of the Dardanelles.

VIENNA, Sept. 19.—The Neu Freie Presse says the inspection of the forts of the Dardanelles by the Russian general is the sultan's reply to England's efforts to force him to abdicate and that it is also the response of Russia, which has taken the sultan under protection.

The Texas in Danger.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 17.—The battleship Texas, which left the North Atlantic squadron for the purpose of getting a supply of torpedoes from Newport, struck a rock while coming into the harbor and is hard and fast. She rests on the rock amidships, and resisted all attempts made by the tug Aquidnetk to dislodge her. The position of the vessel is a dangerous one, and should a storm set in it would go hard with her. The Texas is a second-class two-turret battleship of 6,315 tons displacement and 8,000 horse power, and cost $3,500,000.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 18.—The United States battleship Texas, which was grounded on the rocks ashore here, has been floated uninjured.

Maine Goes Republican.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 17.—Reed's plurality for congress is 10,556; Dingley's, 11,000; Milliken's, 12,000, and Boutelle's 15,000. The legislative vote shows that all the senators are republicans, and so far only four democrats are certainly known to be elected to the house.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 18.—The complete returns of the recent election are at hand. The total vote was: Powers, republican, 83,573; Frank, democrat, 34,841; republican plurality, 48,372, against 12,503 in 1892.

New York Democrats.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 18.—The democratic state convention nominated John Boyd Thacher for governor, Judge Wilbur F. Porter for lieutenant governor and Robert C. Titus for judge of the court of appeals. The platform unreservedly endorses Bryan and Sewall.

TURKISH MUTINY.

Row at the Sultan's Palace Results in the Death of 200 Combatants.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—A telegram from Constantinople states that troops on duty at the Yildizkiosk, the residence of the sultan, mutinied. The minister of war was summoned to restore discipline. He took with him the military cadets and two detachments of trusty soldiers. When the minister arrived at the scene he ordered the mutineers to lay down their arms. This they refused to do, and a fight resulted when the minister attempted to enforce his orders. The fighting lasted for half an hour, at the end of which time the minister forced his way into the palace. According to the dispatch, over 200 of the combatants were killed. Attempts to confirm the above have been without result.

Arkansas Official Returns.

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 18—Complete official returns from the recent state election show the following vote for governor: Jones, democrat, 91,124; Remmel, republican, 35,936; Files, populist, 13,989; Miller, prohibition, 747; total votes, 140,120.

The Best Half Mile Unpaced.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Eddie Bald, the bicycle rider, broke the world's unpaced record for a half mile at Manhattan Beach. Time, 1:00 1-5, starting at scratch.

Kerma on the Nile is Taken.

KERMA ON THE NILE, Sept. 21.—The Anglo-Egyptian expedition has occupied Kerma and is now only 30 miles from Dongola.

TERSE NEWS.

On the 14th letters were sent to Messrs. Bryan and Watson formally notifying them of their nomination for the presidency and vice-presidency respectively, by the people's party.

A Rome correspondent says peace has been concluded by Italy with Abyssinia. The restriction of the limits of Erythria was also demanded. In exchange for the opening up of commercial relations, Russia accepted the conditions.

The United States minister has declared to the Spanish government that the United States is most favorably disposed toward Spain, but that, owing to the extent of the United States coast line, she is unable to prevent the departure of filibusters for the island of Cuba.

Chicago dispatch: Complete fusion between the democrats and populists on state and electoral tickets has been effected. Under the agreement reached, the resignations of three democratic electors were tendered and accepted, and the vacancies filled by populists. Andrew L. Maxwell, populist, was substituted for state auditor in place of Gore, withdrawn.

A correspondent at Rio Janeiro, telegraphs that the Jacobin party is preparing to inaugurate anew the anti-Italian agitation. It is feared the army will aid the turbulent faction and that grave conflicts will occur. It is rumored that a revolution is being organized by the Jacobins and the monarchist party and the Italian question will serve as a base for an insurrection against the government. The authorities are aware of the rumors and are taking measures to prevent the plans of the agitators from coming to a head.

The Cuban insurgents headed by Juan Delgado are reported to have burned farms in Gatera, Chinchal, Tiraboque, on the canal, and seven settlements near Santiago de Las Vegas. The insurgents burned several farms at Guira Molena, in Havana province, because the owners refused to pay the taxes levied by the insurgents. Near Palos, Matanzas, the insurgents burned the tobacco plantations of Herculano and Esperanza, causing a loss of $400,000, in the last few days. They also burned a large amount of property near Puerto Principe.

Washington dispatch: The Spanish government has yielded to the demands of the United States for a trial by civil court of the Competitor prisoners. The Spanish government reached this conclusion some time ago, but delayed the formal announcement of its decision until after the cortes had adjourned in order to escape criticism from that body for making concessions to the United States. The Competitor prisoners have been in prison under death sentence imposed by drumhead court-martial for nearly five months. It is a matter of considerable relief to the authorities to know that Spain found it expedient to comply with the demands of the United States in regard to these men. For some time past it has been considered one of the most troublesome questions in the dispute between the two countries. They will, however, watch with some concern the effect of the decision in Spain and among the Spanish in Cuba. It is understood that this action will be a great disappointment to Weyler and the other Spaniards who were anxious for the execution of the men as an example for others engaged in filibustering.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon.

Washington, Sept. 20, 1896.—If the clarion note of this sermon, delivered at the national capital, could sound through Christendom, it would give everything good a new start. Dr. Talmage's text was Romans, 13:12: "The day is at hand."

Back from the mountains and the seaside, and the springs, and the farmhouse, your cheeks bronzed and your spirits lighted, I hail you home again with the words of Gehazi to the Shunammite: "Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child?" On some faces I see the mark of recent grief, but all along the track of tears I see the story of resurrection and reunion when all tears are done; the deep ploughing of the keel, followed by the flash of the phosphorescence. Now that I have asked you in regard to your welfare, you naturally ask how I am. Very well, thank you. Whether it was the bracing air of the mountains, or a bath in the surf of Long Island beach, or whether it is the joy of standing in this great group of warm-hearted friends, or whether it is a new appreciation of the goodness of God, I cannot tell. I simply know I am happy. It was said that John Moffatt, the great Methodist preacher, occasionally got fast in his sermon, and to extricate himself would cry "Hallelujah!" I am in no such predicament to-day, but I am full of the same rhapsodic ejaculation. Starting out this morning on a new ecclesiastical year, I want to give you the keynote of my next twelve months' ministry. I want to set it to the tunes of "Antioch," "Ariel," and "Coronation." I want to put a new trumpet stop into my sermons. We do wrong if we allow our personal sorrows to interfere with the glorious fact that the kingdom is coming. We are wicked if we allow apprehension of national disaster to put down our faith in God and in the mission of our American people. The God who hath been on the side of this nation since the Fourth of July, 1776, will see to it that this nation shall not commit suicide on November 3d, 1896. By the time the unparalleled harvests of this summer get down to the seaboard we shall be standing in a sunburst of national prosperity that will paralyze the pessimists who by their evil prophecies are blaspheming the God who hath blest this nation as he hath blest no other.

In all our Christian work you and I want more of the element of gladness. No man had a right to say that Christ never laughed. Do you suppose that he was glum at the wedding in Cana of Galilee? Do you suppose that Christ was unresponsive when the children clambered over his knee and shoulder at his own invitation? Do you suppose that the Evangelist meant nothing when he said of Christ: "He rejoiced in spirit?" Do you believe that the Divine Christ who pours all the waters over the rocks at Vernal Falls, Yosemite, does not believe in the sparkle and gallop and tumultuous joy and rusing raptures of human life? I believe not only that the morning laughs, and that the mountains laugh, and that the seas laugh, and that the cascades laugh, but that Christ laughed. Moreover, take a laugh and a tear into an alembic, and assay them, and test them, and analyze them, and you will often find as much of the pure gold of religion in a laugh as in a tear. Deep spiritual joy always shows itself in facial illumination. John Wesley said he was sure of a good religious impression being produced because of what he calls the great gladness he saw among the people. Godless merriment is blasphemy anywhere, but expression of Christian joy is appropriate everywhere.

Moreover, the outlook of the world ought to stir us to gladness. Astronomers disturbed many people by telling them that there was danger of stellar collision. We were told by these astronomers that there are worlds coming very near together, and that we shall have plagues, and wars, and tumults, and perhaps the world's destruction. Do not be scared. If you have ever stood at a railroad center, where ten, or twenty, or thirty rail tracks cross each other, and seen that by the movement of the switch one or two inches the train shoots this way and that, without colliding, then you may understand how fifty worlds may come within an inch of disaster, and that inch be as good as a million miles. If a human switch-tender can shoot the trains this way and that without harm, cannot the hand that for thousands of years has upheld the universe, keep our little world out of harm's way? Christian geologists tell us that this world was millions of years in building. Well, now, I do not think God would take millions of years to build a house which was to last only six thousand years. There is nothing in the world or outside the world, terrestrial or astronomical, to excite dismay. I wish that some stout gospel breeze might scatter all the malaria of human foreboding. The sun rose this morning at about six o'clock, and I think that is just about the hour in the world's history. "The day is at hand."

The first ray of the dawn I see in the gradual substitution of diplomatic skill for human butchery. Within the last twenty-five years there have been international differences which would have brought a shock of arms in any other day, but which were peacefully adjusted, the pen taking the place of the sword. The Venezuelan controversy in any other age of the world would have brought shock of arms, but now is being so quietly adjusted that no one knows just how it is being settled.

I may be mistaken, but I hope that the last war between Christian nations is ended. Barbarians may mix their war-paint, and Chinese and Japanese go into wholesale massacres, and Afghan and Zulu hurl poisoned arrows, but I think Christian nations have gradually learned that war is disaster to victor as well as vanquished, and that almost anything bought by blood is bought at too dear a price. I wish to God this nation might be a model of willingness for arbitration. No need of killing another Indian. No need of sacrificing any more brave Gen. Custers. Stop exasperating the red man, and there will be no more arrows shot out from the ambushments. A general of the United States army in high repute throughout this land, and who, perhaps, had been in more Indian wars than any other officer, and who had been wounded again and again in behalf of our government in battle against the Indians, told me that all the wars that had ever occurred between Indians and white men had been provoked by white men, and that there was no exception to the rule. While we are arbitrating with Christian nations, let us toward barbarians carry ourselves in a manner unprovocative of contest.

I find another ray of dawn in the compression of the world's distances. What a slow, snail-like, almost impossible thing would have been the world's rectification with fourteen hundred millions of population and no facile means of communication; but now, through telegraphy for the eye and telephonic intimacy for the ear, and through steamboating and railroading, the twenty-five thousand miles of the world's circumference are shriveling up into insignificant brevity! Hong Kong is nearer to New York than a few years ago New Haven was; Bombay, Moscow, Madras, Melbourne within speaking distance. Purchase a telegraphic chart, and by blue lines see the telegraphs of the land, and by the red lines the cables under the ocean. You see what opportunity this is going to give for the final movements of Christianity.

One more ray of the dawn I see in facts chronological and mathematical. Come now, do not let us do another stroke of work until we have settled one matter. What is going to be the final issue of this great contest between sin and righteousness? Which is going to prove himself the stronger, God or Diabolus? Is this world going to be all garden or all desert? Now let us have that matter settled. If we believe Isaiah, and Ezekiel and Hosea, and Micah, and Malachi, and John, and Peter, and Paul, and the Lord himself, we believe that it is going to be all garden. But let us have it settled. Let us know whether we are working on toward a success or toward a dead failure. If there is a child in your house sick, and you are sure he is going to get well, you sympathize with present pains, but all the foreboding is gone. If you are in a cyclone off the Florida coast, and the captain assures you the vessel is staunch and the winds are changing for a better quarter, and he is sure he will bring you safe into the harbor, you patiently submit to present distress with the thought of safe arrival. Now I want to know whether we are coming on toward dismay, darkness and defeat, or on toward light and blessedness. You and I believe the latter, and if so, every year we spend is one year subtracted from the world's woe, and every event that passes, whether bright or dark, brings us one event nearer a happy consummation, and by all that is inexorable in chronology and mathematics I commend you to good cheer and courage. If there is anything in arithmetic, if you subtract two from five and leave three, then by every rolling sun we are coming on toward a magnificent terminus. Then every winter passed is one severity less for our poor world. Then every summer gone by brings us nearer unfading arborescence. Put your algebra down on the top of your Bible and rejoice.

If it is nearer morning at three o'clock than it is at two, if it is nearer morning at four o'clock than it is at three, then we are nearer the dawn of the world's deliverance. God's clock seems to go very slowly, but the pendulum swings, and the hands move, and it will yet strike noon. The sun and the moon stood still once; they will never stand still again until they stop forever. If you believe arithmetic as well as your Bible, you must believe we are nearer the dawn. "The day is at hand."

Beloved people, I preach this sermon because I want you to toil with the sunlight in your faces. I want you old men to understand before you die that all the work you did for God while yet your ear was alert and your foot fleet is going to be counted up in the final victories. I want all these younger people to understand, that when they toil for God they always win the day; that all prayers are answered and all Christian work is in some way effectual, and that the tide is setting in the right direction, and that all heaven is on our side—saintly, cherubic, archangelic, omnipotent, chariot and throne, doxology and procession, principalities and dominion, he who hath the moon under his feet, and all the armies of heaven on white horses.

Brother! brother! all I am afraid of is, not that Christ will lose the battle, but that you and I will not get into it quick enough to do something worthy of our blood-bought immortality. O Christ, how shall I meet thee, thou of the scarred brow and the scarred back and the scarred hand and the scarred foot and the scarred breast, if I have no scars or wounds gotten in thy service? It shall not be so. I step out to-day in front of the battle. Come on, ye foes of God, I dare you to the combat! Come on, with pens dipped in malignancy. Come on, with tongues forked and viperine. Come on with types soaked in the scum of the eternal pit. I defy you! Come on! I bare my brow, I uncover my heart. Strike! I cannot see my Lord until I have been hurt for Christ. If we do not suffer with him on earth, we cannot be glorified with him in heaven. Take good heart. On! On! On! See! the skies have brightened! See! the hour is about to come. Pick out all the cheeriest of the anthems. Let the orchestra string their best instruments. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand."

World's Increasing Population.

The astonishing growth of European cities in the last twenty years is but part of a movement in population which is general throughout civilized countries. It is certainly unprecedented in history.

In this country the increase from 50,000,000 to 70,000,000 in less than two decades is paralleled by Germany, which has increased from 30,000,000 to 52,000,000 since the Franco-Prussian war. England shows a like increase, confined chiefly to the cities. While Ireland, Italy and Spain are not so responsive to the movement, it is for causes too well understood to make their cases seem exceptional to the rule that the great scientific and mechanical improvements of the century are making it possible for the world to produce and support a larger population than was dreamed of even by the most pronounced opponents of Malthusianism in their controversies with the ignorant theorists who believed that the limit of population had been or was about to be reached. According to Mulhall, the total population of the earth in the time of Augustus Caesar did not exceed 54,000,000, so that in the United States we have now more people than the earth contained when the empire of the Caesars was at its greatest. According to the same authority the population of Europe was only 50,000,000 in the fifteenth century, while now it is estimated at over 357,000,000 people, whose average of living is far higher than that of the age of Augustus or than that of the fifteenth century. It is becoming a more and more self-evident proposition that the increase of civilization is not only accompanied by, but is dependent on, an increase in population. And no fact in economic history is of more far-reaching importance.—New York Press.

Electric Fans for the Sick Room.

Such weatheer as Philadelphia has recently experienced while enervating enough to healthy people, is particularly prostrating to those in ill health, and some scheme of obtaining a cool draught of air in the sick room is, in many cases, a matter of great importance. Obviously one of the best ways to secure this is by means of an electric fan, but, unfortunately, an electric circuit with which to operate it is usually not available. To overcome this difficulty a Philadelphia company rents an outfit consisting of a storage battery and electric fan, which will run continuously for more than a week at a time without attention, and which may be then replaced by another and the discharged battery sent back to be recharged. Though this business of renting storage batteries for such purposes is a new one, it is undoubtedly destined to wide usage in this and other directions. For instance, many people would be glad to have a fan in the dining room during this extremely oppressive weather, and this company affords a means to secure this with slight expense and no trouble.—Philadelphia Record.

NEW PEACE ALLIANCE.

Proposition for America, England and Italy to Suppress the Sultan.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—The St. James Gazette publishes a leading editorial, headed: "A New Triple Alliance." It points out the menacing tone of the continental semi-official press on the subject of Turkey, and says: "We are openly threatened with joint hostile European action if we interfere (in Turkey) against the will of the powers. But there is one combination which British statesmanship might effect. Two states which have little to gain from Russia could act with us and end the tension. The United States and Italy are both understood to be friendly to Russia, nevertheless, neither is yet too deeply involved to be able to assume an independent attitude under British inspiration. Why should not England, the United States and Italy form a new driebund? Alone of all the nations of the earth the people of the United States can understand the impulse which can drive England to war in order to suppress tyranny or rescue the oppressed. Plenty of Americans would regard with enthusiasm the spectacle of the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes floating side by side in the Bosphorus to back up their joint demands." Continuing, the St. James Gazette points out that Italy is ready to join in this matter if invited. The article concludes: "It might be expected that the Russian combination would go to pieces at the mere aspect of this genuine league of peace, and that the new driebund might lead to a fresh grouping of the powers and the delivery of Europe both from Turkish misrule and the dangerous thralldom to Russia into which it is sinking."

KILLED BY A WILD ENGINE.

Pay Car Smashed Near Indianapolis Causes Several Deaths.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 19.—Near Connersville, on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton road, a wild engine ran into a pay car. Four were killed and seven injured. A pay car was following a freight. Both were running as extras. The freight stopped at Longwood, put a part of the train on the siding, taking the rest to Salter's switch. The crew took the engine and started back to Longwood. A mile and a half east they met the pay car. It was down grade and they found it impossible to stop. The engines met with a terrible crash and the pay car was thrown on the side in a ditch.

LYNCHED HIM.

Ben Morris Taken From Jail by Citizens.

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 18.—The bitter feeling against Ben Morris, one of the negroes who murdered John Ruckman, a prominent cattle dealer, culminated in a lynching at Watonga, Okla. The enraged citizens stormed the jail, overpowered the jailer, dragged the terrified negro forth, strung him up to the nearest tree, and left his body hanging there. The entire Anti-Horse Thief association is scouring the country for his accomplice, who, if caught, will meet the same fate as Morris.

NEW RECORD BREAKER.

Star Pointer Wins Hard Won Laurels from Robert J. and Agan.

MEDFORD, Mass., Sept. 19.—Star Pointer at Majestic Park not only beat two accredited faster horses—Robert J., 2:01½, and Frank Agan, 2:03¼—but paced the three fastest heats ever made in competition, the time being 2:02½, 2:03½ and 2:03¾, an average of 2:03¼. He also lowered the world's records for the fastest first heat ever paced, 2:02½, as well as the records for the fastest quarter and half, 29¾ and 59¾, respectively.

Omaha Bank Failure.

OMAHA, Sept. 19.—The Midland State Bank, a state affair, closed its doors and requested the board to take charge of the bank. This action was taken at a session of the directors. The state bank examiner was at once placed in charge. The officers of the bank stated that the bank had been closed for the reason that the depositors had been withdrawing their accounts for the purpose of hoarding.

Three New American Boats.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—Secretary Herbert has authorized Acting Secretary McAdoo to proceed to make the awards and let the boats go, one to Cramp & Sons, of Philadelphia, at $2,650,000, one to Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co. of Virginia, at $2,595,000, and one to the Union Iron Works, of San Francisco, at $2,674,950, as recommended by the board of bureau chiefs.

Riots at Constantinople.

ATHENS, Sept. 20.—A dispatch from Constantinople states that a number of Softas (theological students) and members of the young Turkey party had a desperate fight at Galata. Fifteen of the combatants were killed. The dispatch adds that many of the archives of the British embassy have been placed for safety on the British guardship in the Bosphorus.

FOUGHT FOR HIS COUNTRY.

From the Tribune, Colfax, Iowa.

Mr. Jacob Ulrich, of Colfax, Ia., is probably as well known and highly respected as any man in Jasper county. He served 3 years and 6 months in the war, first in the 26th N. Y. and then in the 3rd N. Y. His war experiences have been the cause of many years of suffering. Often his clothes and feet were wet for weeks at a time and he slept night after night on the damp ground and such exposure brought on rheumatism. It first attacked his right leg and continued to trouble him more and more. Remedy after remedy was applied but none seemed to do any good whatever. About three years ago a circular was sent him by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Schenectady, N. Y., recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a cure. Being a native of New York, and knowing something of the firm, he concluded to try them as a last resort. Mr. Ulrich had become very helpless, and could do no work of any kind, and the pain was excruciating. Life was a misery instead of a pleasure to him. He purchased a few boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which he began to take. After taking them for a time the pain left him entirely and he was soon able to walk out to the fields where his sons were at work. He has never felt the rheumatism from that day to this. He took the pills for some time after he was cured and still keeps them in the house in case of necessity and nothing is more highly regarded in that home than a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mr. Ulrich is an aged man of 62 years, and his hair shows that it has passed through the frosts of many winters. He says that he feels like a new man, and that the work was done by Pink Pills alone.

His wife and daughters have also used them for different afflictions from which they derived great benefit. They have also recommended them to their neighbors, who were troubled with different diseases, and they too, were benefited. Mr. Ulrich today expresses with pleasure that he can do as much work as either of his sons. He is now tending a large crop of 96 acres of corn, and 28 acres of potatoes, and has done most of the work himself. Anyone interested in these statements and doubting their accuracy, may verify them by writing him.

Mr. Jacob Ulrich, being duly sworn, deposes and says he is the gentleman referred to in the above interview and it is true in every respect. JACOB ULRICH.

STATE OF IOWA } SS.
JASPER COUNTY }

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence by the said Jacob Ulrich, this 18th day of July, A. D. 1896.

C. E. CRAGAN, Notary Public,
In and for Jasper county Ia.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk, or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

FACTS ABOUT DOGS.

The Pariah curs of India are the direct descendants of wild dogs.

There are 20,000 hounds in Great Britain used for hunting purposes.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction

"I saw a little girl in striped red and white stockings the other day," said the woman, "and it made me think of the time when I was a little girl myself. There was no thought of black stockings then. The small legs of all small girls looked like sticks of variegated candy. The child who had the gayest combination of stripes was the happiest and if the color scheme happened to be displeasing to our youthful tastes there was utter woe as I know I seldom feel now that I am grown up."—New York Times.

A match has just been invented by an English genius which promises to become a formidable rival to the present match in general use. The idea of the invention is based on the old plan of rolling up paper and lighting at a flame already in existence. The paper is immersed in wax stearine and similar substances, and burns with a light smokeless and odorless flame. Cut into match lengths, it is dipped into phosphorus wax, like the common wax match. The invention is regarded as a timely one, as the wood used in the making of matches is constantly growing more scarce and costly.—New York Journal.

CHAPTER II.—(CONTINUED.)

"Yes, sir, that ere bread-fruit tree is good for more'n the fruit. The fibers inside the bark, ye see, can be wet and pounded, and then dried. I know jest how to do it. Now I guess we'll have to try some palm matting. I'll show you how to braid and splice it together, and we'll have a dress fixed for all of us. We must make a tent-top too, for the night-dews in these forrin places are a powerful sight like rain, and masterly unhealthy, too. I don't see as my old bones can rest yet, there's so much to be done afore night."

"You shall not work alone, my noble fellow," said Mr. Vernon, energetically. "Between your experience and my scientific knowledge it's a pity if we cannot go to housekeeping in tolerable style, since nature has spread everything around us in raw material."

Tom opened his eyes and a look of deference mingled with his expression of good fellowship.

"And don't you think," asked he, "we had better keep pretty close to this spot for tonight anyhow? When we've turned in and had a watch below, we shall feel more like finding out what kind of a home the old caboose brought us to."

"I shall always abide by your judgment, and I agree with this. Now, then, Tom, for the palms; you shall teach me to plait a native garment for Walter and myself, and after we have obtained dry clothes we will think about a bunch of bread-fruit, sauced with banana and seasoned with cocoanut."

"We're lucky not to have landed alongside of the icebergs," said Tom, dryly, as he bent the boughs of a Hibiscus tree to shade the sleepers more effectually. We needn't fear freezing nor starving."

"Nor could we have selected a fairer spot," replied Mr. Vernon, looking around admiringly upon the closely-wooded heights, rising in a succession of hills from the shore, and showing in profuse luxuriance the most valuable woods and fruits, as well as the gorgeousness of tropic blossoming; "and we have not yet seen signs of ferocious beasts or unfriendly inhabitants."

"I calculate we're safe from both them 'ere. I kept one eye pretty sharp around, and all I've seen is an albatross, a petrel, and two or three heron. I remember hearing old Pete Jones, a gone-by shipmate o' mine, who was in these parts a good while, say that no beast of prey was ever seen around in these islands, which, as near as I can reckon, are in the part of the chart they call Polynesia. We'll be careful till we're sure."

"Now suppose we go down to the caboose and set it up for a bedroom for the children—what do you say, Tom?"

"We'd best save it, anyhow, if only to remember the old 'Petrel' by."

So they went down to the beach, and with their united effort turned over the shattered shell. Mr. Vernon began to think Tom was growing insane as he saw him dart inside and seize something with the most frantic expression of joy.

"Tom, Tom, my good fellow, what ails you?"

"Good heart, sir, I can't half tell you, I'm so pleased. Only see what I've found! It's worth more to us than a heap of gold and diamonds."

Mr. Vernon bent forward and beheld a small hatchet, which, fastened by a stout cord to a nail, had resisted the effort of wind and wave, only twisting itself more securely around the brass head of the nail.

"It is indeed an invaluable treasure," said he, with emotion. "Tom, Tom, who knows but 'this frail ark has brought us to an Eden we shall be sorry to exchange for the hollow frivolities and sordid selfishness of the world?"

CHAPTER III.

TOM was detaching the hatchet from the nail; he paused a moment, and his clear gray eye wandered over wave and sky to the verdant heights behind them; a sober, tranquil, melancholy, entirely undefinable look swept over his face.

"I don't know, sir," said he, slowly, "I can't say, but something seems to tell me I shall have my grave here on the island." He waited a moment, overpowered by a nameless presentiment, and then added cheerfully: "But if it is to be so, sir, no man living now will have a pleasanter one than can be scooped out a little beyond the spring there, under the Hibiscus tree. Ye mind it, sir, if anything happens, there's where I'd like to be laid."

The time came when, with overflowing eyes and outgushing heart, Paul Vernon recalled these words and dwelt fondly upon the memory of the picture then before him. That stout, athletic form, that plain, homely face, but most of all that cheery, hopeful, resigned expression that lent such a vivid charm to the otherwise unprepossessing countenance of Tom Harris.

After a night's rest and a bountiful breakfast from that most skillful of all culinary artists, Dame Nature herself—albeit the butler who collected and set out the savory dishes was none other than honest Tom—our little company began to feel less like benighted outcasts, and to look upon the beautiful little island as a home establishment.

The little girl wept bitterly when her childish mind was made to comprehend the sorrowful fate of her nurse and protector, yet with the versatility of infancy entered also into the keen delight of Walter Vernon, who capered around his father and Tom as they were busily felling the trees needed for their permanent habitation, loudly rejoicing at the beautiful sights around them.

On the third day they commenced an exploring expedition along the shore and some distance back into the interior. They found they were upon a small isolated island, yet evidently one of a group, since from the top of a tall cocoanut tree on the summit of the highest hill Tom declared he could see a dim line beyond the water that marked the land, probably of a similar island. He made another discovery at the same time which he believed more important to them, which was that the wreck of their ship had not sunk, but was lying evidently caught between the jagged points of a reef underneath the water.

Boundless sources of wealth were disclosed to them, but no sign of human habitation. The bread-fruit, cocoa, cocoanut, yams, banana, plantain and sugar-cane grew in spontaneous abundance, while Tom pointed out to them the Abia-tree, bearing its delicious pulpy fruit, and won Walter's heart completely when he handed him a handful of the sweet native chestnut, Kata. Upon the elevated land they found forests of stately trees, whose names were mostly familiar to Tom's experience or Mr. Vernon's botanical knowledge.

"Ah," said the former joyfully, pausing beneath a group of apapa and faifai trees, "here is the stuff, Mr. Vernon, for our canoe. We will visit the old ship soon, and find out what's left for us."

While they were examining the generous supply of valuable timber the children were gathering flowers. Suddenly came a scream from the little girl, and a loud shout for help from Walter. Both Mr. Vernon and Tom turned in alarm. A trampling, rushing noise came from a thicket of tangled vines and underbrush, and out darted a strange-looking animal, upsetting the courageous boy, who had flung himself in front of his weaker companion.

While little Eleanor—she had given so much of her name to Tom before the shipwreck, but could not now be made to recall the rest—clung frantically to Tom's neck, Mr. Vernon in much alarm assisted his son to rise.

"Oh, father, father, what was it—a bear or a lion?" gasped Walter.

Tom's cheery laugh rang out boisterously.

"It was better than that, my boy—it was our pork-barrel still on its legs. Bye-and-bye the old fellow will give you a sausage to pay for this fright."

"What, a pig?" ejaculated Mr. Vernon, much relieved.

"Nothing else, sir. Wild hogs find good living here, and so shall we. Indeed, sir, all the wants of a decent human cretur are supplied here. See there, behind the sandal, is a candle-tree. We needn't stay long in the dark."

Mr. Vernon sighed.

"Ah, Tom, show me a tree where my books, my precious books, grow, ranged ready in a row for a hungry mind."

Tom scratched his head.

"You've got me there; but if we can't find any left in the old hulk, I hope it ain't bold in me to say I mistrust you can write some for yourself."

"You are an admirable fellow, Tom, for expedients. I think I'll try. Of course you'll provide plenty of paper and ink?"

"Jest as much as you want," answered the old sailor triumphantly, delighted to see his random suggestion was likely to work profitably in averting the melancholy he dreaded so much. "I'll show you some beans bye-and-bye that will give better ink than any you can buy in London, I'll be bound, for sun and water can't fade it out; and as for paper, bleach out some of my native cloth for the strong, or make some of the tender, like Chinese rice-paper—it's just what you want."

"Well said. When we build the house I'll have a study to write in. Come, children, you have an interest in our plan; there must be a school-room and a parlor on purpose for little Ellie."

But several days of hard work were required before the timber was brought to the site near the shore, selected for various reasons, and then the house was only partially finished, as Tom was anxious to build a raft and visit the ship before another storm could complete her destruction.

The raft looked like a frail, unseaworthy thing when it was done, without a nail to secure it, only bound together with great thongs of bark; but Tom was quite satisfied, and had no fear, and early one fine morning, as they sat round their palm-leaf breakfast cloth, announced his intention of starting immediately.

Mr. Vernon wished to accompany him, but to this Tom would not consent.

"No, no," said he. "Wait till I find out what is the risk. Suppose we both go, and are lost—what's to become of the children? Tom's the one to go."

"Tom is a hero," replied Mr. Vernon, with emotion. "I wish you would let the children call you Mr. Harris. It pains me to hear them so familiar with you, who are in reality our leader and king."

Tom laughed.

"Lord bless you, sir, I shouldn't know how to act with a handle to my name. I've allers been Tom from the time I went to school to l'arn my letters, and faith I've eenamost forgot 'em it's so long ago, and Tom I shall keep on. You can't teach an old dog new tricks, and I should feel as silly as a land-lubber in the shrouds during a blow if anybody called me Mr. Harris. Now, then, I'm off."

CHAPTER IV.

ANXIOUSLY and eagerly the little party watched Tom's raft paddled slowly around the reef, disappearing behind the cliff, and with feverish impatience Mr. Vernon paced to and fro the interminable four hours of his absence. The learned, refined, fastidious man of the world—the deep thinker and laborious student—marveled at the utter dependenece he had come to rest upon that simple, unlearned, unpolished nature.

"There is but one thing genuine," he muttered, as he saw the children forsaking their play and fruit to watch anxiously in the direction the raft should return. "Tom's good heart is more than all my scientific knowledge, my laboriously acquired heritage. Even here, on this deserted island, am I taught my own worthlessness. Oh, the past, the past—if it were in the power of mortal man to undo it!"

A black cloud settled on his face. His thoughts were evidently with some painful scene in his past life, for his teeth gnawed impatiently at his pallid lip, his eye flashed, and on his high forehead the veins knotted themselves like cords.

A cheery hallo, answered by glad shouts of the children aroused him from the painful reverie. He hurried down to the beach, thankful to see Tom paddling back to the shore.

"Here I am," shouted Tom, "safe and sound, you see, and bringing you good news. Oh, but, sir, I couldn't help thinking if our folks had only trusted the old hulk, and not tried the boats, how many it would have saved. But what does a poor weak cretur know about it?—the Lord's the best judge."

As he drew the raft on shore he went on in a livelier tone, while he unloaded its contents.

"There, sir—there's a keg of spirits of some kind. It may come handy when the rainy season sets in. Here's a chist of clothes, and this 'ere, I think, is mighty fortunate, for I know all about it. I brought this trunk out of the cabin myself and put it in the hold, and I heard the maid say it belonged to Lady Eleanor's mother, that she was going to meet. You know they was mighty particular to call the little thing Lady Eleanor, so I s'pose she is one of the nobility. Here, little Ellie, it's yours; and when're older maybe you won't be sorry to have some pretty clothes to wear—better than Tom can manufacture. Ye must be nice with 'em, though, for maybe they'll prove some time who you be."

He turned then to hand Mr. Vernon a small clasp Bible—the Beacon Light of their deliverance.

"Here, sir, I thought you'd be thankful enough to see this. I calculate you'll comfort us all out of it when the blue days come."

He was stooping down, ready to lift out another chest, and astonished that the book was not taken as joyfully as he expected; he raised himself and looked at his companion keenly.

BRITISH IRE AROUSED.

Aggressive Demands for Action Coming From All Quarters.

London dispatch: English opinion on the Turkish question is becoming aggressively and dangerously active. From all parts of the kingdom come demands upon the government to call a halt to the grand Turk. The pressure is unmistakable. It is expected in all quarters with more or less weight. Thus far it is not a partisan effort, for the extreme organs of both the great parties vie with each other in denouncing the cruelties of the sultan's rule and in calling upon the civilized European powers to intervene at whatever cost. Of course the cost of ways, means and consequences, immediate and remote, is the practical question. Now as heretofore, it gives pause even to those that most ardently long for the political effacement of the great assassin who disgraces the Ottoman throne. The remarkable feature of the latest outburst of English indignation is the fact that it is not coupled, as usually in the past, with a stipulation that a concert of the powers must precede any coercive action. Hitherto even the liberals have laid stress upon that condition; and no conservative authority would tolerate the idea of independent English intervention. There has been a distinct stiffening of moral fiber of late among Englishmen of all political views, and the feeling is already widespread, though cautiously expressed, that England should act alone rather than not at all.

BIG GRAVE FULL OF BONES.

Skeletons of Some of Holmes' Victims Are Unearthed at Last.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—In the dense woods between North Evanston and Wilmette a grave has been found full of human bones. The discovery was made by A. H. Parker, of Evanston, who with his wife had been making frequent excursions into the woods during the last two months. Mrs. Parker some weeks ago declared that near the place was a grave, and urged her husband to investigate it. He at first refused, but finally consented, just to show his wife that she knew nothing about graves. He dug long enough to turn up a few ribs and a thigh bone and then called on the police for help. Several other bones and a skull, supposed from its size to be that of a woman, were found. The spot is only a few rods from the house in which H. H. Holmes lived at Wilmette, and it is thought by the police that the bones may be those of some of his victims. The bones had evidently been interred within two years and were apparently placed in the grave without a coffin, and no clothing of any sort was found. From the sizes of the bones it is thought they must be from several people.

Boats Head for Turkey.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The Bancroft has sailed for Tomkinsville, bound for Gibraltar. At the navy department it is said her orders simply are to report to Admiral Selfridge at Gibraltar. It is neither admitted nor denied that the Bancroft is going to Constantinople, but it is not doubted that it intended to make the effort to take her there to serve simply as a refuge for American citizens in case of an outbreak that might jeopardize their safety. The Cincinnati is rapidly making ready to follow the Bancroft into Turkish waters.

Reduced Their Own Wages.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 17.—The miners of the Pittsburg district have passed almost unanimously resolutions which bind the organized miners to voluntarily reduce their own wages for the sake of uniformity from 70 cents to 54 cents per ton, the price now paid by the New York and Cleveland Gas Coal Company. President Michael Ratchford complimented the delegates on their action, and said a similar movement would eventually have to be taken in Ohio.

Tynan an American.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The records of the Court of Common Pleas show that P. J. P. Tynan, the dynamite suspect, under arrest at Boulogne, France, has been a citizen of the United States since August, 1888.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, Sept. 17.—The Iowa Historical Illustrative Co., of Des Moines, has been granted a copyright for a publication entitled "Illustrated Fort Dodge." An artistic souvenir of that place may therefore be expected, similar to the "Illustrated Souvenir of Des Moines," the creditable work of the Wilcox brothers, Charles and Henry. A patent has been allowed to J. J. Waddel, of Des Moines, for a signal lantern adapted to facilitate the removal and handling of the oil reservoir, burner and globe as required to keep the lantern in order, to heat air and admit it to the burner, to promote combustion and to admit heated air at the top of the globe, to aid in producing draft and to direct air as required to prevent smoke, flickering and extinguishing when the lantern is swung or exposed to wind. Valuable information about obtaining, valuing and selling patents sent free to any address.

Acquisition.

"And then," related the shade of Alexander, "I laid pipes for the rest of the world."

The shade of the plumber showed signs of intelligence.

"Ah, I see," it exclaimed. "You took it for the bill. Well, I declare. And that was 2,300 years ago!"

Like Father, Like Son.

"Drunk again," said the stern father, as he met his tipsy son at the door at 3 a. m.

"Don't menshun't," replied the young hopeful, gayly. So'm I."

Quick Time

Mr. O. B. Ross, Spencer, Iowa, filed his first application May 11, 1896, and it was allowed August 4, 1896. This application was pending in the Patent Office 85 days only, and was considered by the parties interested to be rather rapid work. Mr. Ross filed his second application July 13, 1896; it was acted upon July 25, 1896; was amended July 27, 1896, and allowed August 5, 1896. This application was pending in the Patent Office 23 days only, and is without doubt the quickest time in which a mechanical patent ever was examined, amended and allowed. May we do the same thing for you we did for Mr. Ross?

HEEDLESS WOMEN.

They Pay a Sad Penalty for Their Neglect.

If women only heeded first symptoms—nervousness, backache, headache, lassitude, loss of appetite and sleep; palpitation, melancholy, "blues," etc., and at once removed the cause with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, there would be much less suffering.

But they are careless, or their physician is to blame, and they drift into some distressing female disease. The Vegetable Compound at once removes all irregularities of the monthly period: inflammation, ulceration and displacement of the womb, and all female troubles. All druggists have it. Write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., if you wish for advice, which she will give you free.

"I should not be alive to-day, if it had not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was suffering greatly from an attack of female weakness, and nothing I had tried could give me relief; when by the advice of a friend I began the Compound. After using it two months I was a different girl, and now at the end of six I am entirely cured."—MRS. ANNIE KIRKLAND, Patchogue, L. I.

He Understood Her.

Jugg—I have come to ask you, sir, to refuse to permit your daughter to marry me.

Alt.—To refuse you. Why you——

Jugg—Yes, sir; if you will be so kind, I know I can get her consent at once.

A Singular Form of Monomania.

There is a class of people, rational enough in other respects, who are certainly monomaniacs in dosing themselves. They are constantly trying experiments upon their stomachs, bowels, liver and kidneys with their trashy nostrums. When these organs are really out of order, if they would only use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, they would, if not hopelessly insane, perceive its superiority.

A Cheerful Liar.

"I hope, sor, you will assist a poor man whose house and everything in it, including me family, sor, was burned up two months ago last Thursday, sor."

The merchant to whom this appeal was addressed, while very philanthropic, is also very cautious, so he asked:

"Have you any papers or certificates to show that you have lost anything by fire?"

"I did have a certificate, sor, signed before a magistrate, to that effect, but it was burned up, sor, in the house with me family and the rest of me effects."—Tid-Bits.

"No; what about him?"

"Why, he used to sit and hold her hand by the hour and yet nobody suspected him."

"Suspected him of what?"

"Why, he isn't a count at all; he's just a manicure artist."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

His Elocution.

A gentleman was assisting at a bazaar last winter by reciting now and again during the evening. He had recited once or twice and the people were sitting about chaffing, when he heard one of the committee go up to the chairman and whisper: "Hadn't Mr. —— better give us another recitation now?" Whereupon the chairman replied: "No, not yet; let them enjoy themselves a bit longer."—Tit-Bits.

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

There ought to be a thanksgiving over the fall of Turkey.

Our minds are shot with moods, as a fabric is shot with colors.

More people get into trouble by being good-natured than by exhibiting mean traits.

Men often blame others for simply having allowed them to make fools of themselves.

When a man finds out what he can do best, he generally slights that portion of his work.

Young men cannot learn too soon and too thoroughly there is a great difference between notoriety and fame.

Tom Reed still wears the expression of a man who has found that his last winter's overcoat looks just as good as new.

Nevertheless Li has not yet inhaled the full flavor of western civilization. He has never been run over by a bicycle.

When the inventors succeed in making a dead bird fly we can begin to look for the solution of the air-ship problem.

Perhaps the Chicago man who was married on top of a monument Saturday will be disappointed when he hears that still more foolish things have been done this year.

Why do so many good people love to hear about sin? Although the sinner takes no interest in a saint, it is the latter who has an uneasy interest about the doings of the sinner.

The Armours have received an order for eighteen car loads of corned beef for the Japan navy. Hurrah for the Japs. If they are not all right they intend to be. They have the cabbage.

The young Chicago Lochinvar who came out with his express wagon and wound up in a police station, while the wily easterner made away with the fair bride, is probably wondering whether he or the girl was the bigger fool.

A New Jersey match company has decreed that its employes must immediately visit their dentists to have their exposed nerves covered up to protect them from the deadly phosphorus. Perhaps the whole trouble with the Moore brothers is that they were so busy clipping coupons that they didn't have time to have their molars kept ir proper repair.

David Kirk, president of the Pure Oil company, the combination of independent producers who are fighting the Standard, who has been in Europe for several months, has returned to Pittsburg, and announces that his company will continue the fight to compete with the Standard company outside of the United States. He found when he got to the other side that the Standard had bought up the tankage facilities at all seaboard points, some from agents of the Pure company. However, after several months of travel, he secured what he wanted, and will send oil to Europe to agents in competition with the Standard as intended.

A novel lawsuit has just been tried in Memphis, Mo. In 1890 Nathaniel S. Coe, son of Edward M. Coe of Knox county, was killed in a difficulty at a school house. William and Jesse Wright were accused, and Jesse Wright was indicted, tried and acquitted. This did not satisfy Edward M. Coe, the father. He erected a monument to his son and had engraved upon it, "Came to his death from violence administered with a club by Jesse and William Wright." William Wright sued Mr. Coe for libel for the inscription on the monument. The trial resulted in a verdict for $1,000 damages.

A youth 25 years old was overtaken the other night while eloping with the lady of his choice and carried off home by his irate father, leaving the girl to meet him in St. Louis, provided he could give paternal vigilance the slip. An illustration of how anxious the modern girl is to hang on to a fellow, no matter how little he is worth, is shown by the fact that the prospective bride has calmly proceeded to the sleepy city on the Mississippi in patient hope that her valiant lover will be able to escape his watchful papa. Some matrons of this country, however, could tell her that there are disadvantages about marrying a man of so little spirit, for, while there is no doubt that he will split the kindling after she has threatened him with the rolling pin, there is the awful possibility that he may be too timid to meet the iceman with the overdue bill and will leave that pleasant duty to the wife of his bosom.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

ROBBED OF A LARGE SUM.

T. R. Dennis Falls a Victim to Crooks at the Seymour Fair.

CENTERVILLE, Sept. 26.—T. R. Dennis, of this city, was robbed of $1,620 at the Seymour fair. It was taken from him by a time honored method of crooks. There was a big crowd at the fair. Two toughs got into a fight. Mr. Dennis pushed into the crowd to see the fight, when someone deftly picked his pockets and escaped. Marshal Pettigrew tried to arrest the fighters, when he was struck with a club, breaking his leg in two places. He was knocked down and badly bruised, but managed, with assistance, to arrest three of the crooks. The others got away and took with them Mr. Dennis' $1,620. He had been carrying this money in his pocket for three months, being afraid to deposit it in the bank for fear of the bank breaking. No further arrests have been made. The fight was a bogus one gotten up to attract the man's attention while they got his money.

SHOOTING NEAR SIOUX CITY.

Two Men Badly Wounded by Neighboring Boys.

SIOUX CITY, Sept. 26.—Frank Ferguson and Marion Osborn, farm hands in the employ of H. Olson, were shot and seriously wounded by Charles and William Workman, their neighbors, at a point just below Thompson's Grove, on the Sergeant Bluffs road. The men who did the shooting said they did not know they were shooting at neighbors. They said they had been greatly bothered by thieves and had been watching for them. When they saw Ferguson and Osborn coming they thought they were thieves trying to steal their melons and corn.

THE ESSEX FIRE.

Four Buildings Burned in a Page County Town.

ESSEX, Sept. 28.—Fire originating from spontaneous combustion in Seabloom & Lindburg's general store destroyed that establishment and Stromberg's barber shop, A. Lindburg's grocery store and C. L. Beach's restaurant. A special train brought the Red Oak fire department and the Shenandoah hook and ladder company came; but effective work by Essex citizens saved the town. The loss is $15,000, about two-thirds covered by insurance.

BAILEY FOUND GUILTY.

Colored Man Convicted of Assault With Intent to Murder.

DES MOINES, Sept. 27.—In the district court Crede Bailey, accused of assault with intent to commit murder, was found guilty. He is the colored man who attempted to kill Bert Ross on South Fourth street during the state fair, and who, on that same night, shot at Mrs. Cunningham of Newton, through the window of the Rock Island depot, with murderous intent. He was tried for the from offense.

CLINTON MAN KILLED.

Grace Clark of Chicago Was Jealous and Shot Him—She Attempted Suicide

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Harry Conway, of Clinton, Ia., was killed by Grace Clark, who shot him first and then killed herself. Conway was a brakeman on the Northwestern railway and came to Chicago last July with the Clark woman. They had numerous quarrels. The disagreement which caused the shooting was over a letter from a woman in Fall City, Neb., written to Conway.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH.

Farmer Found in His Barn With a Wound in His Head.

WEBSTER CITY, Sept. 25.—The body of W. W. Lord, a farmer, living a few miles north of here, was found in his barn with suspicious wounds on his head. The coroner was notified but the inquest led to no one being found implicated in the killing. It is supposed that he met his death by the kick of a horse. Lord moved to Iowa last spring from Illinois. He leaves a wife and two children.

Tried to Murder by Hanging.

DES MOINES, Sept. 25.—Rice and Coats, on trial in the district court for the attempted murder of a woman, Mrs. Henrietta Radford, in East Des Moines during fair week, were found guilty by the jury which tried them. They hanged the woman up to make her tell where her money was. The timely arrival of help saved her life.

Christie Secures Judgment.

IOWA CITY, Sept. 25.—Damages in the sum of $4,500 have been awarded E. J. Christie, of Marion, against the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railway company. Christie was administrator for Thomas Whelan, of Columbus Junction, who was killed on the above named road while removing a hand car.

THROWN FROM A TRAIN.

Tragic Death of an Iowa City Young Man.

IOWA CITY, Sept. 25.—The section gang on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway found the body of a young man from Iowa City, Luke Jordan, lying beside the track, about four blocks from the depot. A coroner's jury was impanneled, and it was ascertained that he spent the previous day in Oxford, came back to Iowa City on the 9:30 p. m. train, and mounted the steps of one of the cars of the train as it pulled out of the depot at Iowa City, eastward bound. When last seen alive as far as now known, he was standing on the second step of the car, about to take his place on the platform, saying he was going to West Liberty. Whether he was thrown off by the swaying of the train or whether he fell off remains to be told. The character of the bruises at the back of the ear suggests concussion of the brain. Jordan had been dead several hours when found.

MR. CAMERON MISSING.

Consequently Hundreds of Marshalltown People are in Mourning.

MARSHALLTOWN, Sept. 27.—J. Fenton Cameron, a photographer who recently came to Marshallown is missing and as a consequence several hundred residents of Marshalltown and vicinity mourn. The photographer, who has done a rushing business in the way of taking orders and securing an advance deposit on them, has disappeared. His assistant, Mr. Smith, has also taken his departure. Agents for Cameron had taken 585 orders.

Robbed Mail Boxes.

DES MOINES, Sept. 26.—John Belt, aged 16, pleaded guilty before Commissioner Mason to robbing the postoffice boxes in the Boone postoffice. He was bound over under $1,000 bonds, which were furnished by his father, a well known railroad man.

Rev. G. E. Scott Indicted.

WATERLOO, Sept. 28.—The grand jury appeared before Judge Blair in the district court and reported an indictment against Rev. G. E. Scott on the charge of seduction. Daisy Dorlan was quite guarded in her testimony before the jury.

File a Full Ticket.

DES MOINES, Sept. 28.—Dr. A. Rindler, of Davenport, secretary of the socialistic party in Iowa, has filed a full state ticket with the secretary of state. On the petition accompanying the ticket were 661 signers.

BREVITIES.

Ulysses Brabelle, a farmer about 40 years old, living near Indianola, hanged himself. He was despondent on account of poor health.

Louis E. Stevenson, a hardware merchant of Algona, committed suicide a few days ago by shooting himself in the temple. He was 40 years old, and leaves a wife and three children. Temporary insanity is the supposed cause.

A Marshalltown dispatch says: The twelve men who heard the evidence in the case of the state against George Henshaw, indicted for manslaughter, as a result of his attack on Farmer Chapin, failed to reach a verdict after being out fifteen and one-half hours.

Des Moines dispatch: James Callanan, one of the honored pioneers of Des Moines. and Abraham Slimmer, philanthropist of Waverly, have united in offering to the Home for the Aged in Des Moines a permanent endowment of $100,000 on condition that the sum shall be increased to $150,000 by July 1, 1897. The offer has been signed by the gentlemen most concerned and its assured acceptance by the trustees and board of managers of the institution will constitute a binding contract.

The mills and offices of the Cascade Lumber company, near Burlington, together with the immense lumber yard of the concern, were destroyed by fire. The plant was situated about two miles south of Burlington and the fire apparatus had to be conveyed by train, entailing a delay of nearly two hours. The loss to the mill buildings is estimated at $30,000, and that of the lumber will reach $50,000. A bridge on the St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern railroad was badly burned and traffic was delayed.

The Iowa Crop Bureau says the corn crop of Iowa has been seriously damaged by the recent frosts. Up to a week ago it was confidently believed the yield in the state would approximate 300,000,000 bushels, which would be even larger than the crop of a year ago, which was a record breaker. Now it is doubtful if the crop will even come up to the average and it is certain that close to twenty per cent of the corn has been damaged by frost to such an extent that it will not be marketable. The damage has not been confined to any particular locality but extends throughout the state. It is especially heavy in the northwest part of the state, however. This is the conclusion arrived at by Director Sage, of the weather bureau, based upon reports from all sections of the state.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

ANOTHER DECREE BY WEYLER.

Sale of Medicines to Retailers in Interior Towns Prohibited.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The Herald's Havana special says: An important decree issued by Capt. Gen. Weyler places Havana drug stores under military supervision and prohibits medicines being sold to the retailers in the interior towns unless authorized by special permits from the Spanish commandant.

Letters received from Santa Clara and other central Cuban towns assert that Weyler's amnesty decree is a farce. Rebels surrendering and expecting amnesty are assassinated. Though received by the Spanish military outposts with open arms and temporarily liberated, they are invariably rearrested within a fortnight as spies or incendiaries, tried, convicted by drumhead court martial and shot. It is also alleged that a majority of the prisoners of war taken on the field are being unceremoniously dispatched by the roadside, the Spanish commanders afterward reporting their fate due to attempted escape.

A MODEL GOVERNMENT.

Li Hung Chang Speaks a Good Word for the United States.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 25.—A telegram has been received from a United States commercial agent at Vancouver, B. C., saying that at an interview, just before sailing for Hong Kong, Li Hung Chang requested him to send this message to his government: "I am greatly impressed by the courtesies and kindness extended to me by the government of your country, which I regard as the model government of western civilization. I shall ever retain the most pleasant memories of my visit to the United States and I desire to make my greetings to your country the most cordial."

STRIKE LEADERS ARRESTED.

Fifteen Leadville Strikers Are in Jail Charged With Murder.

LEADVILLE, Colo., Sept. 25.—Thirty warrants were issued by the district court for the officers and members of the executive committee of the miners' union, all charged with the murder of Fireman O'Keefe. Fifteen have been served and the men named in them are in jail. Edward Boyse, of Boise, Idaho, president of the Western Federation of Miners, was placed in jail by the city marshal, the sheriff stating that he was there for safe keeping, but no charge has been made against him as yet.

ROBBERY IN CHICAGO.

About $1,600 Scooped Up by a Couple of Daring Fellows.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Two men, carefully disguised, committed a daring robbery at the Union Foundry Company's office in Brighton Park, and robbed the company of $1,600. They then escaped by means of a buggy, but not before they had shot one man and fired several shots into a crowd of people who were chasing them. A patrol wagon gave chase, but did not succeed in capturing the robbers.

Turks Profaned a Cemetery.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Athens correspondent of the Daily Telegraph reports as follows: "A dispatch from Canea, Island of Crete, says the Turks desecrated and profaned the cemetery of Suda Bao under the eyes of the officers of the British and Austrian men-of-war. I am informed that during the negotiations for a Cretan settlement Great Britain and Russia agreed to permit Greece to annex Crete at the first opportunity presenting itself."

Rioters in Kentucky.

LAWRENCEBURG, Ky., Sept. 25.—The turnpike rioters have destroyed the twenty-four toll gates in Anderson county. The county last fall voted to make the pikes free. Proceedings for appraisment, condemnation and purchase had been made but the people did not wait for relief in that and resorted to mob law. Under the laws of Kentucky this county will have to make good the loss and damage by the mob.

Gen. Roloff Bound Over.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Gen. Carlos Roloff, accused of aiding filibustering expeditions to Cuba, and, according to the testimony of a number of witnesses, an active participant in the steamship Laurado expedition last August, has been held by United States Commissioner Alexander in $2,500 bail for the grand jury.

Cubans Use Dynamite.

HAVANA, Sept. 26.—The insurgents blew up with dynamite the mail train from Puerto Principe. Five soldiers of the escort were wounded. The queen regent has pardoned Oscar Zubizarretta, nephew of the war minister, who had been sentenced to death for taking part in the insurrection.

HORRORS IN JAPAN.

Thousands of Lives Lost and Millions of Dollars Damage Done.

San Francisco dispatch: The city of Kobe, Japan, was wiped out by a disastrous conflagration on August 26, and floods, storms and earthquakes caused a loss of 2,500 lives and the destruction of millions of dollars' worth of property in northern Japan. The steamer Doric, from the Orient, brought news of a series of catastrophes that have befallen the mikado's realm that are unprecedented in its history. In Gifu prefecture 4,300 homes were blown down, and along the Hoji-Gawa 400 persons lost their lives. The severest storm occurred on August 30. Along the Issatsugawa 84 lives were lost. The great flood was preceded by severe earthquakes. Then followed a downpour such as has never been experienced on the island. The European residents were panic-stricken and sought shelter on the high ground. The Minatogwa overflowed its banks at midnight of August 26th, and the waters invaded streets and cellars, sweeping away 300 houses and drowning 200 persons at Kobe. To make the fate of Kobe worse, a fire broke out late in the evening and fanned by the high wind spread over the entire city. One thousand nine hundred blocks, including 2,260 houses, were totally destroyed. The total damage by fire was 1,000,000 yen. On September 1, in Rokugo district, a terrible series of earthquakes shook the country. One hundred people were killed, and at Rukugo alone 1,000 houses were overturned.

PLAGUE IN BOMBAY.

Three Hundred Deaths Have Already Occurred from the Terrible Scourge.

BOMBAY, Sept. 26.—A serious outbreak of the Bubonic plague has occurred here. There have been 300 deaths already. The bacillus of the disease is identical with that which Prof. Kitasto, the distinguished Japanese physician, discovered during Hong Kong visitation last year.

A MILE IN 2:00 1-2.

John R. Gentry's Wonderful Speed Record.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 25.—John R. Gentry at Ridgby Park paced the fastest mile ever made in harness and placed the world's record at 2:00½. The quarters were as follows: 29¼, 59½, 1:30¼ and 2:00½.

Revolution in Thibet.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—A special from Shanghai says that everywhere througout Thibet the revolt against the Chinese government is spreading. In consequence of this rebellion 3,000 Chinese troops have been sent to reinforce the garrisons.

Peary Expedition.

NORTH SYDNEY, C. B., Sept. 28.—The Peary expedition has returned to this point. While it made valuable investigations, it was not able to bring the immense meteorite for which it went, being unable to rig a derrick to handle it.

Thacher Says No.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 28.—John Boyd Thacher has declined to accept the democratic nomination for governor because he says he cannot endorse Bryan and Sewall.

TERSE NEWS.

The porte has received a report stating that 600 persons were killed in the Diabekir district of Armenia. The kurds attacked the Armenian quarter of the town, pillaged and burned the houses and killed as many of the inhabitants as they could find. The report says that massacres will soon take place in other districts of Anatolio.

New York dispatch: Three world's records broken was the result at Columbia oval, by R. Sheldon, of Yale, who threw 111 feet and 8 inches, the previous record being 101 feet and 9 inches; Thos. Burke of Boston, who won the 600 yard run in 1:11, and Jerome Buck, winner of the 400 yard hurdle race, 10 hurdles, in 56 2-5 seconds.

Dongola has fallen, and the nominal objective point of the British-Egyptian expedition has been reached. The river forces of the expedition, pushing up the Nile from El Hafir, landed a force at Dongola and occupied that place before the dervish force retreating from El Hafir reached that point. El Hafir and Dongola are therefore both in the hands of the British, while the Dervish forces are somewhere between those towns seeking a refuge.

Havana dispatch: While seventy-five volunteers belonging to Havana and twelve regular troops were leaving Calabazar, near Havana, they were surrounded by a force of five hundred rebels commanded by Castillo and Delgado, and were attacked from all sides. The troops defended themselves bravely, but they would have been annihilated had not assistance reached them. The sound of the firing led to the dispatch of reinforcements who succeeded in routing the insurgents. The insurgent losses were placed in the official report at 100 killed and wounded, among the latter being said to be Castillo and Delgado

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"GATES OF CARBUNCLE" THE SUBJECT OF SUNDAY.

From the Text: "And I Will Make Thy Windows of Agates and Thy Gates of Carbuncles" — Book of Isaiah, Chapter 54, Verse 12.

PERHAPS because a human disease of most painful and ofttimes fatal character is named after it, the church and the world have never done justice to that intense and all-suggestive precious stone, the carbuncle. The pearl that Christ picked up to illustrate his sermon, and the jasper and the sapphire and the amethyst which the apocalyptic vision masoned into the wall of heaven have had proper recognition, but this, in all the ages, is the first sermon on the carbuncle.

This precious stone is found in the East Indies, in color is an intense scarlet, and held up between your eye and the sun it is a burning coal. The poet puts it into rhythm as he writes:

Like to the burning coal whence comes its name;
Among the Greeks as Anthrax known to fame.

God sets it high up in Bible crystallography. He cuts it with a divine chisel, shapes it with a precise geometry, and kindles its fire into an almost supernatural flame of beauty. Its law of symmetry, its law of zones, its law of parallelism, something to excite the amazement of the scientist, chime the cantos of the poet, and arouse the adoration of the Christian. No one but the infinite God could fashion a carbuncle as large as your thumb nail, and as if to make all ages appreciate this precious stone he ordered it set in the first row of the high priest's breastplate in olden time and higher up than the onyx and the emerald and the diamond, and in Ezekiel's prophecies concerning the splendors of the Tyrian court, the carbuncle is mentioned, the brilliancies of the walls and of the tassellated floors suggested by the Bible sentence, "Thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire!" But in my text it is not a solitary specimen that I hand you, as the keeper of a museum might take down from the shelf a precious stone and allow you to examine it. Nor is it the panel of a door that you might stand and study for its unique carvings or bronzed traceries, but there is a whole gate of it lifted before our admiring and astounded vision, aye! two gates of it, aye! many gates of it: "I will make thy gates of carbuncles." What gates? Gates of the Church. Gates of anything worth possessing. Gates of successful enterprise. Gates of salvation. Gates of national achievement. Isaiah, who wrote this text, wrote also all that about Christ "as the lamb to the slaughter," and spoke of Christ as saying, "I have trod the wine-press alone," and wrote, "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah?" And do you think that Isaiah in my text merely happened to represent the gates as red gates, as carmine gates, as gates of carbuncle? No. He means that it is through atonement, through blood-red struggle, through agonies we get into anything worth getting into. Heaven's gates may well be made of pearl, a bright, pellucid, cheerful crystallization, because all the struggles are over and there is beyond those gates nothing but raptures and cantata and triumphal procession and everlasting holiday and kiss of reunion, and so the twelve gates are twelve pearls, and could be nothing else than pearls. But Christ hoisted the gates of pardon in his own blood, and the marks of eight fingers and two thumbs are on each gate, and as he lifted the gate it leaned against his forehead and took from it a crimson impress, and all those gates are deeply dyed, and Isaiah was right when he spoke of those gates as gates of carbuncle.

What is true of individuals is true of nations. Was it a mild spring morning when the Pilgrim Fathers landed on Plymouth Rock, and did they come in a gilded yacht, gay streamers flying? No. It was in cold December, and from a ship in which one would not want to cross the Hudson or the Potomac River. Scalping knives all ready to receive them, they landed, their only welcome the Indian war-whoop. Red men on the beach. Red men in the forest. Red men on the mountains. Red men in the valleys. Living gates of red men. Gates of carbuncle!

We are not indebted to history for our knowledge of the greatest of national crises. Many of us remember it, and fathers and mothers now living had better keep telling that story to their children so that instead of their being dependent upon cold type and obliged to say, "On such a page of such a book you can read that," will they rather be able to say, "My father told me so!" "My mother told me so!" Men and women who vividly remember 1861, and 1862, and 1863, and 1864, be yourselves the historians, telling it, not with pen, but with living tongue and voice and gesture. That is the great use of Memorial Decoration Day, for the calla lilies on the grave-tops soon become breathless of perfume, and in a week turn to dust like unto that which lies beneath them. But the story of courage and self-sacrifice and patriotism told on platforms and in households and by the roadside and in churches and in cemeteries, by that annual recital will be kept fresh in the memory of generations as long as our American institutions are worthy of preservation. Long after you are dead your children will be able to say, with the Psalmist, "We have heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what work thou didst in their days, in the times of old." But what a time it was! Four years of homesickness! Four years of brotherly and sisterly estrangement! Four years of martyrdom! Four years of massacre! Put them in a long line, the conflagration of cities, and see them light up a whole continent! Put them in long rows, the hospitals, making a vast metropolis of pain and paroxysm! Gather them in one vast assemblage, the millions of bereft from the St. Lawrence to the Gulf, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific beaches! Put the tears into lakes, and the blood into rivers, and the shrieks into whirlwinds! During those four years many good and wise men at the North and the South saw nothing ahead but annihilation. With such a national debt we could never meet our obligations! With such mortal antipathies Northern and Southern men could never come into amity! Representatives of Louisiana and Georgia, and the Carolinas could never again sit side by side with the representatives of Maine, Massachusetts and New York at the national capital. Lord John Russell had declared that we were "a bubble-bursting nationality," and it had come true. The nations of Europe had gathered with very resigned spirit at the funeral of our American republic. They had tolled the bells on parliaments and reichstags and lowered their flags at half-mast, and even the lion on the other side of the sea had whined for the dead eagle on this side. The deep grave had been dug, and beside Babylon, and Thebes, and Tyre, and other dead nations of the past our dead republic was to be buried. The epitaph was all ready: "Here lies the American Republic. Born at Philadelphia, 4th of July, 1776. Killed at Bull Run July 21, 1861. Aged eighty-five years and seventeen days. Peace to its ashes." But before the obsequies had quite closed there was an interruption of the ceremonies, and our dead nation rose from its mortuary surroundings. God had made for it a special Resurrection Day, and cried, "Come forth, thou Republic of Washington, and John Adams, and Thomas Jefferson, and Patrick Henry, and John Hancock, and Daniel Webster, and S. S. Prentiss, and Henry Clay. Come forth!" And she came forth, to be stronger than she had ever been. Her mightiest prosperities have come since that time. Who would want to push back this country to what it was in 1860 or 1850? But, oh! what a high gate, what a strong gate she had to push back before she could make one step in advance! Gate of flame! See Norfolk navy yard, and Columbia, and Chambersburg, and Charleston on fire! Gate of bayonets! See glittering rifles and carbines flash from the Susquehanna, and the James, to the Mississippi, and the Arkansas! Gate of heavy artillery, making the mountains of Tennessee and Kentucky and Virginia tremble as though the earth itself were struggling in its last agony. The gate was so fiery and so red that I can think of nothing more appropriate than to take the suggestion of Isaiah in the text and call it a gate of carbuncles.

This country has been for the most part of its history passing through crises, and after each crisis was better off than before it entered it, and now we are at another crisis. We are told on one hand that if gold is kept as a standard and silver is not elevated, confidence will be restored and this nation will rise triumphant from all the financial misfortunes that have been afflicting us. On the other hand, we are told that if the free coinage of silver is allowed, all the wheels of business will revolve, the poor man will have a better chance, and all our industries will begin to hum and roar. During the last six presidential elections I have been urged to enter the political arena, but I never have and never will turn the pulpit in which I preach into a political stump. Every minister must do as he feels called to do, and I will not criticise him for doing what he considers his duty; but all the political harangues from pulpits from now until the 3d of November will not in all the United States change one vote, but will leave many ears stopped against anything that such clergymen may utter the rest of their lives. As a general rule the laymen of churches understand politics better than the clergy, because they (the laymen) study politics more than the clergy, and have better opportunity of being intelligent on those subjects. But good morals, honesty, loyalty, Christian patriotism, and the Ten Commandments—these we must preach. God says distinctly in the Bible, "The silver and the gold are mine," and He will settle the controversy between those two metals. If ever this country needed the Divine rescue it needs it now. Never within my memory have so many people literally starved to death as in the past few months. Have you noticed in the newspapers how many men and women here and there have been found dead, the post-mortem examination stating that the cause of death was hunger? There is not a day that we do not hear the crash of some great commercial establishment, and as a consequence many people are thrown out of employment. Among what we considered comfortable homes have come privation and close calculation and economy that kills. Millions of people who say nothing about it are at this moment at their wits' end. There are millions of people who do not want charity but want work. The cry has gone up to the ears of the "Lord of Sabaoth," and the prayer will be heard and relief will come. If we have nothing better to depend on than American politics, relief will never come. Whoever is elected to the presidency, the wheels of government turn so slowly, and a caucus in yonder white building on the hill may tie the hands of any president. Now, though we who live in the District of Columbia cannot vote, we can pray, and my prayer day and night shall be, "O, God, hear the cry of the souls from under the altar! Thou who hast brought the wheat and corn of this season to such magnitude of supply, give food to man and beast. Thou who hadst not where to lay Thy head, pity the shelterless. Thou who hast brought to perfection the cotton of the South and the flax of the North, clothe the naked. Thou who hast filled the mine with coal, give fuel to the shivering. Bring bread to the body, intelligence to the mind, and salvation to the soul of all the people! God save the nation!"

But we must admit that it is a hard gate to push back. Millions of thin hands have pushed at it without making it swing on its hard hinges. It is a gate made out of empty flour barrels, and cold fire grates,and worn out apparel, and cheerless homes,and unmedicated sickness, and ghastliness,and horror. It is a gate of struggle. A gate of penury. A gate of want. A gate of disappointment. A red gate, or what Isaiah would have called a gate of carbuncles.

Now, as I have already suggested, as there are obstacles in all our paths, we will be happier if we consent to have our life a struggle. I do not know any one to whom it is not a struggle. Louis the Fourteenth thought he had everything fixed just right and fixed to stay, and so he had the great clock at Bordeaux made. The hours of that clock were struck by figures in bronze representing the kings of Europe, and at a certain time of day William the Third of England and other kings were made to come out and bow to Louis the Fourteenth. But the clock got out of order one day and just the opposite of what was expected occurred, as the clock struck a certain hour Louis the Fourteenth was thrown to the feet of William the Third. And so the clock of destiny brings many surprises and those go down that you expected to stand, and at the foot of disaster most regal conditions tumble. In all the styles of life there comes disappointment and struggle. God has for some good reason arranged it so. If it is not poverty, it is sickness. If it is not sickness, it is persecution. If it is not persecution, it is contest with some evil appetite. If it is not some evil appetite, it is bereavement. If it is not one thing, it is another. Do not get soured and cross and think your case is peculiar. You are just like the rest of us. You will have to take the bitter draught whether it be handed to you in golden chalice or pewter mug. A man who has a thousand dollars a year income sleeps sounder and has a better appetite than the man who has five millions. If our life were not a struggle we would never consent to get out of this world, and we would want to stay here, and so block up the way of the advancing generations. By the time that a man gets to be seventy years of age, and sometimes by the time he gets to be fifty years of age, he says: "I have had enough of this, and when the Lord wills it I am ready to emigrate to a country where there are no taxes and the silver of the trumpet put to one's lips has no quarrel with the gold of the pavement under his feet." We have in this world more opportunity to cultivate patience than to cultivate any other grace. Let that grace be strengthened in the Royal Gymnasium of obstacle and opposition, and by the help of God, having overcome our own hindrances and worriments, let us go forth to help others whose struggle is greater than our own.

* * *

My hearers, it will be a great heaven for all who get through, but the best heaven for those who had on earth nothing but struggle. Blessed all those who, before then entered the gate of pearl, passed through the gate of carbuncle!

PERSIAN SOCIALISTS.

Imprisonment, Torture and Death Itself Do Not Appall the Baabi.

As to the real tenets of the baabis opinions differ, says the Fortnightly Review. They are socialists and undoubtedly adopt the system of community of property, while the orthodox Persians persistently assert that they practice polyandry, and the strange ceremonies of the Cheragh Karmush observed among the Yezeedis, or devil worshipers of Karrind, a district near Kermanshah; be this as it may, it is quite certain that each Baabi looks upon himself as an incarnation of God and reverences the baab, i. e., Sayud Mahommed Ali, as the prophet of God and the veritable incarnation of the Deity Himself. Unfortunately for the secretaries of the baab, there is a very simple means of recognizing them. A man being suspected of baabism is requested to curse the baab; if he be a baabi he invariably refuses to do this, though he knows full well that the refusal will assuredly cost him his life. Imprisonment, torture, death itself fail to shake the steadfast believers in the mission of the baab.

The writer saw a baabi led to prison in 1880; the man was a priest (mollah) who had been denounced by his wife. He was an old man and, though he was imprisoned and severely bastinadoed and offered life if he would curse the baab, yet he refused. When led to execution and entreated to curse the baab he replied:

"Curses on you, your prince (the zil-es-sultan, then governor of Ispahan), your king and all oppressors. I welcome death and long for it, for I shall instantly reappear on this earth and enjoy the delights of paradise."

When he ceased speaking the executioner advanced and slew him.

A PRETTY STORY.

What a Little Girl Said at Lunch With the Queen.

An amusing story of ingenious childhood is told by a former maid-of-honor in the service of Queen Victoria. A little niece of hers visited her one day at court. The queen caught sight of the child, and, pleased with her innocent prattle, asked the lady-in-waiting to have the little visitor come to luncheon some day at the palace. The child was taken on an appointed day to the royal table. While quite unconscious of the honor conferred upon her, she was quiet and well-behaved, and not inclined to talk unnecessarily. During the luncheon chicken was served. The child ate her portion with keen relish, and was careful in the use of knife and fork. Suddenly she stared at the queen with eyes like round towers. Then pointing her small finger in the direction of her majesty, she exclaimed with a tone of reproof: "O, piggie! piggie!" The queen had taken one of the chicken bones quite delicately in her fingers, but he carefully trained child, who had been warned in the nursery that this was a breach of propriety in young people, could not refrain from repeating an expression that she had often heard her governess use. Every one at the table was startled, but the queen at once led in the laughter, enjoying quite keenly the joke at her own expense.—Youth's Companion.

Bicycles Take the Place of Dogs.

Eastern dealers in dogs say that the demand for their stock has increased rapidly. They declare that the woman who formerly fondled poodles and terriers for amusement now devotes herself to her bicycle so enthusiastically that she has no leisure for dogs. The demand for large dogs has almost ceased, because the men who used to take them on their walks now ride a wheel and don't want to be bothered with dogs. Several men who ride regularly on the boulevard are followed by dogs, but this hasn't become a fad. A man who owns a kennel offered to make me a present of a St. Bernard pup the other day. This fact of itself bears out the plaint of the dog dealers, for the breed he asked me to choose from used to be quoted high here and elsewhere.

The Voters of This Country.

Exact information as to the number of married and single men in this country is not easily obtainable, but according to the statistics of the last census there were in the United States 12,690,152 families, living in 11,483,318 dwellings. The number of families thus corresponds very closely with the vote at the last presidential election. Of course, the families comprise single as well as married men, and some statistician has calculated that the former are about one-fourth the number of the latter.

Squoze $23 Worth.

"The evidence shows that he sot up with her night after night, and they squoze hands and talked soft, and I think she ought to have about $23 damages," was the charge of a Kansas judge to a jury in a breach-of-promise case.

Fort Dodge Chronicle:—The tenant farmers in many counties in northwestern part of the state are banding together for purpose of forming renters' leagues. The object is to prevent farm owners from forcing farm tenants to pay cash rent and to compel them to take a share of the produce instead. It is said that Ida County has a league of 300 renters. The action taken is largely due to the failure of the oats crop and the low prices in other produce. The movement promises to spread throughout the state.

Amsden's
Hog Cholera Preventative.

Hog cholera has baffled science! No remedy has yet been found which will save the hog after it has actually got the cholera.

Hog cholera can be prevented! It has been proven time after time that this medicine will positively protect the hog from this fatal disease.

In 1877 the farmers of the U. S. lost by hog cholera alone over forty-five millions of dollars. The annual loss now (1896) is five million dollars.

Progressive farmers now realize that the old maxim. "an ounce of preventation is worth a pound of cure. "works well in this case because, while hog cholera cannot be cured, it can be prevented. Amsden's Hog Cholera Preventative is not expensive and is a certain protection to swine herds.

Directions for use.—Give one tablespoonfull for each 200 lb. hog in wet oats, slop, or ground feed. May be given once or twice a day. Manufactured by The Garner Remedy Company, Garner, Iowa. Price $1.00. For sale everywhere.

CHAPTER IV.—(CONTINUED.)

"Tom," said Mr. Vernon, in a thick, broken voice. "I'm not going to be a hypocrite, least of all with you. I have not looked into that book since I was a young man. I do not love it. Had you brought me a Shakespeare, I should have hailed it more gladly than a chest of gold; but a Bible—keep it, Tom, I do not want a Bible."

Tom had dropped his hold of the chest to clasp the little book closely to his breast. His eyes glowed; his rough face kindled into enthusiasm.

"What, sir, with all your learning and knowledge you don't understand the value of a Bible? Why I, that have such a hard time a-spelling out the words, knew its worth long ago. How are we going to live here all alone on this heathenish island? How are we going to bring up two immortal souls without a Bible? How are we going to die and ship for a cruise that has no return voyage? Oh, sir, I don't believe my own ears—how could you have lived all these years without a Bible?"

A gloomy stare was his only answer.

"Poor soul, poor soul!" continued Tom, in a soothing, chiding voice, such as he would have used to a wayward child. No wonder you've been so sorrowful and benighted. 'Pears to me I see the Lord's hand in this. He don't mean to lose so useful a servant as you oughter be. He's put you here where your fine false books sha'n't hurt, and has left you only one to read. Here it is; take it—oh, sir, take it, for poor Tom's sake—for your boy's sake."

Here Tom's voice failed, and fairly sobbing, he thrust the book into the unwilling hand and darted into the woods.

Mr. Vernon's face was fairly ghastly beneath his struggling emotions. Bidding the children help Tom unload the raft, he turned and strode, not in Tom's direction, but toward the hills, into whose verdurous depths his tall form speedily disappeared. They did not see him again that day. Late in the evening, when perturbed and anxious, Tom was just setting out to find him, he made his appearance. The intense brightness of tropic starlight showed Tom his face. It was like a sea over which a storm had passed or a green valley where a hurricane had swept. There were traces of great struggles, of mighty forces battling fiercely, scattered wrecks, uprooted growths of many years' mistakes and sin, the blackened mark of the lightning's scathing, the exhaustion and weakness of intense excitement—but his eye shone clear and bright, like the sun that has dispersed the clouds; the air was purified, the tempest over.

"Tom," said he, holding out his hand, "my brother, my best friend, your hand has smitten the hard rock, and the waters have gushed forth. Here is your Bible. I will read it every night, and you shall teach us three children its divine meaning, its holy encouragements, its beneficent forgiveness."

Even as he spoke he staggered and caught at a tree for support.

"You are weak and overcome, sir," said Tom, anxiously. "You have fasted all day, I fear. Let me help you to the house and give you a little of the brandy."

"Fasting and humiliation are for such as me," answered he, "but I believe through your blessed influence the light is breaking. Yes, let us go in. Tonight, Tom, for the first time these many years, I have prayed with my whole heart and strength and soul."

Nothing more was said, although Tom laid awake half the night listening in sorrowful sympathy to the restless tossings, the stifled sighs and gushing tears that came from the bamboo couch behind him. Toward morning he fell asleep, and when he awoke, there, at the head of the other bed sat Mr. Vernon, his pale face no longer cynical and gloomy, but irradiated with peaceful joy, as he bent, utterly absorbed, over the sacred volume.

"All right," said Tom, joyfully, as he slipped away noiselessly to find the children busily following Mr. Vernon's hint, and preparing a breakfast for their slumbering friend.

"We'll have a little change shortly," said he, devouring, to their infinite satisfaction, with much relish, the nicely-peeled bananas. "I saw some fine fish and lots o' wild ducks yesterday; and, alongside of Walter's pig, I calculate we'll be ready for foul weather. Plenty of work will keep us all busy and happy too, thank the Lord."

Which communication was reiterated when Mr. Vernon came out from their log retreat and joined them on the green.

"Ah, sir," said Tom, "I feel more reconciled to this the more I think on't. Jest this beautiful spot is right for a body to spend his last days in. We'll not be hankering after worldly goods and forget to look to the harbor we're drifting to. I shouldn't mind seeing old England again and my good sister Honor. You see, sir, she and I was all there was, and so we kinder sot more by one another than common folks. I'll warrant the poor soul has cried her eyes red many a night for wanting to see me, and 'twill be a dreadful stroke when she knows the ship's lost. But one of these days she'll know everything; 'taint so long, anyhow, this 'ere life of ours. Besides, Honor's a mighty smart woman; she'll take care of her self and other folks too. I wish she'd a-had all the wages the ship owed me, but, lawful heart, who knows—perhaps the good Lord's rewarded her with great things by this time. I hope she'll get a kind, good husband to make my place good. I ain't going to worry, anyhow—I'll be happy here where the Lord's put me."

"You've always done so, I suspect, my brave-hearted Tom, and a useful lesson have you taught me; and here now is my hand to join you now in the bargain—to do the best and be the best we can."

"Not most like for the sake o' them," ventured Tom, nodding toward the children, "but for that"—lifting his eyes reverently upward.

"Ay, for that," answered Mr. Vernon, grasping the outstretched hand. And so the compact was sealed.

Two months saw a great change in our island. A newly-paved walk led up from the water to the green; a comfortable, commodious, if not luxurious, dwelling peeped romantically from the embowering vines whose luxuriance hid the roughness of the log foundation. Carefully tended flowers had been transplanted to its little plot, and within the house was tastefully arranged the pretty, ingenious bamboo furniture upon which Tom was never weary of descanting, declaring that no one but Mr. Vernon could have produced anything so good to use and pretty to look at.

Everything that was saved from the ship was used to deck the pretty parlor, which was sometime to be given up entirely to Eleanor's use; and there was a shelf filled with the treasures Tom had concealed until his quick perception was satisfied that they would not be able to injure the preciousness of Mr. Vernon's Bible—a Shakespeare, a dictionary, an old history, and "Faulkner's Shipwreck," besides a quaint old-fashioned novel and an almanac that Tom declared to be worth all the rest.

Outside, just far enough to suit Mr. Vernon's fastidious taste—which Tom respected, though he could not understand it—was the former's especial pride and delight, where he whiled away in placid satisfaction many an idle half hour—the pig-pen, whose unruly inhabitant had been secured by stratagem of war that had delighted Walter hugely. Beyond that was set a large coop with some half a dozen wild ducks, and in a pen built over a small pool lounged in the sun three or four fat turtles.

Here was Tom's field of congenial labor, although in no wise did he neglect any other branch of the business, as Walter facetiously termed it. Indeed most industriously and tenderly had he watched the few hills which he had planted with the corn found scattered round the ship's hold—a forlorn and hopeless task, as he was finally obliged to confess, for in that latitude of prodigal lavishness the hope and comfort of sterile regions refused to grow.

Another useful task had the worthy sailor performed; he had nailed the flag saved from the sinking wreck—field reversed as a signal of distress—upon the top of the tallest tree on the hill behind them, saying as he did so:

"There! if only one of our British frigates get sight o' the old flag calling for help, I'll be bound they'll tack and come many a knot out o' the way to see what's wanted."

CHAPTER V.

TEN years have passed since the "Petrel" lay a broken wreck, dashing to and fro, on the coral reef of the little island. Still the patched and yet tattered flag floats off from the cocoa tree on the hill, and still the little log dwelling, now enlarged, and a perfect bower of glossy vine and gorgeous blossom, stands beneath the grove of palm and cocoanut. At the door of the "Retreat"—a name Mr. Vernon had given it at first—sat that gentleman himself. Time had added sad furrows to his forehead and scattered silver threads plentifully in his dark hair, but the face itself was most essentially changed. Could that benigh, tranquil countenance belong to the cynical misanthrope who railed at the fate that saved him from a watery grave? Ah, the well-worn book clasped in his thin fingers betrays the secret of the change. Tom's Bible has become a valued and abiding friend; the tempest-tossed spirit is moored safely to the Rock of Ages, has found the peace that the world cannot give and cannot take away. Mr. Vernon's eye was raised quietly from the book as a merry whistle and measured tread broke the stillness, while Tom—our same rough, bright-faced Tom—came trudging down the hill with a pole hung with bread-fruit on his back.

"You are home early, Tom. Where are the children?"

"I didn't have to go so far as I expected. Walter has got a nice string of fish, too—reg'lar beauties. I didn't catch the pig in the trap this time, but the other I reckon will fetch him. Oh, the children, they stopped at the rock Walter calls Nelly's Throne, and as I come along I see—well, no matter, but I can't help laughing to think we're calling them children. I begin to think they're getting along to be young folks mighty fast."

Mr. Vernon started up and said hurriedly, while a shade crossed his forehead:

"I will go and meet them."

"What's the matter now, I wonder?" soliloquized Tom, removing the odd affair, half hat, half turban, to wipe his moist forehead. "I'm sure there's no need o' meddling with honest lovemaking; it's lawful for a magistrate to marry a couple, and since we hain't a parson, why won't Mr. Vernon do jest as well?"

Meanwhile Mr. Vernon had taken a path which led him up a cliff which jutted over the water. He paused a moment in involuntary admiration of the scene before him.

The huge white rock of coral formation rose out of the embowering green like a throne indeed, and all around it, catching here at a tiny stalk, there at a down-reaching branch, festooned vines, whose brilliant-hued flowers seemed like garlands flung at the feet of royalty. Overhead canopied the feathered spray of the inimitably graceful palm tree, and below, far below, foamed the surf, dashing its frothy columns against the coral piers that supported the rock, and above all spread out the intense blue of a tropic sky, arching down afar off to meet the line of distant sea. Yet it was not upon inanimate nature that Mr. Vernon's mild gray eye dwelt so fondly, but on the graceful living tableau—the crowning charm upon the coral rock—for there, sitting lightly as a bird upon its perch, was a slender, willowy form, not round enough for childhood and too aerial for womanhood. A thin robe of thin muslin, gathered by a girdle at the waist, fell down upon the rock, hiding with an illusive veil such rose-tinted, naked feet—slipped clear from the awkward sandal—as Aphrodite herself might have envied. The round white arm, resting carelessly on the rock, supported a head whose youthful grace and loveliness no naiad's mirror ever rivaled. The sunny ripples of curls overflowed with their ring of bronzed gold the vine that garlanded her head; the clear eyes shone with a deeper blue than the starry blossoms knotted in her breast; the sweet lips mocked saucily with their vivid carnation the pale rose of the cheek. And this was little Ellie! The transformation was as marvelous as that which changes the hard, dull coil of green into the wonderful beauty of the newly-opened rose.

No wonder there was a look of almost idolatrous affection in the dark eyes of the handsome youth who reclined carelessly at her feet. A sigh escaped Mr. Vernon as with newly-opened eyes he read aright the language of his son's face. For ten years had these children been his pupils; from his hand they had received the invigorating draughts of knowledge; in his steps had they followed to the outskirts of the immortal fountain of Science; for them had he delineated the beautiful sights his artist's soul drank in so eagerly; and, more than all, tremblingly, solemnly had he knelt with them before the Throne of Grace. All his acquired gifts and natural genius had been exerted to the utmost to atone to them for the deprivations of their lot, and he, their guide, their teacher, their closest friend, had been blind to their inner lives, and had needed the voice of sharp-eyed Tom to point it out to him.

He strode a step forward, and then paused again, for Eleanor was speaking.

MASSACHUSETTS DEMOCRATS.

Hold Four Separate Conventions and Nominate George Fred Williams.

BOSTON, Sept. 28.—The democrats of Massachusetts met in four separate conventions. The convention was to have met in Music Hall. The silver delegations, led by George Fred Williams, fearing treachery on the part of the gold forces, held the hall all night and the doors were guarded from without so that no one could go in. When the time for the convention arrived Williams was nominated for governor and a full state ticket placed in the field. The silverites who couldn't get in held a convention and endorsed any action taken in the hall. The gold standard men held another convention and also nominated Williams. From the latter convention, however, a number of gold men bolted and nominated a ticket to run on the Indianapolis platform.

VICTORIA'S PROUD RECORD.

Has Reigned Longer Than Any Other English Sovereign.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Queen Victoria's reign now exceeds that of her grandfather, George III., and she has therefore ruled longer than any other British monarch. George III. ruled fifty-nine years, three months and two days. Her majesty has sat on the throne fifty-nine years, three months and three days. All public rejoicings, however, have been deferred until July of next year, when, if spared, the queen will have actually completed a reign of sixty years.

THE 24-HOUR BICYLE RACE.

The American Record Broken by Four of the Contestants.

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—The American record was broken by four men in the 24-hour bicycle race at the Coliseum. The score at the finish was: Grimm, 486 miles, 1,151 yards; Waller, 482 miles, 968 yards; Schinner, 462 miles, 567 yards; Miller, 459 miles, 233 yards; Myers, 427 miles, 887 yards.

One Thousand Killed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 26.—It now appears that 1,000 Armenians were killed in the massacre in the Kharput district. It is reported that 100 Armenians were killed at Dihvrig in the same district.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—A Constantinople dispatch to the Times says that a slaughter of Armenians is reported at Kaiseriea and at Ghemereh. The Daily Mail has a Constantinople dispatch which confirms the foregoing news and which says that 120 Armenians have been slain at Ghemereh.

Russian Policy in China.

LONDON, Sept. 24.—A dispatch to the Globe from Shanghai says that the despatch of the Russian squadron to Shanghai will be the first result of an agreement reached between Li Hung Chang and Russia, which is viewed with great anxiety and suspicion in Japan. China, it is added, is repeatedly repairing the docks and workshops of Port Arthur, and is storing there vast quantities of coal. It is thought that these movements indicate a startling development in the Russian policy.

Illinois Miners Strike.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23.—As a result of failure on the part of the owners to increase the pay of miners from 18½ to 19½ cents per box, the coal miners in the three mines in St. Clair county, Illinois, have quit work. About 300 men are out, and as their action is sanctioned by President O'Conner, of the United Mine Workers, the strike promises to spread to other mines.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, Sept. 24.—Patents have been allowed, but not yet issued, as follows: To L. Bolton & Co., of Des Moines, for a trade-mark for soap, consisting of the words "Black Crow," or the picture of a black crow. To A. W. Knee, of Humboldt, for a unique match safe and cigar tip cutter, from which only one match can be taken at a time. To G. W. Aulman, of Des Moines, for independent adjustable roller bearing supports for clay grinding machines. To C. M. Smith, of Lake City, for an apparatus for tubing deep wells. It is specially adapted for oil wells where water-bearing strata requires the tube to pass therethrough to enter the oil and prevent water from entering the well tube at its bottom portion. To L. Bunker, of Webster City, for a pipe coupling cast complete in one piece and specially adapted for single pipe water heating systems in which water is delivered to and from radiators direct from a supply pipe. To F. L. Beymer, of Indianola, for a sheet metal stove that has a hot blast air draught to heat air to a high temperature to aid combustion and a radiator enclosed over the combination chamber to advantageously distribute the products of combustion and to increase the maximum of heating capacity as required to economize fuel in warming a room.

RIOT AT LEADVILLE.

Bloodshed and Flames—Five Men Dead, Others Dying, Many Homeless.

Leadville, Colo., dispatch: Three men are dead, two others are dying, the Coronado shaft house and machinery are in ashes and innocent householders are homeless as the result of an attack by parties as yet unknown, upon the Coronado and Emmet mines, as a result of the miners' strike. The first attack was made on the Coronado, which is in the heart of the city and surrounded by residences. People in the neighborhood were aroused by a perfect fusilade of musketry in the direction of the Coronado. Suddenly and while the firing continued, flames burst from the shaft house, tollowed by a terrible explosion of dynamite. This brought the fire department to the scene and just as they were getting ready for action three men came from hiding and compelled them with rifles to stop work. Meanwhile the flames grew fiercer and the men in the shaft house, who were protecting the mines, were driven from their fort. As they ran over the high trestle leading out of the shafts, several shots were fired at them, but they reached the dump near at hand in safety. By this time a hundred armed citizens had gathered and under their protection the firemen proceeded to save the houses in the vicinity from the flames. Just as Jerry O'Keefe, the foreman of the hose company, was turning on the water, a bullet pierced his side and he fell mortally wounded. Two others were killed and two injured in the affray. Later an attack was made on the Emmet mine. There were over 100 shots fired, but the attack was repulsed and no lives are known to have been lost. The strike, of which this bloody battle is the outgrowth, began the 19th of June. Some of the more radical element of the strikers have declared "they would clean out the state" and even the government troops rather than see outside labor come to the camp. All efforts to compromise differences have failed.

Persons who were watching the attack on the Emmet mine say the first volley from the mine was delivered from close range, and that the attacking party fell like grain before the sickle. One man was killed but how many met a like fate may remain for search of a long abandoned shaft in that vicinity to tell. It now seems that the rioters dragged away their dead and wounded. Several companies of state militia are now on the scene and further trouble is not anticipated.

Late advices show that five men are dead and a dozen or more are injured.

THAT "GREAT ASSASSIN."

Gladstone Writes a Letter Concerning the Sultan and Armenians.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Chronicle publishes a long letter from Mr. Gladstone, addressed to M. Maurice Laudet, of the Paris Figaro. The letter was written in response to an appeal made by M. Laudet to Mr. Gladstone to arouse the English press in behalf of the Armenians. Mr. Gladstone declares it his belief that the population of Great Britain is more united in sentiment and more thoroughly aroused by the present outrages in Turkey than they were by the atrocities in Bulgaria in 1876. In conclusion he says: "In other years, when I possessed power, I did my best to promote the concert of Europe, but I sorrowfully admit that all the good done in Turkey during the last twenty years was done, not by it, but more nearly despite it." The letter concludes by expressing the hope that the French people will pursue a policy worthy of their greatness, their fame and the high place they have held in European Christian history.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 25.—In the course of an address before the Liverpool Reform Club, Mr. Gladstone said: "England has a just right to coerce Turkey, and the first step must be the recall of our ambassador from Constantinople and the consequent dismissal of the Turkish ambassador in London. That would not cause an European war. England could then tell the porte that she meant to consider means of enforcing her own just demands. We should declare that we would not turn any ensuing war to our own advantage. Let us extract ourselves from our present ambiguous position. Let us renounce our neutrality. Let us, by loyally promising Her Majesty's ministers our enthusiastic support, induce them by word and deed to show their detestation of acts which may even yet come to such a depth of atrocity as has never yet been recorded in the deplorable history of human crime." Resolutions offered by the ex-premier, declaring that the government would have the fullest public support in whatever steps it might take to put a stop to the atrocities being committed in Turkey, were adopted unanimously.

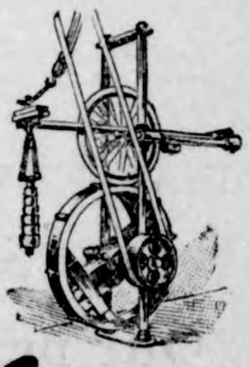
Proper Tires



We have made a study of tires—pounded them year in and year out by thousands on our wheel-testing machine, tested them for elasticity, for speed, for durability—had reports from riders and agents everywhere. Result is the wonderfully elastic and durable Hartford Single-Tube Tires used on

Columbia Bicycles

STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Hartford Tires are easiest to repair in case of puncture, strongest, safest, best.

Columbia Art Catalogue, telling fully of all Columbias, and of Hartford Bicycles, trustworthy machines of lower price, is free from any Columbia agent; by mail for two 2-cent stamps.

Prof. Babcock, the well-known Chemist, says:—

"I find that Walter Baker & Co.'s Breakfast Cocoa is absolutely pure. It contains no trace of any substance foreign to the pure roasted cocoa-bean. The color is that of pure cocoa; the flavor is natural, and not artificial; and the product is in every particular such as must have been produced from the pure cocoa-bean without the addition of any chemical, alkali, acid, or artificial flavoring substance, which are to be detected in cocoas prepared by the so-called 'Dutch process.'"

W. R. ROBERTS, who is widely and favorably known in banking and business circles of Omaha, Neb., writes on March 7th, 1896: "I have been troubled with NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA, cold feet and hands and lack of circulation, loss of flesh, etc. I commenced taking Dr. Kay's Renovator Jan'y 15, 1896, and I continued to improve from the third day, and have found this medicine most pleasant, no griping, no sickness at the stomach; but a complete Renovator, and I voluntarily, without the Doctor's request, recommend this to any one afflicted with indigestion and nervousness which follows. I now eat well, sleep well, and have gained about twenty-five pounds in weight, am free from cold feet or hands, circulation good, and I feel better than for many years, and I attribute this to Dr. Kay's Renovator. One 25ct box will convince anyone that it surpasses the whole train of pills and cathartics usually taken. I now only take one little tablet when I overload my stomach and it will relieve me at once." AT THIS TIME OF THE YEAR it is invaluable, as it renovates and invigorates the whole system and purifies and enriches the blood, giving new life and vigor to the whole body, curing spring fever, dyspepsia, constipation, liver and kidney diseases and all nervous and blood diseases, headache, biliousness, etc. It is the best nerve tonic known for worn out business men. It has 2 to 4 times as many doses as liquid medicines selling for the same price Sold by druggists or sent by mail for 25cts and $1. Send for free sample and booklet; it has many valuable recipes, gives symptoms and treatment for nearly all diseases, and many say it is worth $5 if they could not get another. Address Dr. B. J. In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rushford N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicine referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup, Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. Mrs. Alice Stockberger is a pretty widow of Rochester, Ind., and John Walters is a rich farmer aged 70, who lives near Peru. Uncle John "made up" to the widow and after a while changed his mind, whereupon Mrs. S. sued for damages. The jury kindly awarded her $4,200, but while she was congratulating herself the judge cut the amount down to $1,200. Uncle John is now admonishing the boys to beware of "vidders," just the same.

Charles McQuinn, a wandering Willie, struck Louisville the other day and applied at the Wayfarers' Rest for a night's lodging. He explained that he had not slept in a bed for three years, and he wanted to experience a new sensation by reposing just once in a nice warm bed. He got more than his wildest fancy depicted. He got a red-hot bed and new sensations to throw at the birds. The bed given him had not had a human occupant for some days, but others than tramps hanker after warm beds. Unbeknownst to the managers a swarm of bees had come in through the open window, and had appropriated the mattress as a makeshift hive. They resented the intrusion of Mr. McQuinn pointedly, so to speak, and warmly. He was cured, perhaps forever, of the baneful desire to sleep in a warm bed, and took to the woods again. Almost as painful as the stinging rebukes administered by the bees was the reflection that he had worked three hours chopping wood to get the coveted bed.

The amount of railway capital on June 30, 1895, is shown by the government report to be $10,985,203,125,or $63,330 per mile of line. The increase during the year was $188,729,312. Railway capital was distributed as follows: The amount of capital stock was $4,961,258,656, of which $4,201,697,351 was common stock, and $759,561,305 preferred stock; the funded debt was $5,407,114,313, classified as bonds, $4,659,873,548, miscellaneous obligations, $445,221,472, income bonds, $246,103,966, and equipment trust obligations, $55,915,327; the current liabilities amounted to $616,830,156. Of the capital stock outstanding, $1,169,071,178, or 23.57 per cent was owned by the railway corporations, as well as $437,508,841, or 9.39 per cent of bonds outstanding. These figures show an increase in the corporate ownership of securities, probably rather due to railway consolidation than to the strengthening of reserve funds. Stock to the amount of $3,475,640,203, or 70.05 per cent of the total outstanding paid no dividend, and $904,436,200, or 16.90 per cent of funded debt, exclusive of equipment trust obligations, paid no interest during the year covered by the report. In no other year since the organization of the Division of Statistics has so large a percentage of stock passed its dividends, or, except in 1894, has so large a percentage of funded debt defaulted its interest. Of the stock paying dividends, 6.89 per cent of the total stock outstanding paid from 4 to 5 per cent; 5.39 per cent of this stock paid from 5 to 6 per cent; 4.41 per cent paid from 6 to 7 per cent, and 3.99 per cent paid from 7 to 8 per cent. The total amount of dividends was $85,287,543, which would be produced by an average rate of 5.74 per cent on the amount of stock on which some dividend was declared. The amount of bonds paying no interest was $624,702,293, or 13.41 per cent; of miscellaneous obligations, $54,498,288, or 12.24 per cent; of income bonds, $225,235,619, or 91.52 per cent.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

IOWA'S FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

BURLINGTON, Oct. 2.—The exercises attending Iowa's semi-centennial began yesterday. It was governor's day. There was a magnificent parade participated in by the Iowa National Guard, a number of Tama Indians and a large number of floats. During the progress of the parade the reviewing stand upon which the governor and his party were standing gave way, precipitating them to the ground. Vice-President Stevenson, ex-Governor Sherman, ex-Governor Newbold, Lafayette Young, Rev. Dr. S. N. Fellows, Auditor of State McCarthy, City Commissioner Jones, Lieut. Col. Rowen, Major Wyman and County Treasurer Burris were all shaken up pretty badly, the latter received a compound fracture of the legs, and others receiving severe bruises and sprains. In the afternoon an extended program was carried out at the park. Governor Drake and Lafayette Young made addresses. In the evening a banquet was given in honor of Vice-President Stevenson and Governor Drake.

DAUGHERTY CASE AT ALBIA.

Daugherty and Dr. King Charged With Mrs. Daugherty's Death.

OTTUMWA, Oct. 3.—Mrs. W. E. Daugherty, a prominent young society woman of Albia, died suddenly, recently. She had been separated from her husband on account of domestic troubles until a few weeks ago, when they began living together again. The husband had her life insured for $5,000, and when she died the relatives of the woman caused an investigation to be made. The coroner empaneled a jury, which rendered a verdict to the effect that the death of Mrs. Daugherty had been caused by a criminal operation and want of proper care, and held the husband, W. E. Daugherty, and a prominent physician, Dr. A. M. King, on the charge of murder, as being responsible for her death. Both parties were arrested and bound over to the grand jury under heavy bonds. The case, involving as it does the most prominent people of Albia, has created intense excitement and much bitter feeling.

KILLED IN A RUNAWAY.

Mrs. Mary Funk Met Death Instantly in Cass County.

ATLANTIC, Oct. 3.—A terrible accident occurred near here, in which Mrs. Mary Funk was killed, Mrs. O. Netz fatally injured, and an adopted child of Mrs. Netz, 4 years old, had both limbs crushed and was hurt internally and may not live. The accident was caused by a team, belonging to Frank Olsen, breaking loose from the hitching post at Eli Adams' home, in Bear Grove township, and running away, overtaking Mrs. Mary Funk, mother of W. O. and M. H. Funk; Mrs. O. Netz and adopted daughter, who were in a buggy. The horses, Mrs. Netz said, seemed to spring up on top of the buggy, crushing it to the ground, and they were not able to escape. Mrs. Netz cannot live.

HOWELL A DEFAULTER.

Postmaster at Sidney a Fugitive From Justice.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Oct. 22.—Postoffice Inspector Mercer wires from Sidney to look out for M. R. Howell, postmaster of that place, who is a defaulter to the extent of $800 and a fugitive from justice. Howell always stood well in the community. For this reason Mercer allowed him to go out to try to make up the shortage. Failing, he skipped. Possible suicide is hinted at.

FATHER AND SON INDICTED.

Dr. Paul and James Paul Charged With Murder in First Degree.

WEBSTER CITY, Oct. 3.—The grand jury has returned indictments against Jim Paul, now in custody, and his father, Dr. Paul, of Homer, for murder in the first degree. The indictments are the result of the sudden death, by poisoning, of Mrs. Maria Dulin, at Homer, last July.

MINING SCALE FIXED.

The Threatened Strike in the Centerville District is Averted.

CENTERVILLE, Oct. 2.—A settlement of the mining difficulty has been reached by compromising on 85 cents for winter mining. Reports from all districts are that all miners will go to work on these terms.

W. A. Cummings Found Guilty.

DES MOINES, Oct. 2.—The jury in the case of W. A. Cummings, charged with criminal assault upon Myrtie Rockwell, brought in a verdict of guilty. Cummings has also been indicted for criminal assault upon Bessie Stephens and it is expected he will be indicted for criminal assault upon Bessie Fairless. The crime is alleged to have occurred on the river bank in the city. The girls are about 12 years old.

MAHASKA COUNTY'S COURT.

Damage Suit for $10,000 Against Dr. Gunn.

OSKALOOSA, Oct. 1.—The biggest of all big dockets in the Mahaska district court is made up for the term which has just opened. There are 650 cases in all, divided as follows: 50 criminal, 100 probate and 500 law and equity. Among the sensational cases is a damage suit for $10,000 against J. A. Gunn, of Fremont. This is brought by Mrs. Ida Severt, mother of Irene Severt, whose death brought up the now famous case of last winter. The damage grows out of the old case. The suit against Thomas Seevers, claiming $8,000, is also set for hearing. The charge is that of bastardy, preferred by Mary Crooks. Then there is a breach of promise suit that will attract a great deal of attention. It is the case of B. F. Winkleman, a retired farmer, against Sarah Winkleman, claiming $10,000 damages. In the petition he states Sarah is his brother's widow and a neighbor. He also alleges that he is of a nervous temperament, rendered so by diseases contracted in the war. On her promise of marrying him he was weak enough to sell her about $7,000 worth of property for $4,000, and deeded her his farm. He now claims she has refused to fulfill her marriage contract and has not put up any cash, wherefore he thinks he is entitled to the $10,000 damages.

ANOTHER ELECTION WANTED

Mt. Pleasant Citizens Determined to Own Their Lighting Plant.

MT. PLEASANT, Oct. 2.—Since last spring Mt. Pleasant has had three elections upon the question of owning an electric plant. The first election failed by reason of defective ballots. The second election was set aside on another technicality. The third election has just occurred, and the local gas company, it is alleged, by a lavish use of money, defeated the lighting proposition, and the town is in an uproar about the corrupt means used. Citizens are talking about calling another election to see whether the gas company owns the city or the city owns itself.

WRECK AT KRUM.

C. B. & Q. Passenger Train Collides with a Freight.

OTTUMWA, Oct. 3.—One man, Harry Moore, was killed, Superintendent C. M. Levy's private car was thrown over and a number of passengers of the C. B. & Q. train No. 2 were shaken up at Krum, a station east of Ottumwa. The passenger train was backing up and the rear end crashed into a freight train standing on a siding. Moore was a flagman who had been in the employ of the company for many years.

The Atlantic Failure.

ATLANTIC, Oct. 5.—At a meeting of the creditors of the Bank of Atlantic Receiver Bruff stated that the good assets of the bank, including F. H. Whitney's indebtedness, aggregated $174,000 and liabilities $179,000. A committee was appointed to examine the assets of the bank and Whitney's real estate. It has been suggested that the creditors reorganize the bank and take stock for 50 per cent of their claims, the balance to be paid to them in semi-annual installments and James G. Whitney to act as cashier.

Burglars in Fayette County.

OELWEIN, Oct. 5.—Thieves broke into Parker's tailor shop and stole about $150 worth of goods, taking every made-up garment in the shop. At Hazleton, a small station four miles south of Oelwein, Curtis' grocery and boot and shoe store was entered; also Miller's dry goods store, and from $800 to $1,000 worth of goods stolen. No clew to the thieves has as yet been obtained, but the officers are on the lookout for suspicious characters.

Brakeman Suicides.

CARROLL, Oct. 5.—Frank Wier, a brakeman on a passenger train running on the Moville branch, suicided by shooting himself. His wife was away from home on a visit. No cause is known for the rash act.

BREVITIES.

Mrs. D. W. McDougal was burned to death near Waterloo recently while burning rubbish. Her 12-year-old son was also burned slightly while trying to save his mother. Her clothing was entirely burned from her body, except a portion of one stocking and her shoes. She rode in that condition in a wagon half a mile to her home.

Atlantic dispatch: Frank H. Whitney and Whitney & Son, bankers, made an assignment and J. B. Bruff was appointed receiver. The bank proper has $200,000 liabilities and assets $175,000, liable to shrinkage, and composed of notes, bills and credits that cannot be made available at once. Only $1,000 in cash was on hand.

J. T. Gunning, a pioneer of Linn county, who has resided in Cedar Rapids for fifty-two years, came to his death a few days ago in an unusual manner. He was passing along the highway, when he met a neighbor with whom he had been having some dealings. They talked a few minutes, and just as his neighbor handed him a small sum of money, Mr. Gunning fell dead.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

THEATER HORROR.

Forty Injured, Four of Them Fatally, By a Fire at Aberdeen.

ABERDEEN, Oct. 2.—During the progress of the performance in the People's Palace Variety theater a fire broke out and the audience was thrown into a panic and made a rush for the exits. A number of those present were seriously burned and many others were crushed by the wild endeavors of the frantic crowd to reach the street. It is stated that at least forty persons were injured, four of them fatally, while a number of others who are known to have been in the theater when the fire started are missing. The building was completely gutted by the flames. Three bodies have been found in the ruins of the theater and fears are entertained that the search, which is being actively carried on, will result in the discovery of others.

NATIONAL BANK ROBBED.

Two Thousand Dollars Secured at Joseph, Ore.—One Man Killed.

LA GRANGE, Ore., Oct. 3.—The First National bank of Joseph, Wallow county, was robbed of $2,000 by three men, one of whom is dead, another badly wounded and the third is being pursued by a posse of citizens. At the time of the holdup there were four customers in the bank. When the robbers appeared outside the bank, Alex Donnely, a young man, opened fire and killed one of the robbers instantly and wounded another. The third robber had the sack containing the coin and succeeded in reaching a horse which was standing near by.

VOORHEES IS VERY ILL.

Will Be Unable to Take Part in the Campaign.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 3.—It is understood here at his home that Senator Voorhees is very ill at Mackinaw, but those who know his actual condition will say nothing. A month ago, when it was reported that he would take no part in the campaign, denials from various quarters quickly appeared in the papers, and it was said he would be in the state by the 20th of September. Since then nothing has been heard from him. The understanding is that he will not be able to take part in the campaign at all, and that it is doubtful if he ever again appears in public life.

GREAT COAL STRIKE.

Rioters in Bohemia Wreck the Offices of the Mining Company.

VIENNA, Oct. 2.—Twenty-five hundred coal miners at Brux and Occeg in Bohemia have gone on a strike, and becoming riotous, wrecked the offices of the mining companies and buildings around the entrance to the mines. A number of the mine owners were assaulted and severely injured. The strikers made no demand for an increase in their wages, neither did they make any statement of their grievances and the rioting is believed to have been the result of the spread of anarchist doctrines among the men. Troops have been sent to the scene.

ENGLAND'S ULTIMATUM.

Other Powers Must Act at Once or She Will.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The Evening News publishes a dispatch asserting that Great Britain has notified the powers that unless immediate and energetic action is taken by them to effect a settlement of the Turkish situation, England will act alone. No confirmation of this statement is obtainable.

TEN THOUSAND PERISHED.

Fearful Ravages of a Malignant Fever in Turkestan.

MERV, Turkestan, Oct. 2.—A malignant fever similar to that which appeared in 1893 has ravaged Turkestan for the past two months. Ten thousand persons have died from the fever, most of the victims being children.

To Investigate Armenian Massacres.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—The Chronicle's Berlin correspondent reports a Constantinople dispatch to the Frankfurter Zeitung which says that a committee of representatives of France, Germany, Austria and England has been appointed by the sultan to inquire into the causes of the late massacre in Constantinople. This dispatch reports also that the sultan's letter to Emperor William pledges protection to all Christians in Turkey, except those engaged in anarchism.

Excitement at Cairo.

PARIS, Oct. 2.—A dispatch from Cairo says that great excitement has been caused there by the attempt on the part of the British to induce the banks to advance 26,000,000 francs against the Egyptian revenue for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the Dongola expedition. It is said that the committee of French bondholders will resist by law the attempt to raise the loan in the manner proposed.

PREPARING FOR WAR.

Turkey Orders a Flotilla of Torpedo Boats.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 3.—An irade has been issued by the porte ordering the formation of a flotilla of ten torpedo boats to defend the Dardanelles. This movement is in conformity with the advice of the Russian General Tschikatchelff, commander of the district of Odessa, who some time in July last inspected the defenses of the Dardanelles.

TERSE NEWS.

At Trenton, N. J., John S. Johnson, the cyclist, went a mile in 1:46, breaking all records.

Mills at Troy, N. Y., Waltham, Mass., Manchester, N. H., and Holidaysburg, Pa., employing 10,000 men, have recently resumed work.

William J. Bryan has written a letter to Chairman Allen, of the notification committee of the people's party, formally accepting the nomination for president.

Montreal dispatch: Assistant Chief Pierson, of the Telegraphers' Union, states that over 800 train dispatchers and operators have stopped work on the Canadian Pacific railroad as a result of a strike which has just gone into effect.

Eight hundred Armenians of the better class, who escaped from Constantinople during the recent butcheries in that city, and who had hoped to make their way to the United States, are stranded in France for lack of funds. Only eight of the number have been able to reach America.

San Francisco dispatch: In spite of their promises to deposit $6,000, the managers of the Eureka Athletic Club failed to put in an appearance and apparently the Corbett-Sharkey fight, so far as this town is concerned, is off. The capital of most clubs seems to consist of promises and permits.

San Miguel del Padron, on the road from Havana to Guinez, was raided and burned by the insurgents. Stores and residences were robbed and churches destroyed. Many men, women and children were driven out into the rain and storm in their night clothes and reached Guanabacoa seeking refuge.

It is said the English government has received a dispatch from Fort Salisbury, stating that serious fighting lasting three days has taken place in the Massona land near Mozoe. The British, the telegram says, were hemmed in by the natives for ten hours. No details of the fighting are given, except the statement that two British officers were wounded.

Kansas City dispatch: According to a story told the local police by Joseph Rows, a railroad man who has just returned from the territory, Geo. Taylor, the escaped murderer of the Meeks, has been located in the Indian Territory by United States Marshal Copeland. Rows says that he can place his hands upon the Carrolltown murderer, and will do so as soon as he is assured of the reward.

Mount Holyoke College, the pioneer institution for the higher education of women, located at South Haley, Mass., has received a severe blow in the burning of the main building, with a probable loss of over $150,000. None of the 400 students or faculty were injured, there being ample time for the escape of all, with part of their personal effects. The fire was first seen in the laundry, in the gymnasium wing.

It is stated that the sultan has at last acceded to the request contained in an address praying for authority to convoke the national assembly to elect a new patriarch in place of Matteo Ismirlian, resigned. It is learned that during the massacre at Eaguin 600 houses were pillaged and burned. A gun was fired as a signal for the outrages to commence. The sultan has sent an autograph letter to Emperor William.

A Paris correspondent says that M. Cambon, the French ambassador at Constantinople, had a long interview with the sultan, in the course of which he declared that the western powers had resolved to insist that the reforms which had already been granted in the Armenian provinces should be extended to the whole of the Turkish empire. The Chronicle's correspondent adds: "This is the first diplomatic move of France, and is regarded as a final warning."

Constantinople dispatch: The government tribunal sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment each member of the Mussulmans who were convicted of taking part in the recent riots. These are the first rioters who have been tried and found guilty since the late massacre. The tribunal also passed sentence of death upon all of the Armenians who are known or suspected of having taken part in the seizure of the Ottoman bank. In this list is included an Armenian who was surrendered by the Belgian legation, with which he had taken refuge, upon condition that he be released after he had been examined by the tribunal. The Belgian minister has sent a peremptory note to the porte demanding the man's liberation

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4, 1896.—We send this out, one of the most unique sermons Dr. Talmage ever preached. It is as novel as wide-sweeping and practical. His subject is, "Divine Chirography," the text being: Luke, 10: 20: "Rejoice because your names are written in heaven."

Chirography, or the art of handwriting, like the science of acoustics, is in a very unsatisfactory state. While constructing a church, and told by some architects that the voice would not be heard in a building shaped like that proposed, I came in much anxiety to this city and consulted with Professor Joseph Henry, of the Smithsonian Institution, about the law of acoustics. He said: "Go ahead and build your church in the shape proposed, and I think it will be all right. I have studied the laws of sound perhaps more than any man of my time, and I have come so far as this: Two auditoriums may seem to be just exactly alike, and in one the acoustics may be good and in the other bad." In the same unsatisfactory stage is chirography, although many declare they have reduced it to a science. There are those who say they can read character by handwriting. It is said that the way one writes the letter "I" decides his egotism or modesty, and the way one writes the letter "O" decides the height and depth of his emotions. It is declared a cramped hand means a cramped nature, and an easy, flowing hand a facile and liberal spirit; but if there be anything in this science, there must be some rules not yet announced, for some of the boldest and most aggressive men have a delicate and small penmanship, while some of the most timid sign their names with the height and width and scope of the name of John Hancock on the immortal document. Some of the cleanest in person and thought present their blotted and spattered page, and some of the roughest put before us an immaculate chirography. Not our character, but the copy-plate set before us in our schoolboy day, decides the general style of our handwriting. So also there is a fashion in penmanship, and for one decade the letters are exaggerated, and in the next minified: now erect and now aslant, now heavy and now fine. An autograph album is always a surprise, and you find the penmanship contradicts the character of the writers. But while the chirography of the earth is uncertain, our blessed Lord in our text presents the chirography celestial. When addressing the seventy disciples standing before him, he said: "Rejoice because your names are written in heaven." * * *

When you come up and look for your name in the mighty tomes of eternity and you are so happy as to find it there, you will notice that the penmanship is Christ's, and that the letters were written with a trembling hand. Not trembling with old age, for he had only passed three decades when he expired. It was soon after the thirtieth anniversary of his birthday. Look over all the business acounts you kept or the letters you wrote at thirty years of age, and if you were ordinarily strong and well, then there was no tremor in the chirography. Why the tremor in the hand that wrote your name in heaven? Oh, it was a compression of more troubles than ever smote anyone else, and all of them troubles assumed for others. Christ was prematurely old. He had been exposed to all the weathers of Palestine. He had slept out of doors, now in the night dew and now in the tempest. He had been soaked in the surf of Lake Galilee. Pillows for others, but he had not where to lay his head. Hungry, he could not even get a fig on which to breakfast; or have you missed the pathos of that verse, "In the morning, as he returned to the city, he hungered, and when he saw a fig tree in the way, he came to it and found nothing thereon." Oh, he was a hungry Christ, and nothing makes the hand tremble worse than hunger, for it pulls upon the stomach, and the stomach pulls upon the brain, and the brain pulls upon the nerves, and the agitated nerves make the hand quake. On the top of all this exasperation came abuse. What sober man ever wanted to be called a drunkard? but Christ was called one. What man, careful of the company he keeps, wants to be called the associate of profligates? but he was so called. What loyal man wants to be charged with treason? but he was charged with it. What man of devout speech wants to be called a blasphemer? but he was so termed. What man of self-respect wants to be struck in the mouth? but that is where they struck him. Or to be the victim of vilest expectoration? but under that he stooped. Oh, he was a worn-out Christ. That is the reason he died so soon upon the cross. Many victims of crucifixion lived day after day upon the cross; but Christ was in the court-room at 12 o'clock of noon and had expired at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day. Subtracting from the three hours between 12 and 3 o'clock the time taken to travel from the court-room to the place of execution and the time that must have been taken in getting ready for the tragedy, there could not have been much more than two hours left. Why did Christ live only two hours upon the cross, when others had lived forty-eight hours? Ah, he was worn out before he got there, and you wonder, oh, child of God, that, looking into the volumes of heaven for your name, glance. It will not be taken for the name of some other, so that in regard to it there shall come to be disputation. Not one of the millions and billions and quadrillions of the finally saved, will doubt that it means you and only you. Oh, the glorious, the rapturous certitude of that entrance on the heavenly roll. Not saved in a promiscuous way. Not put into a glorified mob. No, no! Though you came up, the worst sinner that was ever saved, and somebody, who knew you in this world at one time as absolutely abandoned and dissolute, should say, "I never heard of your conversion and I do not believe you have a right to be here," you could just laugh a laugh of triumph, and turning over the leaves containing the names of the redeemed, say, "Read it for yourself. That is my name, written out in full, and do you not recognize the handwriting? No young scribe of heaven entered that. No anonymous writer put it there. Do you not see the tremor in the lines? Do you not also see the boldness of the letters? Is it not as plain as yonder throne, as plain as yonder and the handwriting unmistakable? and the handwriting unmistakable? The crucified Lord wrote it there the day I repented and turned. Hear it! Hear it! My name is written there! There!"

I have sometimes been tempted to think that there will be so many of us in heaven that we will be lost in the crowd. No. Each one of us will be as distinctly picked out and recognized as was Abel when he entered from earth, the very first sinner saved, and at the head of that long procession of sinners saved in all the centuries. My dear hearers, if we once get there, I do not want it left uncertain as to whether we are to stay there. After you and I get fairly settled there, in our heavenly home, we do not want our title proved defective. We do not want to be ejected from the heavenly premises. We do not want some one to say, "This is not your room in the house of many mansions, and you have on an attire that you ought not to have taken from the heavenly wardrobe, and that is not really your name on the books. If you had more carefully examined the writing in the register at the gate, you would have found that the name was not yours at all, but mine. Now move out, while I move in." Oh, what wretchedness, after once worshipping in heavenly temples, to be compelled to turn your back on the music, and after having joined the society of the blessed, to be forced to quit it forever, and after having clasped our long-lost kindred in heavenly embrace, to have another separation! What an agony would there be in such a good-by to heaven! Glory be to God on high that our names will be so plainly written in those volumes that neither saint, nor cherub, nor seraph, nor archangel shall doubt it for one moment, for five hundred eternities, if there were room for so many. The oldest inhabitant of heaven can read it, and the child that left its mother's lap last night for heaven can read it. You will not just look at your name and close the book, but you will stand, and soliloquize, and say, "Is it not wonderful that my name is there at all? How much it cost my Lord to get it there? Unworthy am I to have it in the same book with the sons and daughters of martrydom and with the choice spirits of all time! But there it is, and so plain the word and so plain all the letters!" And you will turn forward and backward the leaves and see other names there, perhaps your father's name, and your mother's name, and your brother's name, and your sister's name, and your wife's name, and apostolic names, and say, "I am not surprised that those names are here recorded. They were better than I ever was. But astonishment overwhelming, that my name is in this book!" And turning back to the page on which is inscribed your name, you will stand and look at it, until seeing that others are waiting to examine the records with reference to their own names, you step back into the ranks of the redemed, with them to talk over the wonderment.

Again, if you are so happy as to find your name in the volumes of eternity, you will find it written indelibly. Go up to the State Department in this national capital and see the old treaties signed by the rulers of foreign nations just before or just after the beginning of this century, and you will find that some of the documents are so faded out that you can read only here and there a word. From the paper, yellow with age, or the parchment unrolled before you, time has effaced line after line. You have to guess at the name, and perhaps guess wrongly. Old Time is represented as carrying a scythe, with which he cuts down the generations; but he carries also chemicals with which he eats out whole paragraphs from important documents. We talk about indelible ink; but there is no such thing as indelible ink. It is only a question of time, the complete obliteration of all earthly signatures and engrossments. But your name, put in the heavenly record, all the millenniums of heaven cannot dim it. After you have been so long in glory that, did you not possess imperishable memory, you would have forgotten the day of your entrance, your name on that page will glow as vividly as on the instant it was traced there by the finger of the Great Atoner. There will be new generations coming into heaven, and a thousand years from now, from this or from other planet, souls may enter the many-mansioned residence, and though your name were once plainly in the books, suppose it should fade out. How could you prove to the newcomers that it had ever been written there at all? Indelible! Incapable of being cancelled! Eternity as helpless as time in any attempt at erasure! What a reinforcing, uplifting thought! Other records in heaven may give out, and will give out. There are records there in which the Recording Angel writes down our sins, but it is a book full of blots, so that much of the writing there cannot be read or even guessed at. The Recording Angel did the writing, but our Saviour put in the blots; for did he not promise, "I will blot out their transgressions!" And if some one in heaven should remember some of our earthly iniquities and ask God about them, the Lord would say, "Oh, I forgot them. I completely forgot those sins, for I promised, 'Their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more.'" In the fires that burn up our world all the safety deposits, and all the title-deeds, and all the halls of record, and all the libraries will disappear, worse than when the 200,000 volumes and the 700,000 manuscripts of the Alexandrian Library went down under the torch of Omar, and not a leaf or word will escape the flame in that last conflagration, which I think will be witnessed by other planets, whose inhabitants will exclaim, "Look! There is a world on fire." But there will be only one conflagration in heaven, and that will not destroy but irradiate! I mean the conflagration of splendors that blaze on the towers and domes, and temples and thrones, and rubied and diamonded walls in the light of the sun that never sets. Indelible!

There is not on earth an autograph letter or signature of Christ. The only time he wrote out a word on earth, though he knew so well how to write, he wrote with reference to having it soon shuffled out by human foot, the time that he stooped down and with his finger wrote on the ground the hypocrisy of the Pharisees. But when he writes your name in the heavenly archives, as I believe he has or hope he may, it is to stay there from age to age, from cycle to cycle, from aeon to aeon. And so for all you Christian people I do what John G. Whittier, the dying peot, said he wanted done in his home. Lovely man he was! I sat with him in a hay mow a whole summer afternoon, and heard him tell the story of his life. He had for many years been troubled with insomnia and was a very poor sleeper, and he always had the window curtain of his room up so as to see the first intimation of sunrise. When he was breathing his last, in the morning hour, in his home in the Massachusetts village, the nurse thought that the light of the rising sun was too strong for him, and so pulled the window curtain down. The last thing the great Quaker poet did was to wave his hand to have the curtain up. He wanted to depart in the full gush of the morning. And I thought it might be helpful and inspiring to all Christian souls to have more light about the future, and so I pull up the curtain in the glorious sunrise of my text and say, "Rejoice that your names are written in heaven." Bring on your doxologies! Wave your palms! Shout your victories! Pull up all the curtains of your bright expectations! Yea! hoist the window itself, and let the perfume of the "morning glories" of the King's garden come in, and the music of harps all a-tremble with symphonies, and the sound of the surf of seas dashing to the foot of the throne of God and the Lamb.

A Hundred Miles an Hour.

An electrical engineer has been exhibiting in London the model of his proposed single rail electric line for speeds of 150 miles an hour. The rail is fixed on a V-shaped trestle, and runs up into the body of the car, which, as it were, runs astride of it. The car runs on twelve bearing wheels, and seats 135 passengers, with space for their baggage. One of the difficulties met with in schemes for excessively high speed travel is the tendency of the car to run off the track. By running the rail within the car the lateral tendency of the train is overcome. But in this late scheme the great difficulty seems to be the passenger. What would happen to the passenger when the train took a sharp curve while going at 130 miles an hour is not explained.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Isn't it about as bad to rob a man of his peace as it is of his money?

WORST IN HISTORY.

A Disastrous Storm Visits the Southeastern States.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.—A special to the Times from Savannah, Ga., says: A worse storm than that of August, 1893, if not the worst in the memory of those living here, visited Savannah, Brunswick and Charleston. Business in the city was suspended for over an hour, the storm being furious for that length of time. No person dared appear on the streets. The street cars halted, elevators stopped running, electric currents were shut off through fear of breakage; windows and shades were blown in everywhere; wires were blown down, trees were razed, fences blown down, houses unroofed, portions of big buildings were wrecked, vessels turned over in the river, church steeples toppled, and the streets were literally strewn with debris of every imaginable kind.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 1.—It is a conservative estimate to say that fifty people have lost their lives from the hurricane, and the number may run much higher. News from that portion of the state where the storm struck is very slow coming, for the wires are down and railroads are impassable. Twenty towns and villages in Florida were visited, and the losses in Florida will probably foot up $2,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Great damage was done to property in this city by the storm. It is estimated that the financial loss will reach $250,000. Fully 5,000 shade trees were destroyed by the storm. The damage done in Savannah, Ga., is of a general nature. Many business houses were badly damaged, nearly all of them being unroofed, and the streets were filled with wreckage. The houses in the suburbs suffered greatly, hundreds of the smaller ones being wrecked. A dozen persons were killed, and a large number are suffering from injuries. The financial loss will reach $1,000,000. Advices from Pennsylvania show that the storm did immense damage, and the losses will certainly reach a million dollars. At Columbia the Pennsylvania railroad bridge over the Susquehanna was completely demolished. It was insured for $300,000. At Baltimore many buildings were unroofed and much other damage was done. In New York a fierce windstorm raged, but little damage was done. Richmond, Va., reports the worst storm in its history, with great damage, and the storm was general along the coast. Considerable damage was done on Lake Michigan, several vessels being wrecked. At least half a dozen persons were drowned.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 3.—Cedar Keys has suffered more than any other locality by the great storm. The place was greatly damaged and it is known that twenty persons were killed. In addition to this many sponging vessels are believed to have gone down with their crews.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 5.—No important addition to the list of deaths in Florida by the hurricane are reported. In ninety-one towns so far heard from, the killed number seventy and the injured 164. The destruction of property is altogether beyond estimates. The belt of country that was devastated, extending across the state from Cedar Keys, on the Gulf of Mexico, to the St. Mary's river, is about 115 miles long to 20 miles wide on the gulf and 60 miles wide on the Georgia boundary. On a large part of this are most of the buildings that were destroyed, and the people are shelterless and on the verge of starvation.

IN TURKEY.

The Porte Discusses the Insults Offered the Sultan in England.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 2.—The porte has issued a statement rejoicing at the apparent reaction in some of the London newspapers against the excessive anti-sultan agitation in Great Britain, which, it declares, is answerable for the terror in Constantinople, the foreign residents naturally fearing the wrath of the Mussulmans at the insults to the sultan uttered by the speakers at the public meetings and by the journals of England. The statement continues: "Despite the organized agitation, vituperation and clamorous provocation emanating from London, the porte has succeeded by dint of energy and watchfulness in proving to Europe that the alarm of its English insulters is unfounded. The porte does not associate the British nation, for which it has the highest regard, with the agitation of a few hot-brain politicians who are led astray by their passions. The moderation of the European nations will, far more than the vociferation of England, help the porte to protect foreigners and Turkish subjects in the capital against the plots of Armenian revolutionists."

Populists Endorse Democrats.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 3.—The populists nominated the democratic candidates for governor and lieutenant governor, Porter and Schraub. The democratic electoral ticket was also accepted.

Lean Back and Rest.

Did you ever think how much more energy and nerve force we use daliy than is necessary? Haven't you often, while riding, leaned back with a sense of relief to find every muscle tense with the strain of adapting the body to the motion of the carriage? Lean back, rejoice in strong horses that carry you, and the beauties of the landscape. If you peal potatoes or apples, sit down to it; don't walk the floor while you beat eggs or mix a cake, and get a large tray to carry most of the dishes at one trip from dining room to kitchen.

In every way save yourself and lean back whenever you get an opportunity.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Full of Business.

We hope that our readers will not make any remarks about the lack of news items and other deficiencies in the NEWS this week. for it has been a hard week on all concerned. The first calamity on the list happened early Sunday morning when the editor and wife were presented with an eight pound girl baby, then on Tuesday our reporter took a cold and couldn't hustle many items, and between times the editor has been compelled to act as chore boy, nurse—but why go on you all know how it is. The only kick we have coming is that we 'cant name the kid after our next president, Wm. McKinely Mother and child doing well.—News Lu Verne Ia.

BEAR SAWED THE LOGS.

Strange Tale of a Woodsman and the Effects of Mince Pie.

"I don't like to repeat a story about Sullivan county unless I know it is true," said Phil Kinney. Mr. Kinney never tells a story except with the most serious countenance, writes a correspondent of the New York Press.

"A farmer," he said, "from Forestburg was here recently, and he told me of an experience he had out in the woods, and I'll give up my dinner if I don't think he told the truth. You see, he is one of those honest old fellows who drink hard cider around home. He says plain cider doesn's hurt him, but when he comes here he winks at me and says, 'Put a little in my cider.'

"Well, sir, he was getting out railroad ties down where he lives. He uses in doing it one of those big, double handled cross cut saws.

"Says he: 'I was a-sawin away out thar in the snow, with my little fox terrier nosin round in the bushes after jacks, when he sudden like puts his tail twixt them slender legs o' his'n and digs out fer hum. I kinder looked round, but blessed ef I could set them eyes o' mine on enything out the ordinary. I kept on a-sawin till it gits time to eat my old woman's bits.

" 'I set down on a log an et away, an I sets the pail down when I was through, an I saved my mince pie fur a little later. I fell into a doze, an when I come to I wuz half skairt outen my boots by a blasted big black bear sittin longside an eatin my mince pie. I knew better'n to try to get up 'fore he could swat me with his paw. So I sets still, a-shakin and a-shiverin. Purty soon I heard them whistles a-blowing for 1 o'clock down in Port Jervis. Then the funniest part o' the hull business commenced. That they're bear jes' wipes his nose in the snow an goes over an ketches hold that saw and went to work.

" 'By gosh! I wuz expectin that he would do some sort o' trouble to it, an it wuz the only saw I hed. But he didn't. He sawed off four or five logs jes' the right length, an then he saw the rest o' that tree wuz too small fer use as ties, an he looked round fer another tree. But there wuzn't none down, so he sets the saw up agin a tree an goes off.'

"I said to him then," continued Phil, " 'You better have a little more cider.' He took a big drink and then another. Then he says: 'Phil, I don't want you to laugh at me, but I went down there nex' day, an I cut down six trees, an I put two mince pies an the saw longside the first one an went an hid behind a tree. I waited till 2 o'clock, but that blasted bear never showed up.' "

Too Emotional.

"Julia, I never see you at funerals."

"No; when I go, I always cry harder than the widow, and that makes people think I was in love with the man."—Chicago Record.

Says an exchange: If people would just remember that flour will extinguish blazing gasoline it would save much loss. Says a man of the house: "One day our gasoline stove was blazing and wet cloths were used without effect, when I remembered that I had read that flour would extinguish the blaze. A handful almost put it out and another snuffed it out completely. It would be a good idea to paste this up so that in an emergency it may save both life and property.

A THOROUGH INVESTIGATION.

ASTONISHING FACTS BROUGHT TO LIGHT BY A NEWSPAPER REPORTER.

Prominent Citizens Corroborate Various Statements Made—Druggists Also Interviewed—Many Testimonials as to the Cures Effected by the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

From the Herald, Clinton, Iowa.

For the purpose of thoroughly investigating the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which have been so widely advertised, a reporter was detailed to visit three towns, taken at random, between Clinton and Cedar Rapids. Clarence, Stanwood and Mechanicsville were the places selected and thither our representative went.

Clarence is a village of seven or eight hundred people, with two drug stores, run respectively by Geo. Smith and W. H. Blair. Both of these gentlemen spoke enthusiastically of the Pink Pills. Mr. Blair said he handled them extensively, that they had become a staple article of trade among druggists, and now he would as soon think of conducting a drug business without quinine as Pink Pills. He then asked if the Herald man had called on Mrs. Curley, and recommended him to do so, as hers was looked upon in Clarence as a most remarkable case of recovery from advanced stomach trouble. Mrs. Curley told her story briefly as follows:

"A year ago the doctors gave me up to die, with disease of the stomach, and I was very near death. While I was very low a friend persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills though I had very little faith in them. After using part of a box I wanted to give it up, but my people made me keep on, and before I had used the fourth box I was cured."

Mrs. Peter Gortner is another who has been greatly helped by the Pink Pills. Mr. Gortner is a retired farmer, and he and his wife occupy a pretty cottage in the southern part of town. Mrs. Gortner said: "While my case is not as wonderful as that of Mrs. Curley, I think and know indeed that Pink Pills have cured me no less truly. My nerves were weak for many years, and I suffered greatly as a result. Something like a year ago I was affected by stomach trouble, largely dependent, I think, upon the condition of my nervous system. Hearing of the cure in Mrs. Curley's case, I consulted her, and on her advice tried the Pink Pills. They have cured me. My stomach no longer troubles me and my nervous system is restored. We always keep them on hand now and my husband and I use them whenever we are threatened with any trouble of the sort. I recommend Dr. Williams' remedy whenever I have opportunity. Mrs. Laura Neely is one of my friends who has used the pills with particularly good results."

Mrs. Neely was visited. Her story was very similar to that of Mrs. Gortner. Her nervous system had been almost shattered, she was threatened indeed with spinal meningitis. Pink Pills had relieved and strengthened her. She told of several other cases within her circle of acquaintance where the pills had been used, and in every case speedy relief and cure followed.

At Mechanicsville, the reporter found only additional testimony as to the merits of Pink Pills. The proprietor of the Palace Drug Company assured him that no proprietary medicine had a greater sale than this. This company buys the pills in wholesale quantities. C. E. Gould also sells large quantities of the medicine. Both druggists told of many cases in which the remedy had been very successful. Among these cases was that of Michael Zerbe, a retired farmer living in the village. The case was one of rheumatism, and was cured by one box of pills.

Mr. Zerbe himself said: "I was in a bad shape with rheumatism in the spring. I was induced by a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. One box relieved me, took the disease out of my blood, and in fact cured me. I am now as well as ever." The visitor found Mr. Zerbe at work about his home, and he seemed the picture of rugged health, despite the fact that he assured the reporter that he had been but a few months before bent and bowed with rheumatism.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

AIDS TO THE TOILET.

Soft tinted serge gowns with accordion-plaited ruffles are high favorites among fashionable bathers. Stockings striped or embroidered are worn to match the suits.

Soft, fluffy pompadours and a revival of the old-fashioned chatelaine braids, preserving as broad and as flat an effect as possible are quite the reigning fashionable style of hairdressing.

Empire fans are still the most fashionable, even when the night is stifling. Devotees of fashion maintain that they give quite as much air as large ones, and have much more prestige than feather fans.

Skirts of one material and bodices of another will continue in fashion all winter, probably chiefly because of their great convenience. Added to this, however, they are an extremely attractive combination.

The return of short trains is imminent. They will be used chiefly by married women for indoor wear and ceremonious visits, while younger women, even for these purposes, will still cling to skirts that clear the ground.

In the matter of veils cream and white are still much in vogue for seaside wear. Plain women and women who freckle cling to those composed entirely of lace and so closely covered that they act almost as masks. The daintiest of all, however, are those made of silk net with a deep edging of real lace.

CHAPTER V.—(CONTINUED.)

"Ah," said she, fixing her eyes steadfastly on the dim line where sky and ocean blended into one, "when I sit here I grow so impatient, Walter; I long to skim like the albatross yonder with daring wing, along, above the heaving waves. The world—the world—so beautiful—so grand—I would see it. My spirit tires of this sameness; it pants like an imprisoned thing longing for one taste of the pure air of freedom."

"Silly girl! What is freer and purer than this sea breeze, playing so daintily with your curls? What more boundless, vast and grand than this ever-changing ocean at your feet? Why should you sigh for anything fairer?"

"Because, fair as it is, it is our prison. We can go no farther; her we must stay, confined to the narrow breadth of this little island, when the wide illimitable world is before us. Ah, Walter, I fathom your kind wish to cheat me into contentedness. Can I not read your sympathy with my own yearnings? Do I not see your eyes flash as they turn toward the point, where, far away, our home and mother-land waits for us? Am I so dull that I cannot perceive the noble ambition imprisoned in your soul? What a glorious name might not the talents and germs of genius, dormant and passive here, carve out for you in the great arena of the world. When I think of it I grow restless—angry almost."

She started up vehemently and stretched out her imploring hands to the ocean.

"Come, come!" she cried, as passionately as though the onleaping waves would bear her words to friendly ears. "Oh, ocean, mighty ocean—that spared us from thy yawning graves for a living tomb, be merciful. Send hither a bark to bear thy foster children back to the embrace of mother earth—a messenger of hope and mercy. Mighty Neptune, where are thy spells now?"

The girl stood, frozen by the spell of her own emotion into a statue of such wild and matchless loveliness that the gazers almost hushed their breath in sudden fear that the myth she had invoked might rise from his foamy couch to seize and bear her away for his bride.

The only reply came in the hoarse beating of the surf that seemed to moan wildly, "Not yet—not yet."

Her outstretched arms drooped dejectedly, the glow died from off her face, and with a deep, deep sigh she sank slowly back to her seat again.

Her sigh was echoed dismally, yet Walter answered soothingly:

"Nay, nay, dear Ellie, do not look so hopeless. I confess you have spoken the truth. I, too, have these longings—these wild, intense cravings for action—this dismal lamenting for talents buried in obscurity—and yet often and often comes a strong conviction that were our wildest hopes gratified, and we safely restored to all the pleasures, excitement and honors of the world, we would look back with a sigh of regret to the peaceful innocence of our life here."

She shook her beautiful head doubtingly.

"I can scarcely agree with you—better sorrow and sore trouble than supineness and inaction."

Walter was looking fondly in her face.

"It is not strange that you fret and pine, Ellie dear. A brilliant lot amidst the noblest and best of our happy land doubtless awaits you, but for me it would be one continued struggle; and though I would welcome it gladly, yet it comforts me to think that in its absence I enjoy a blessing which freedom from the island would take forever from me."

She looked down at him questioningly.

"Do you not guess, dearest, that once in your own circle humble Walter would scarcely presume to intimacy with the noble heiress."

CHAPTER VI.

"Had it been any one but you, Walter, to make that heartless speech—" And breaking into sobs, she added tremulously:

"Oh, what does not the helpless, friendless child owe to you and your father, but for whose untiring love and care I might now be an ignorant, uncouth and awkward creature, of whom, if ever rescued, my relatives would be ashamed? No, no, Walter; come what may, you will always be the best and dearest—no one else can fill your place."

Walter touched with his lips the white little hand flung toward him in the earnest gesture. What more might have been said was prevented by the quiet advance of Mr. Vernon.

"Here is our father," cried Eleanor, springing down from the rock and running to hang fondly on his arm. "Ah, mon pere, we have had such a delightful excursion at the brook up in the country, and we were industrious, too, so that even Tom praised our fine string of fish."

Mr. Vernon passed his hand caressingly over her bright curls.

"And yet my canary is weary of her pretty cage, her seeds and sweetmeats, and beats her wings against the bars and pines for freedom!"

Eleanor colored.

"Ah, you overheard our silly talk. I never meant you should know it, but, oh, papa, is it not very hard for us as well as you?"

"My child," answered he, solemnly, it will be of little use for me to tell you what a bitter cruel enemy I have found this same world for which you sigh. I may bid you prize this calm peace, this freedom from sin and sorrow, but you will be deaf to my words, because of the siren song the radiant-faced Hope sings ever to the ears of youth. No, my children, I long no more for the busy haunts of men. I am ready to pray that this peaceful Eden may prove my grave."

The young creatures, dimly guessing through what waves of grief and pain he had reached the peaceful shore of content, looked up wistfully into his pensive face and kept respectful silence.

"Now, then," said he, rousing from his reverie, "I shall send you, Ellie, to the house. You will find the French lesson I prepared on your table, and you may translate it as neatly as you can. Tom has plenty of freshly-made paper in the drawer."

Eleanor obeyed at once, glancing at Walter as if expecting him to follow; but his father laid a restraining hand on his arm, and Walter remained at his side.

"My son," said Mr. Vernon gravely—so graevely that Walter felt the tears rising to his eyes—"you are pining for action; you long for the excitement and effort required in the battle of life. See, here in this deserted island is a grand opportunity for heroism that you have quite overlooked. Do not be startled, Walter, when I tell you that I have made a painful discovery today—that you love Eleanor with an affection more fervent than a brother's or a friend's. I put it to your own conscience and manliness—is it honorable to take advantage of the isolation of her life here, and win her love before she has opportunity to see others and judge for herself? There is no doubt, judging from the jewels in the trunk, the coat of-arms on her clothing, and Tom's account of the servant's idea of the family's importance, that Eleanor is the child of noble and aristocratic parents. You know the exclusive pride of such, for I have often told you of it. Now, then, have you a right to profit by the accidental circumstance of the shipwreck, and take advantage of her guileless, unsophisticated nature? Here is your task, grander and nobler than any struggle for worldly fame and prosperity—conquer yourself, Walter; be a man thus early in your boyhood."

There was a yearning, pitying tenderness in the tone that belied the calm, reasoning words. Walter knew that his father grieved for him, and looking up proudly, although his lip quivered, he said:

"I know what you mean, father, and I will be worthy of your goodness. Ellie shall never hear a word or hint from me to suggest there is anything else in the world besides a brother's friendship."

His father bent down suddenly and left such a kiss on his forehead as in his dreams Walter had received from an unknown angel mother, and was gone.

Walter continued on to the little wood beyond the cliff, and only himself, and the pale-leaved blossoms that were wet with briny dew knew of the passionate flood of boyish tears that were shed there.

Thenceforward there was a quiet dignity of manliness about Walter's demeanor that puzzled Tom and Eleanor as much as it pleased his father. He did not take so many strolls alone with Ellie, but always managed to find pretext for Tom's company. He no longer used the slightest freedom in word or act, but treated her with as much honorable delicacy as he might have used toward his queen. Her probable rank and superior station were more frequently alluded to, until, pouting with pretty vexation, Eleanor declared that she would throw into the sea the sparkling chain of diamonds whose unknown crest had raised such a formality between them. Tom in his droll way coincided with her.

"I know," said he. "I've allers been brought up to think nature made a great difference in folks when she brought 'em into the world. Why, our folk in —— county thought we were hardly fit for my Lady Somerset to speak to; but the older I grow the more I come to reason that our souls are pretty much equal in the Lord's sight, if so be we all do right. Shiver my timbers if I didn't use to get into a corner when one of my shipmates that went down off here in the 'Petrel' argued with me about it. Ye see, he came from Americky, where, if they behave, all the folks are lords and ladies, and, 'cording to his account, they live amazingly happy. Well, well, the Lord knows all about it—where's the use of puzzling over what don't concern us?—though sartin, here in this 'ere forrin place, we don't get any special sign that little Ellie's any better'n the rest of us, only for having the angel natur' of all womanhood."

"There," said Eleanor, laughing gayly, "see what a philosopher our Tom has become! Look that you take a lesson from him, Sir Walter. I am becoming much aggrieved, you are so formal and polite. You don't frolic with me; you don't pet me. I declare, Walter, you haven't kissed me for these three weeks!"

As she spoke she held up her beautiful face, the crimson lips pouting archly.

Poor Walter colored crimson, stammered incoherently, and then darted away.

Ellie burst into tears; Tom whistled, and Mr. Vernon, closing his book, followed after his son.

CHAPTER VII.

"I RECKON I'll find Walter and fix the flag as we agreed," said Tom, looking ruefully at the weeping girl. He had hardly disappeared when Mr. Vernon returned, and began quietly wiping away the tears from the girl's An earnest, serious conversation ensued, from which they were interrupted by Walter, who came rushing in with a face so ghastly they both sprang up in alarm.

"Quick, father, quick! Come up to Tom. He is hurt; he is dying, I am afraid."

Mr. Vernon seized a flask of brandy, preserved carefully for such exigencies, and darted after his son, who had flung an arm around Eleanor, and almost carried her in his rapid flight back to Tom.

At the foot of the tall tree to which the flag staff was nailed they found poor Tom. He was lying just as Walter had left him, with a face wearing the awful, unmistakable signet of death. Mr. Vernon shuddered, and flinging himself frantically beside him, groaned:

"Oh, Tom, Tom, what terrible thing has come upon us? What has happened to you?"

The glaring eyes turned lovingly to the distracted group.

"My hour has come this time. The 'Petrel's' ribs wasn't cleaner stove up than mine are now. Tom's last voyage is nigh on it ended."

"It can't be, it shan't be," shouted Walter fiercely, and passing his arm under the drooping head he poured a little brandy in his hand and wet the clammy, parted lips, and turning impatiently to his father, said almost angrily:

"Why do you look so hopeless? Help me take him up; help me to do what will make him well again."

"No, no, lad, don't move me; it's no use. Tom tells ye so himself—he's sighted the promised land already. Good children, dear children, ye're sorry to lose poor Tom; he thanks you kindly. Mr. Vernon, sir—"

"Tom, my best friend, my preserver and savior, say on, I hear you," sobbed the strong man, hiding his quivering face.

"I'm going fast, and I must say quick while I can talk all I want you to do. I've wrote down where my sister lives long ago; you'll see it, and if you ever get away from here I know you'll see her. Tell her I was willing to die, that I allers tried to do the best I could, and I know the Lord is merciful."

Mr. Vernon could only take the cold hand in his and press it tenderly for a response.

"I know ye'll miss me, but the use of the change will soon come. I'm sorry so much hard work will fall to you without Tom's stout arm to do it, but the Lord's will be done. He knows what's best, and can take care of you."

He paused again to rest, and seemed sinking into a stupor, until Walter tried to move him to a more comfortable position, when he smiled feebly in thanks, opened his eyes, and said with considerable energy.

WOMEN DISCOURAGED.

Good and Sufficient Reasons for the Blues.

Doctors Fail to Understand Symptoms That Are Danger Signals.

A marked trait in woman's character is to place implicit confidence in her physician.

A man must work entirely from theory in the treatment of female diseases, for unfortunately facts based upon actual knowledge, belong to the female sex alone. Many women who periodically suffer with attacks of faintness, dizziness, extreme lassitude, "don't care" or want-to-be-left-alone feeling, do not at first realize that these are the infallible symptoms of womb trouble and the forerunners of great suffering.

Soon they grow to feel that the doctor does not understand their case. Then they remember that "a woman best understands a woman's ills," and turn to Mrs. Pinkham.

The following letter is but one positive illustration of this fact:—

"Four years ago I began to suffer with great weakness of the generative organs. My womb was prolapsed; I suffered with continual backache and all the other pains that accompany that weakness. I tried doctor after doctor, had operations. The final operation after which I became a total wreck, was scraping of the womb. A friend, one day, recommended to my husband your Compound. He bought me a bottle. The relief I experienced after taking it, was wonderful. I continued its use, and I am glad to say my recovery is a perfect surprise to everybody that knows me."—MRS. B. BLUHM, 4940 San Francisco.

POLITICAL POINTERS.

Never work for a candidate with a poor memory.

Never vote for a man whose horse stops when he says "Get up."

Never run for office unless your character will stand the witness box test.

Never write letters during the campaign. Documentary evidence is hard to lie down.

Never vote for an individual whose wife is president of the local women suffrage club.

Bryan or McKinley.

"What have you named the baby?"

"William."

"Have you given him a middle name?"

"Not yet; we are waiting to see who is elected president."

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

LOSS BY SPANIARDS.

More Than a Thousand Killed in an Attack by Insurgents.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 3.—The Times-Democrat's Key West special says: Advices received here from Havana state that Antonio Maceo in a recent attack on the trocha inflicted terrible losses on the Spaniards, more than 1,000 being killed and wounded. The attack was made at night, and was carefully planned. The fighting was general all along the line, but was fiercest near Artemisa, where Antonio Maceo led a picked force of insurgents against the Spanish column commanded by General Aralas. The Spaniards were taken completely by surprise.

MR. WHITNEY MARRIED.

Takes an Englishman's Widow for a Wife.

BAR HARBOR, Maine, Sept. 30.—St. Sauvers' Episcopal church was the scene of a brilliant wedding at half past 12 o'clock yesterday, when Mrs. Edith F. Randolph, widow of the late ex-Captain Arthur Randolph, of East Court, Wiltshire, England, was married to Wm. C. Whitney, ex-secretary of the navy, who has been in Bar Harbor for the past week. No invitations were issued and none of Mr. Whitney's family were present.

Scores of Kaffirs Crushed.

BULUWAYO, Oct. 5.—A second explosion has just occurred here, a large powder magazine being destroyed. Five white persons were killed and many seriously injured. Scores of Kaffirs camping in the vicinity of the powder magazine were crushed to death by the flying fragments of the huge rocks, others had their limbs torn off. Many houses were wrecked and the streets were littered with rocks and debris. Earl Gray and Gen. Carrington are leading in the movement for the relief of the injured. The jail and market hall have been converted into hospitals.

IOWA PATENT OFFICE REPORT.

DES MOINES, Oct. 5.—A copyright has been granted to Perry Perkins, of Des Moines, for a wark of art, an engraving entitled "Anchor, Cross and Heart." A patent has been allowed to the Ellshunt Medicine Co., of Des Moines, for a trade mark consisting of the word symbol "Ellshunt," as applied to protect cough mixtures, blood purifier powders, liniment, pills, syrups, extracts, tonics and bitters. Dr. J. T. Robbins, of Newton, has been granted a Canada patent for his hot water furnace for heating buildings, for which a United States patent was issued heretofore. The invention is in successful operation in Jasper county court house and other places. A patent has been allowed to W. E. Edwards, of Wapello, for a wheel cultivator that can be successfully used with or without a tongue. It has had a successful introduction and practical test and is favorably known where it has been used by the unique name of "The Grass Hopper." Literary Notes.

The handsome young man in epaulets on the cover of the October Midland Monthly (Des Moines) is none other than Grant at the age of 22. The first installment of "Grant's Life in the West," by Col. John W. Emerson, removes all questions as to the ability of the author to interest and as to his personal knowledge of the character and career of the greatest soldier in history. This is a work one should read from the start.

Mme. Blanc ("Th. Bentzon") has contributed to the October number of The Century a paper "About French Children," telling of their manners, their schooling, and the differences between their characteristics and those of American and English children. The article has a number of striking illustrations by Maurice Boutef de Monvel, noted among French artists for his depiction of childhood.

The October number of Harper's Magazine contains the first installment of Mr. du Maurier's long-expected novel, "The Martian." The story has all the spontaneity and charm of "Trilby" and "Peter Ibbetson," and the author's relation to his reader is as cordial and confidential as only Mr. du Maurier knows how to make it. A fine new portrait of the author of "The Martian" is the frontispiece to the number.

Among its many strong, attractive features, the October Ladies' Home Journal presents the opening chapters of Ian Maclaren's new story, and one of the best that he has written. "The Minister of St. Bede's;" Ignace Paderewski's long-promised composition for the piano, a minuet—"Menuet Moderne;" and Albert Lynch's "American Girl"—a distinctive characterization of young American womanhood, by the famous French artist—which is shown on the cover.

Her Ultimate Destiny.

"What became of the Holman girl who used to stand so high in the classics?"

"Oh, she became famous."

"What did she do? Translate the Iliad?"

"No; she wrote an essay on how to live on two cents a day by using a chafing dish."

Peace on Earth.

This is once more enjoyed by the rheumatic wise enough to counteract their progressive malady with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. No testimony is stronger than that which indicates it as a source of relief in this complaint. It is also eminently effective as a treatment for kidney trouble, dyspepsia, debility, liver complaint, and constipation. Use it with persistence for the above.

During the last 2,000 years Britian has been invaded by foes from over the sea no fewer than 48 times.

IT'S CURES THAT COUNT.

Many so-called remedies are pressed on the public attention on account of their claimed large sales. But sales cannot determine values. Sales simply argue good salesmen, shrewd puffery, or enormous advertising. It's cures that count. It is cures that are counted on by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Its sales might be boasted. It has the world for its market. But sales prove nothing. We point only to the record of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, as proof of its merit:

Quick Time . .

Mr. O. B. Ross, Spencer, Iowa, filed his first application May 11, 1896, and it was allowed August 4, 1896. This application was pending in the Patent Office 85 days only, and was considered by the parties interested to be rather rapid work. Mr. Ross filed his second application July 13, 1896; it was acted upon July 25, 1896; was amended July 27, 1896, and allowed August 5, 1896. This application was pending in the Patent Office 23 days only, and is without doubt the quickest time in which a mechanical patent ever was examined, amended and allowed. May we do the same thing for you we did for Mr. Ross?

Mrs. L. M Barnes, 37 Medford St., Medford, Mass., writes on Jan'y 21st, 1896—"It would be difficult for me to find language to describe my suffering for three years before taking Dr. Kay's Renovator. Several physicians pronounced my case one of Nervous Dyspepsia and Nervous Prostration. A little exertion, excitement or worry would cause great prostration, extreme nervousness headache, indigestion and severe vomiting which at times kept up continually for two or three days in spite of all my physicians could do. I became very thin in flesh and lost nearly all my hair, the top of my head being entirely bald. I suffered terribly with my stomach, being unable to digest anything. I tried several physicians without getting any relief. Finally last August a friend sent me Dr. Kay's Renovator and I began to improve as soon as I took it and the change was wonderful. No one was ever benefited more than I nor could they be more thankful for such a panacea as Dr. Kay's Renovator as my physicians could not help me. As soon as I began to improve my hair began to grow and now it is nicer than ever. I could not exagerate my case nor the benefits I have received from taking MARRIED:—At the home of the bride's parents in Garner, Iowa, at 6 o'clock p. m. Thursday evening Oct. 8, 1896, Louis A. Griswold and Ella May Schneider, Rev. C. E. Anderson, pastor of the Eng. M. E. Church at Klemme officiating.

About forty guests, nearly all relatives, witnessed the ceremony and expressed their good wishes, not only in words but also in many useful and beautiful gifts. Just as the guests had finished their attempt to do justice to the wedding feast, they were greeted with some strains of sweet music. It was found that the band boys had found their way to the veranda and after entertaining the company with several appropriate selections, were invited in to the feast. Both bride and groom have been residents of Garner for some time and their many friends join in wishing them long, happy and prosperous lives. The groom is the editor of the Farm Journal of Goodell, at which place the happy couple will take up their residence and will be "at home" after Oct. 20th.

KLEMME IOWA

THE KLEMME TIMES.

KLEMME, - - - IOWA

Imagination is to blame for most of the cowards that exist.

Few people appreciate how much of a burden they are to themselves.

Happy is the man who thinks his possessions superior to those of other people.

It is hard to make a loser see any good in gambling or a winner discover any harm.

No man has a right to inconvenience the public by his methods of avenging private spites.

The world is apt to wish you well and let you starve unless you do some moving on your own account.

The proper way to live is to try to improve on what is, instead of lamenting about what might have been.

A woman is never quite so happy as she is when lecturing a boy, no matter whether it does any good or not.

In these days people seem to pay more attention to flash than to finish in estimating men and mercantile commodities.

A Maryland man has just been married for the fourth time. One more offense and he is entitled to a wooden-wedding anniversary on the spot.

A Bloomington young man has been fined $250 for kissing and hugging a young woman without first securing her permission, which would seem to be a pretty stiff fine even had the young man been guilty of the more heinous offense of securing the permission and afterward failing to gather in the hug and the kiss.

A singularly striking and objectionable example of the unequal rewards of merit comes from California, where a certain heir is about to receive $440,000 merely for having kept sober for five years. That is $98,000 a year, or $8,000 a month. There are plenty of men who have achieved the same striking extreme of sobriety without having got a cent for it.

A man in Brooklyn was killed by one of the most peculiar accidents on record. During a political torch light procession he was hit in the face at the same time by a ball from a Roman candle and a sky rocket. The fuse of the rocket was forced several inches down his throat and his head and face were frightfully mangled. He died in frightful agony after an indescribably painful night.

There has recently been furnished perhaps the severest test ever made of practicability of bicycles for military purposes. An officer and eight soldiers, heavily accoutered and carrying eight days' rations, wheeled nearly a thousand miles, including the passage of the Rocky Mountain range, in better time than foot soldiers or troopers could have made on a sustained march in a mountainous region.

From an interesting article by a Russian writer in a French journal we learn that the agricultural industry in Russia is passing through a very severe crisis, owing, in the first place, to the antiquated methods of farming still generally in use in Russia, and, secondly, to the very low prices obtainable for grain during the past few years. Strange to say, it is the large class of farmers which has suffered most, the small peasant farmers being said to have done very well, while their larger neighbors have been practically ruined. There has, in consequence, been a good deal of cutting of big farms into small ones, a process which the writer in question believes will continue, and that consequently wheat-growing, which has been so unprofitable of late years, will, to a great extent, be neglected in favor of the cultivation of linseed, beet and fruit.

The big battleships of 14,900 tons or more that England is building follow one another into the water rapidly in these days. Only a very short time ago the Caesar was floated out of the dock at Portsmouth, and now the Illustrious has been launched at Chatham. She is the last of the three built at the latter port, the Magnificent having already gone into service, while the Victorious recently had her trials, making an average of nearly 17 knots in eight hours under natural and 18.7 knots in fours hours under forced draft, whereas the contract called for only 16¼ and 17½ knots, respectively. It is true that the 18.7 knots were reached only by log, which is much less accurate than our system of the long, measured course. Besides the four vessels mentioned, England has, either built or building, the Majestic, Mars, Jupiter, Hannibal, and Prince George, of the same heavy displacement

A BANK BLOWN UP.

The Farmers' Bank of Melbourne Entered and Robbed of the Cash.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 9.—A daring bank burglary was committed in Melbourne. The Farmers' bank, which is a branch of the Rhodes bank, was entered by burglars, a large hole drilled in the vault and the safe rifled of all the cash on hand, which, through a lucky circumstance, amounted at the time to only about $170. Entrance was effected by the rear door. The robbers then drilled a hole through the brick vault large enough to admit a man. The vault contained a large iron safe which was blown almost into fragments by some highly explosive, supposed to be nitro glycerine. The cashier received $500 in cash from Rhodes. It was after banking hours. Contrary to his custom, he took the cash home, as the safe has a time lock and could not without great difficulty be opened. It is supposed the robbers knew of this shipment of cash and took the occasion to secure it. In this they were foiled by the lucky circumstances of the cash having arrived after banking hours. The cashier says they had less cash in the bank at any time since its establishment. So far as known no one heard the explosion but it must have been a heavy one as the vault is badly wrecked and the safe demolished. Pieces of the safe six inches square and one inch thick were picked up about the building. The greatest loss is to the vault, safe and building, which is estimated at $1,000.

SCOTT CASE IN CONFERENCE.

Will Take No Step Until Action of Criminal Court is Known.

INDEPENDENCE, Oct. 10.—The Scott case came up before the Methodist Episcopal conference. The case was referred to F. M. Coleman, the presiding elder of the Cedar Rapids district for investigation, pending the decision of the criminal court. The effect of this will be that when the decision of the court becomes known, Scott will be brought to trial before a special committee, composed in a regular manner under the laws of the church. It was not thought best to bring the case to an immediate trial, owing to the decision of the insanity commission, for fear of prejudice when the matter comes before the criminal court.

ONE ROBBER DEAD.

Sherburne Bank Robber and Murderer Overtaken.

ALGONA, Oct. 10.—In the northern part of Kossuth county one of the Sherburne bagk robbers was shot and killed by a posse in pursuit. He was found at a farmhouse eating breakfast, but escaped on his wheel, only to be pursued and killed a short time later. Wm. Gallion, city marshal of Bancroft, was shot by the robber and died four hours later. The name of the dead bandit cannot yet be learned. Much excitement prevails in northern Kossuth as a result of the double tragedy. Most of the money taken was found on the dead robber's body.

AT A RAILWAY CROSSING.

Wm. Tietsort and Two Horses Killed—Charles McEvers Injured.

DUNLAP, Oct. 12.—As the Vanderbilt special train was passing through Dunlap, William Tietsort and Charles McEvers undertook to drive across the railroad track in front of the train, with fatal results. Tietsort was instantly killed and McEvers was considerably bruised, but not seriously injured. Both horses were killed. They are both farmers and were driving home from Dunlap.

KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION.

Powder in a Bottle Proves Dangerous to an Indianola Boy.

INDIANOLA, Oct. 9.—The son of N. O. Tate, some 12 or 14 years of age, had a bottle containing powder and he thought he would have an explosion. Thinking it would not explode when it did, he looked into the bottle and at that instant the explosion came with such power that the boy died from the effects.

Wife Murderer Was Insane.

DAVENPORT, Oct. 11.—Inquiry into the condition of mind of George F. Stickelberger, the Scott county farmer who deliberately shot his wife a few weeks ago, occupied the attention of the district court. The evidence of many witnesses, neighbors and medical men was heard, and the verdict of the jury before which the case was held was that the defendant was insane. Stickelberger was taken to the asylum at Mt. Pleasant.

Tramp Loses Both Legs.

SIOUX CITY, Oct. 9.—Joseph Davis, a tramp, about 21 years old, attempted to get on an Omaha train in South Sioux City, and fell between the cars. Both legs were cut off above the knees, and he was unconscious for several hours. His mother lives in British Columbia, and he has a brother in Texas.

GREAT FIRE AT CORNING.

Business Portion of the City Almost Wiped Out.

CRESTON, Oct. 10.—Fourteen business buildings were burned at Corning, entailing a loss of $300,000 with very little insurance. An unknown man was burned to death in a box car. The fire originated in Reynold's elevator. One hour afterwards a second fire started in the business district. The origin is incendiary. No water supply was available owing to repairs on a boiler. Creston and Villica was summoned for aid.

BANK OF HARDY ROBBED.

The Lone Thief Secured $500 and Made His Escape.

HARDY, Oct. 11.—The Bank of Hardy was robbed at noon. Five hundred dollars was secured. The man who did the deed was heavily built, six feet tall, with a black beard, and wore a black mackintosh. A reward of $100 is offered for his capture.

Goldfield Bank Robbed.

GOLDFIELD, Oct. 12.—A man entered the bank and general store here at noon and asked for a gallon of molasses. All were at dinner except one man, and while he was down stairs drawing the syrup, the pretended customer robbed the place of $500 and escaped. A posse is in pursuit.

BREVITIES.

Gustave Erickson, of Sioux City, is under arrest for bigamy, charges having been preferred by an Omaha woman.

The supreme court decided that the board of commissioners of the soldiers' home at Marshalltown, with the commandant as a party to the action, may be privileged to appropriate to the use of the home such portions of the veteran's pensions in excess of $6 per month as they may see fit.

Carroll dispatch: The jury in the case of the state against Peter Weise, for the murder of Ben Levich, brought in a verdict of not guilty. Levich was murdered on Sunday afternoon, February 2, on a farm four miles north of Manning. He was a Hebrew peddler and supposed to have a large amount of money with him. The murder was supposed to have been for the purpose of robbery. At first it was thought he had been killed by a tramp, who is said to have been seen near the place. The murder was a very brutal one, the assassin having approached his victim from behind and fired a load of shot from a shotgun into the back of his head. The murder took place on a deserted farm and must have taken place in full view of the road, which is traveled quite frequently. A coroner's inquest was held and the remains of the unfortunate man were turned over to his friends at Des Moines. He left a wife and five children.

W. A. Cummings was found guilty a second time in the district court at at Des Moines and simultaneously his attorneys produced evidence of unlawful conduct on the part of three of the jurors who served on the jury which convicted him the first time. Cummings has been convicted twice of the crime of rape. One victim was 8 years old and the other 10. The first case was concluded last week and Cummings was immediately put on trial for the second offense. While being tried his attorneys were investigating the conduct of the jurymen to whom he was tried the first time. They introduced evidence to substantiate their claim to and support their motion for a new trial on the first charge. The evidence was to the effect that three of the jurors who convicted Cummings had visited the river bank where it was alleged the crime had been committed and had examined it with a view to settling the question of whether or not a man could hide at that location, as claimed in the trial of the case. The jurors deny the charge.

Owing to the continued illness of Juror Kepple, the Boek murder case, at New Hampton, came to a sudden and unexpected conclusion. Hon. J. B. Bane, attorney for the defense, made the following statement to the court: "In view of the fact that the trial has already been prolonged, and feeling that the jury must bring in a verdict of acquittal on ground of insanity, and knowing that it would be the duty of this court on receiving such a verdict to send the defendant to the insane asylum at Independence, and lest the defendant might be discharged therefrom before he has fully recovered from his epileptic insanity, and providing that there is a department for the insane at Anamosa penitentiary, with the consent of my associate counsel and of defendant, we withdraw the plea of not guilty and plead guilty, and ask that the court sentence the defendant to the penitentiary for life." Judge Hobson sentenced the prisoner to the penitentiary for life, and Sheriff Murphy left at once with the prisoner for Anamosa. This haste was on account of the fear of mob violence.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

THE FIRE IN ECUADOR.

Three-fourths of a City Destroyed—Much Loss of Life and Property.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The Herald's correspondent at Guayaquil, Ecuador, telegraphs that three-fourths of that city was reduced to ashes by the recent fire. Some reports estimate the loss at over $50,000,000. Many lives were lost, just how many it is impossible to say as yet, and 35,000 persons are homeless. Two thousand houses, including every bank in the city, of which there were five, burned. The custom house, theater, and many other public buildings were swept away by the flames. Practically all the grocery and supply stores are gone, and thousands of residents, homeless and hungry, swarm in the streets and neighboring woods. Not only is the food supply extremely low, but the fresh water supply is exhausted largely by the efforts of the firemen to extinguish the flames. Now the air is filled with a stifling dust of cinders and ashes, which adds greatly to the suffering from thirst. Business is entirely suspended, and every effort is directed toward relieving the distress of the sufferers.

DARING DEED IN MINNESOTA.

Two Masked Robbers Rob the Bank at Sherburne.

FAIRMONT, Minn., Oct. 8.—Two masked and bicycle mounted robbers swept into the little town of Sherburne, fourteen miles from Fairmont, dashed into the bank of Sherburne, murdered the cashier and a bystander, secured $1,000 from the cash tray, mounted their wheels and escaped before the eyes of the startled villagers. The affair was conducted with all the bravado of the frontier, and the killing of two men, one of whom died instantly, was purely wanton, as neither made any resistance.

AN ENTENTE REACHED.

Russia, France and Great Britian Will Deciple Turkey.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—It is announced that France, Russia and Great Britian have arrived at an entente in regard to Turkey, and it is expected that these powers will immediately dispatch to the porte a vigorous note demanding the adoption of reforms which will secure the safety of the Armenians in the Turkish empire.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 9.—The porte has sent a note to the powers demanding the right to board foreign vessels in Turkish waters for the purpose of searching for Armenians.

ROSEBERY RETIRES.

Writes a Letter Resigning the Leadership of the English Liberal Party.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The Central News is authority for the statement that Lord Rosebery has written a letter to Mr. Thomas Edward Ellis, member of parliament for Merionethshire, the first whip of the liberals, resigning the leadership of the party. The reason given for his lordship's resignation is that he disagrees with Mr. Gladstone and other leading liberals regarding the policy to be adopted on the eastern question.

SPAIN YIELDS TO UNCLE SAM.

Official Advices that Competitor Prisoners Are to Have Civil Trial.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Official advices which have just come from Madrid to the state department and the Spanish legation fully confirm the announcement that the Spanish authorities had decided that the trial of the Competitor prisoners by a summary court martial was irregular and that Spain had yielded to the demands of the United States for their trial by a civil tribunal.

NEBRASKA BANK ROBBERY.

Vault Blown Open With Dynamite and $1,600 Stolen.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 9.—The vault of the Claytonia Depository in Claytonia, twenty-seven miles south of Lincoln, was blown open by dynamite and $1,500 stolen. A large posse is scouring the country for the robbers. The same day the bank at Shelby, Polk county, was also looted and $3,100 taken.

Investigating the Health of Cattle.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 10.—From inquiries made here to-day it developed that the German government is making on its own account an investigation of the health of American cattle, possibly with a view of again placing an embargo upon American beef. The state board of health received a letter from the German consul at Cincinnati, asking for a detailed statement of how much tuberculosis existed among the cattle of Indiana. The letter also wanted to know what measures were being taken to weed out or prevent the disease, and stated that the German government had last year expended over $400,000 in stamping out tuberculosis among German cattle.

WRECKED THE BANK.

Brainard, Neb., Financial Institution Suffers by Dynamite.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 10.—The Bee's Brainard, Neb., special says: The Brainard bank was practically demolished by burglars, who attacked the safe with dynamite. Cashier Smith engaged in a battle with the burglars and drove them away. No money was lost, but the safe and building were wrecked.

Deaths from an Explosion.

DANVILLE, Penn., Oct. 10.—Three more deaths, making five in all, have resulted from an explosion in the rolling mill. The dead are: Thomas Cromwell, Oliver Cromwell and Jonn Mullen. Three more are likely to die. In all fifty or more were seriously hurt.

TERSE NEWS.

The czar and czarina are now in France.

Gov. Atkinson, dem., and the entire ticket has been elected in Georgia by majorities of not less than 40,000.

The London Chronicle says that it learns from a good source that the czar and Lord Salisbury have agreed upon a policy for the ultimate deposition of the sultan.

A dispatch says Patrick J. Tynan, the alleged dynamiter who was arrested in Boulonge-Sur-Mer, has been released by the French government, and that he has started on his return to the United States.

A dispatch says the Leadville strike will not be compromised. The miners will fight to the bitter end. The mine managers have given up all idea of any compromise and will simply go ahead and start their properties on a small scale. They will get as many men as possible and what cannot be had here they will bring from outside the state.

According to reliable advices from Havana, every night prisoners are taken in a boat, carried out and thrown into the sea, where the sharks, which are numerous, devour them and leave no sign. Advices declare that from September 1 to 30 eighty-three prisoners disappeared in this way. Prisoners were tortured to extort confession by allowing them nothing but salt codfish to eat and no water.

Chicago dispatch: Police officers from the Harrison street station are investigating a case of wholesale infanticide. The bodies of three babies have recently been taken out of the Chicago river at the Harrison street bridge, and in each case an autopsy showed that the infant was thrown in the river while alive. The police believe that a baby farm is in existence in the city on a large scale, from which the infants are carried to the bridge at night and thrown into the river.

Chicago, Ill., dispatch: The United States court of appeals is hearing arguments in the case of the United States against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, involving 3,500,000 acres of land donated thirty-five years ago by Iowa and Minnesota to Hastings and Dakota, Southern Minnesota and McGregor and Missouri river railroads, all now a part of the St. Paul system. The government brought the suit and imposed a fine of $5,000 for neglecting to make annual reports of all the lands in possession as provided by the law of 1878. The case is an appeal from the Milwaukee federal court, where it was decided against the government.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, the liberal leader in the house of commons, speaking recently at Ebbvale, England, expressed himself upon the Turkish question for the first time since the present conditions have developed. He called upon the government to grant security and protection to the Armenians. The Turkish government, he said, could never be reformed until it ceased to exist. But, he added, England could not act alone, because only a military occupation of Turkey would avail to protect the Armenians. England must co-operate with Russia, the first step being to obliterate the Cyprus convention, by which the island of Cyprus was ceded to Great Britain.

Berlin dispatch: The sensational news that Roumania and Greece have joined the driebund, and that the formal agreement to this effect was signed at Bucharest during the presence there of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, after the opening of the canal through the iron gates of the Danube, is being discussed in political circles. The statements made are believed to be correct and are regarded as being of prime importance, for the dreibund will thus have valuable allies in these two countries in the event of the disruption of Turkey or any serious complications in the east. King Charles of Roumania has long been anxious to join the dreibund, but it has only been lately that the bargain acceptable to all parties was drawn up. It is expected that Servia will also adhere to the dreibund as soon as the influence of ex-Queen Natalie, who is at Russeophile, is overcome

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"ARMAGEDDON" THE SUBJECT OF SUNDAY'S DISCOURSE.

From the Text: "And He Gathered Them Together in a Place Called in the Hebrew Tongue Armageddon" — Revelations, Chapter 16, Verse 16.

MEGIDDO is the name of a mountain that looks down upon Esdraelon, the greatest battle field that the world has ever seen. There Barak fought the Canaanites; there Gideon fought the Midianites; there Josiah fought the invading Egyptians. The whole region stands for battle, and the Armageddon of my text borrows its name from it, and is here used, not geographically, but figuratively, while setting forth the idea that there is to be a world's closing battle, the greatest of all battles, compared with which the conflicts of this century and all other centuries were insignificant, because of the greater number of combatants engaged, the greater victory and the greater defeat. The exact date of that battle we do not know, and the exact locality is uncertain. It may be in Asia, Europe, Africa or America, but the fact that such a battle will take place is as certain as God's eternal truth. When I use the superlative degree in regard to that coming conflict, I do not forget that there have been wars all along on stupendous scale. As when at Marathon Miltiades brought on his men, not in ordinary march, but in full run, upon the horsemen of Persia, and the black archers of Ethiopia, and scattered them, and crying, "Bring fire! Bring fire!" set into flame the ships of the invaders. As when Pizarro overcame Peru. As when Philip the Second triumphed over Portugal. As when the Huns met the Goths. As when three hundred Spartans sacrificed themselves at Thermopylae. As when the Carthaginians took Agrigentum. As when Alexander headed the Macedonian phalanx. As when Hannibal invaded Italy. Battle of Hastings! Battle of Valmy! Battle of Pultowa! Battle of Arbela! Battle of Tours! Battle of Borodino! Battle of Lucknow! Battle of Solferino! Battle of Fontenoy, where 100,000 were slain! Battle of Chalons, where 300,000 were massacred! Battle of Herat, where Genghis Khan destroyed 1,600,000 lives! Battle of Neishar, where 1,747,000 went down to death! 1,816,000 slain at Troy! And American battles, too near us now to allow us to appreciate their awful grandeur and significance, except you who were there, facing the North or facing the South! But all the battles I have named put together will not equal in numbers enlisted, or fierceness, or grandeur, or triumph, or rout, the coming Armageddon contest. Whether it shall be fought with printers' type or keen steel, whether by brain or muscle, whether by pen or carbine, whether by booming cannon or thunders of Christian eloquence, I do not know, and you may take what I say as figurative or literal, but take as certain what St. John, in his vision on the rocks of the Grecian archipelago, is pleased to call "Armageddon."

My sermon will first mention the regiments that will be engaged in the conflict; then will say something of the commanders on both sides; and then speak of the battle itself and the tremendous issues. Beginning with those who will fight on the wrong side, I first mention the regiments Diabolic. In this very chapter from which my text is taken we are told that the spirits of devils will be there. How many millions of them no one can tell, for the statistics of the satanic dominions have never been reported and the roll of that host has never on earth been called; but from the direful, and continental, and planetary work they have already done, and the fact that every man and woman and child on earth has a tempter, there must be at least sixteen hundred millions of evil spirits familiar with our world. Perhaps as many more are engaged on especial enterprises of abomination among the nations and empires of the earth. Beside that there must be an inconceivable number of inhabitants in realms pandemoniac, staying there to keep the great capitals of sin going from age to age. Many of them once lived in heaven, but engaging in conspiracy to put Satan on the throne, they were hurled out and down, and they are now among the worst thugs of the universe. Having been in three worlds—heaven, earth and hell—they have all the advantages of great experience. Their power, their speed, their cunning, their hostility wonderful beyond all statement! In the Armageddon they will, I doubt not, be present in full array. They will have no reserve corps, but all will be at the front. There will not only be soldiers in that battle who can be seen and aimed at, but troops intangible and without corporeity, and weapons may strike clear through them without giving them hurt. With what shout of defiance will they climb up the ladders of fire and leap from the battlements of asbestos into the last campaign of hell! Paul, the bravest of men, was impressed with their might for evil when he said, "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, and against powers, and against the rulers of the darkness in this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Oh, what an agitating moment, when the ranks diabolic move up and take their places for conflict in the Armageddon!

Other regiments who will march into the fight will be the regiments Alcoholic. They will be made up of the brewers' companies, distillery owners, and liquor dealers' associations, and the hundreds of millions of their patrons. They will move into the ranks with what the bible calls the "Song of the drunkard." And what a bloated, and soaked, and bleared, and blasted, and hiccoughing, and nauseating host! If now, according to a scientist in England, there are fifty thousand deaths annually from strong drink, and in the United States, according to another estimate, ninety-eight thousand deaths annually from strong drink, what an army of living drunkards that implies, coming up from the whole earth to take their places in the last battle, especially as the evil increases and the millions now staggering on their way may be joined by other millions of reinforcements; brigade after brigade, with drunkards' bones drumming on the head of beer barrels the dead march of souls. These millions of victims of alcohol joined by the millions of victims of arrack, the spirituous liquor of China, and India, and Arabia, and Egypt, and Ceylon, and Siam!

Other regiments who will march into the fight on the wrong side will be the regiments Infidel. God gave but one revelation to the human race, and these men have been trying to destroy it. Many of the books, magazines, and newspapers, through perpetual scoff at Christianity, and some of the universities, have become recruiting agencies for those regiments. The greatest brigadier of all those regiments, Voltaire, who closed his life of assault upon Christianity by writing, "Happiness is a dream, and only pain is real. I have thought so for eighty-four years, and I know no better plan than to resign myself to the inevitable and to reflect that flies are born to be devoured by spiders and man to be consumed by care. I wish I had never been born." Oh, the God-forsaken regiments of infidels, who after having spent their life in antagonizing the only influence that could make the earth better, gather with their low wit and their vile sneer and their learned idiocy and their horrible blasphemy to take part against God and righteousness in the great Armageddon!

Other regiments who will march in on the wrong side in the battle will be the regiments Mohammedan. At the present time there are about one hundred and seventy-five million Moslems. Their plain mission is to kill Christians, demean womanhood, and take possession of the earth in the interest of ignorance, superstition, and moral filth. The massacre of fifty thousand Armenians in the last two or three years is only one chapter in their effort to devastate the earth of everything but themselves. So determined are they in their bad work that all the nations of the earth put together dare not say to them, "Stop! or we will make you stop!" My hope is that long before that last battle of which I speak the Turkish government, and with it Mohammedanism, may be wiped out of existence. * * *

First of all, I mention the regiments Angelic! Alas! that the subject of demonology seems better understood than the subject of angelology. But the glorious spirits around the throne and all the bright immortals that fill the galleries and levels of the universe are to take part in that last great fight, and the regiments angelic are the only regiments capable of meeting the regiments plutonic. To show you something of an angel's power, I ask you to consider that just one of them slew one hundred and eighty-five thousand of Sennacherib's hosts in a night, and it is not a tough arithmetical question to solve, if one angel can slay one hundred and eighty-five thousand troops in a night, how many can five hundred millions of them slay? The old Book says that "They excel in strength." It is not a celestial mob, but a disciplined host, and they know their rank. Cherubim, seraphim, thrones, principalities, and powers! And the leader of these regiments is Michael the Archangel! David saw just one group of angels sweep past, and they were twenty thousand charioted. Paul, who in the Gamalian college had his faculties so wonderfully developed, confesses his incapacity to count them by saying, "Ye are come to Mount Zion and an innumerable company of angels." If each soul on earth has a guardian angel, then there must be sixteen hundred million angels on earth today. Besides that, heaven must be full of angels, those who stay there; not only the twelve angels who, we are told, guard the twelve gates, but those angels who help in the worship, and go on mission from mansion to mansion, and help to build the hozannas and enthrone the hallelujahs and roll the doxologies of the service that never ends. But they all, if required, will be in the last fight between holiness and sin. Heaven could afford to adjourn just one day, and empty all its temples, and mansions, and palaces, and boulevards into that one battle. I think all the angels of God will join in it. The one that stood with sword of flame at the gate of paradise. The one that pointed Hagar to the fountain in the wilderness.

The next regiments that I see marching into the fight will be the regiments Ecclesiastic. According to the last account, and practically only in the beginning of the great gospel movement which proposes to take the whole earth for God, there are four million six hundred thousand Methodists, three million seven hundred and twenty-five thousand Baptists, one million two hundred and eighty thousand three hundred and thirty-three Presbyterians, one million two hundred and thirty thousand Lutherans, and six hundred and forty thousand Episcopalians. But the present statistics of churches will be utterly swamped when, after all the great denominations have done their best work, the slowest of all the sects will have more numbers than the present enrollment of all denominations throughout Christendom.

Again, the regiments elemental will come into that battle on the right side. The winds! God showed what he could do with them when the splintered timbers of the ships of the Spanish Armada were strewn on the rocks of Scotland, Norway and the Hebrides. The waters! He showed what he could do with them when he put the whole earth under them, leaving it subaqueous one hundred and fifty days. The earthquakes! He showed what he could do with them when he let Caracas drop into the open mouth of horror and the islands of the sea went into entombment. The lightnings! He showed what he could do with them when he wrapped Mount Sinai in flame, and we have all seen their flashing lanterns moving with the chariots of the midnight hurricane. All the regiments elemental will come in on our side in the great Armageddon. Come and let us mount and ride along the line, and review the troops of Emanuel, and find that the regiments terrestrial and celestial that come into that battle on the right side are, as compared with those on the wrong side, two to one, a hundred to one, a thousand to one.

But who is the commander-in-chief on this side? Splendid armies have been ruined, caught in traps, flung over precipices, and annihilated through the incompetence or treachery of their general. Who commands on our side? Jehovah-Jireh! so-called in one place. "Captain of Salvation," so-called in another place. King of Kings. Lord of Lords. Conqueror of Conquerors! His eye omniscient. His arm omnipotent. He will take the lead.

But do not let us shout until after we have seen the two armies clash in the last struggle. Oh, my soul! The battle of all time and all eternity opens. "Forward!" "Forward!" is the command on both sides given. The long lines of both armies waver, and swing to and fro. Swords of truth against engines infernal. Black horse cavalry of perdition against white horse cavalry of heaven. The redemption of this world and the honor of the throne of God to vindicate, how tremendous is the battle! The army of righteousness seems giving way; but no! It is only a part of the maneuvre of the infinite fight. It is a deploy of the host celestial. What a meeting in this field of splendor and wrath, of the angelic and of the diabolic, of hosanna and blasphemy, of song and curse, of the divine and the satanic. The thunderbolts of the Almighty burst and blaze upon the foe. Boom! Boom! By the torches of lightning that illuminate the scene I see that the crisis of the Armageddon has come. It is the turning point of this last battle. The next moment will decide all. Aye! the forces of Apollyon are breaking ranks. See! See! They fly. Some on foot, some on wing; they fly. Back over the battlements of perdition they go down with infinite crash, all the regiments diabolic! * * *

The prophesied Amageddon of the text has been fought, and Christ and his followers have won the day. The kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ. All the Christian workers of our time, you, my hearers, and you, my readers, and all the Christian workers of all the ages, have helped on the magnificent result, and the victory is ours as much as theirs. This moment inviting all outsiders, through the ransomed blood of the everlasting Covenant, to get into the ranks of the Conquerors, and under the banner of our Leader, I shall not close the service with prayer, as we usually do, but immediately give out the Moravian hymn, by James Montgomery, appropriate when written in 1819, but more appropriate in 1896, and ask you, with full voices, as well as with grateful hearts, to chant it.

See Jehovah's banner furl'd,
Sheathed his sword: He speaks—'tis done
And the kingdoms of this world
Are the kingdoms of his Son.

A CONVENT OF COLORED NUNS

Founded Long Ago by a Wealthy Colored Lady.

A sight which invariably attracts the attention of strangers in New Orleans is the colored sisters. One so seldom hears of negroes professing the Roman Catholic faith that when he meets a colored nun for the first time he can but gaze after her in open-mouthed wonder. Accustomed as we are, moreover, to associate the black robes of the nun with white, pale faces, the effect is a little startling when a nearer view of a sister of charity discloses the meek brown face of a mulatto. This little band in New Orleans is known as the Holy Family of Sisters. It was founded as far back as 1842 by four free colored women, who, educated and wealthy, resolved to devote their time and money to those of their race so much less fortunate. The oldest of the four became Mother Juliette, who continued at the head of the sisterhood till her death, eight years ago. The convent is what was once the famous Orleans-street ballroom, and many are the tales which are told of the dancing and revelry which for years held sway within its walls. The building is an immense brown structure fronting directly on the narrow French street. The great windows have shutters, always closed, and there was such an air of quietude when I visited the place that I quite started when the bell gave a loud clang, as I pulled it. I felt that I had aroused unwilling echoes—perhaps awakened the ghosts of long ago and was almost tempted to run away when I heard footsteps within coming toward the door. But instead of meeting a frown of disapproval, as I half expected, I was admitted by a dark-faced nun, who appeared to consider it no unusual occurrence that a stranger desired permission to enter. The hall was dim and wide, with a gray stone floor and white pillars at the farther end. While I was inwardly commenting upon its severity and scrupulous neatness, Sister Frances came to show me about. She was rather a small mulatto, with a slender, interesting face, black eyes demurely lowered, and long brown hands meekly folded. Her uniform was of black serge, with a wide white linen guimpe, a white linen bonnet, the customary black veil, and the inevitable black beads and cross. We ascended the wide, easy staircase, and on the first landing I was confronted with the words: "I have chosen rather to be an abject in the house of my God than to dwell in the Tabernacle of Sinners."

A BICYCLISTS' DUEL.

Mounted on Wheels and Armed with Swords Two Frenchmen Fought.

The bicycle has already played many parts, but it has been left to certain Parisian students to use the accommodating machine as a war horse in what their ancestors called a "gentle and joyous passage of arms." The students were returning from a suburban run when a quarrel arose. Fists were proposed to settle it; but one of the party had aesthetic tastes and two old sword bayonets, and he suggested the merits of the latter so persuasively that before long the disputants found themselves facing one another at fifty paces, weapons in rest. The first assault failed entirely, but the second was less fortunate, and in the crash of the charge not only the combatants but their seconds were disbicycled. All four were more or less damaged, but worst of all one of the principals, who unintentionally played the Ancient Roman and fell on his own sword. One feels curious to know which of the four feels that honor has been satisfied.

Convict Labor in the United States.

Commissioner Carroll D. Wright has issued a statistical report on convict labor in the United States. The total number of convicts in the various penal institutions of the country has risen from 41,887 in 1885 to 54,244 in 1895, and the number engaged in productive labor has increased during the same period from 30,853 to 38,415. The total value of goods produced or worked on in the United States in all the state prisons and penitentiaries was $19,042,472 in 1895—a decrease. In 1885 the total value of the product of convict labor was $28,753,999, and the wages paid for convict labor in that year aggregated $3,512,970; at the present time the total value of convict labor does not exceed $2,500,000. The decline is made clearer by an enumeration of the states in whose penal institutions it has taken place. These are Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee and West Virginia. In the remaining states there was an increase.

Notes from Wallaces' Farmer.

A lousy hen wont lay eggs and you can't make her. Don't raise the pesky things; they are the worst live stock on the farm without exception.

Moulting is not a serious operation to a healthy chicken. If the stock are slow to renew their plumage and dump around with bare skins, look out for lice

The turkeys are beginning to shape up now. When we think of this noble and agreeable bird we instinctively look at the calender. Yes, Thanks giving is nearly here.

Was that man drawing the long bow who declared he had a pen of white Plymouth Rock hens which averaged 289 eggs each, per year? He said he did it with his little feed pail.

The Houdans are said to be the finest table bird of all the breeds. We have not tested this ourselves. but would like to do so. There is certainly a wonderful difference in the grain and flavor of the meat of the dif. ferent breeds.

Here are some remedies for getting off lice on the hen and in the house: Kerosene, lime, wood ashes, sulbher, Douglass mixture carbolick acid and a number of patent mixtures on the market, which can be used with excellent effect. Above all, never let up.

They are so little you hardly know you are taking them. They cause no griping, yet they act quickley and most thoroughly. Snch are the famous little pills known as DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Small in size, great in results. Harr.

Speed and safety are the watch words of the age. One Minute Cough Cure acts speedily, safely and never fails. Asthma, bronchitis, coughs and colds are cured by it. Harr.

CHAPTER VII.—(CONTINUED.)

"Have I told you how I came to fall? You see, I thought I saw a sail off on the water, and I forgot what I was about and lent forward too far. Perhaps I was right, and ye'll all get away to liberty as well as me. Ye'd better light a fire on the cliff at night if you make out the sail. Poor little Ellie, don't cry so. Tom's dreadful sorry to leave ye all so lonesome here, but we mustn't rebel ag'in the Lord, you know."

Immediately he ran off into a rambling, incoherent talk, that showed his mind was away in the little hamlet of his native town. He laughed once, and spoke his sister's name in a quick, glad way, like one who has come to a happy meeting. Only once more he spoke—this time with something of his old cheery heartiness.

"That's comforting," said he. "Oh, Mr. Vernon, how glad I am ye've come to love the Bible better'n them rhyming books. Read that again, please, sir, if ye can see for the dark."

"He thinks we are at our evening reading," whispered the awed, scarcely-breathing Walter.

Mr. Vernon looked piteously at the ashy face, and filmed, unseeing eye, and then conquering his emotion repeated solemnly the psalm "The Lord is my Shepherd." The words seemed to reach the dying ears, for a contented smile played round the pallid lips. Closer and closer drew the sorrowing group. The glassy eye was fixed now; the limbs no longer quivered; only a faint throbbing at the throat told of life. In a few moments that had ceased too. In shuddering horror Walter and Eleanor flung themselves in Mr. Vernon's arms. Folding them closely in his arms he groaned:

"God have mercy upon us—we three are left alone."

The scene that followed is too harrowing to be pictured. Anywhere, at any time, death is sad and awful enough, but there on that lonely island the strongest and stoutest taken from their little number—no tongue can describe the terrible loneliness, the wretched gloom that followed.

They made his grave beyond the spring, beneath the Hibiscus tree, and never was mound more tenderly smoothed or sorrowfully bedewed with tears than the lonely island grave of Tom Harris. It was not until the second dismal day after his death that the suggestion of Tom's came to Mr. Vernon's mind. The sail he had seen—what had become of it? Was it still in view?

Walter had been Tom's pupil in those athletic exercises that become a sailor's second nature, and was, moreover, naturally active and agile. He volunteered at once to ascend the flagstaff, although his cheek blanched and his eye studiously avoided the spot where poor Tom had fallen. Eleanor was nearly frantic at the proposal, but his father, after a few earnest words of caution, consented that he should make the attempt. It was now three days since the accident, and there had been no breeze on shore, and they had cherished the forlorn hope that if a vessel had actually been near them she could not yet have drifted from sight. Walter's face was gloomy enough as he descended. There was a faint speck on the water as far as he could see, but he did not believe it was a ship.

Mr. Vernon suddenly started to a consciousness of the insecurity of his own life, had become morbidly anxious to leave the island. Without Tom's cheery, self-reliant nature to sustain him, he felt incapable of protecting the youthful beings Providence had left in his charge. Moreover, he had long been aware of an inward malady slowly but certainly eating away his strength. For himself he asked nothing better than a grave beside his faithful companion. For the children's sake the life on the lonesome island seemed intolerable.

"It will do no harm," said he promptly; "let us kindle a fire on the cliff every night for a week or more."

With dismal alacrity Walter and Eleanor gathered the dry underbrush and moss, and reared the pile on their pretty white coral throne, and as soon as dusk arrived, with eyes that burned feverishly enough to have kindled the pyre, Mr. Vernon plied the tinder and flint, and in a few moments the ruddy beam shot up, flashing a yellow path far off into the sea, and a rosy glow against the darkened sky. Those three anxious, terribly earnest faces and striking forms stood out distinctly and wildly in the flaring light. Even in the midst of his own harrowing suspense Walter's artist eye took in the grand sublimity of the scene, and made a mental memoranda that was thereafter to live in undying colors. The tears were silently streaming over Eleanor's check; Walter turned and drew her fondly to his side. It was not the time now to think of formal prudence or to refuse the sympathy so much needed.

"Oh, Walter, we are fearfully in earnest now. It seems as if we must all perish if no ship is near. Tom's death has made our island life intolerable. Think how horrible it will be to be the last one!" And, shuddering, she clung convulsively to his arm.

He stroked softly the trembling hands.

"You are exhausted with grief and nervous with excitement, Ellie. Things will look more cheerful by-and-bye. Come to the house and hear me sing the hymn my father taught us. I will rock you in my arms, my poor frightened darling, till sleep shall come; and then my father shall sleep in Tom's room, so you need not feel lonely, while I shall keep the fire blazing brightly all night. Will you try and sleep, Ellie?"

He drew her gently down the cliff into the pretty parlor that was called her room, and as he had said, took her in his arms, and sat down in the rocking-chair he himself had made for her, and in his clear, sweet voice began a low hymn. His soothing tones stilled the tumult in Eleanor's heart; the sobs ceased, the tears no longer trickled down her cheek, and presently the weary, swollen eyelids closed softly, and her quiet, regular breathing told him she slept. Laying her carefully upon the couch, Walter went back to his father, who stood with bowed head and folded arms at the foot of the cliff.

"Have you any hope, father?" he asked calmly.

"Yes, my son, the hope that depends upon prayer. Heaven knows how I have poured out my soul in petition that help may come to you. Joyfully, gladly would I propose that the price of your safety might be my own worthless life. I am content if the ship will come to take your two fresh young hearts to human companionship, though I myself may never set foot upon the land of my birth. I have so much hope, Walter."

"You talk so lightly of your life it grieves me deeply. What it has been I know not; you have never told me, but that it is now our greatest consolation and joy, I feel more deeply than words can say."

"Some time, Walter, you shall know all. Perhaps it is selfish in me that I would hide the past till the last moment. It wil not be long before you will understand everything. Go in now, and leave me to tend the fire."

"No, indeed," was Walter's decisive reply. "I am young and strong, fit for night watches. Besides, Eleanor is restless and nervous; when she wakens you can best comfort her."

The last suggestion overruled his determination, and Mr. Vernon went back to the house.

What eager eyes scanned the empty horizon when morning broke over the sea! What dispirited faces gathered round the breakfast table! What listless melancholy pervaded the whole day!

Without a word of explanation, just before nightfall, Walter went to work and gathered a fresh pile of brushwood. Mr. Vernon's head was bowed upon his hands, and he did not notice the movement; but Eleanor followed sadly, and pointing to the charred, blackened rock, said mournfully:

"It is like our hopes, our lives, Walter."

Walter's lips quivered. He would not show the weakness to her, but leaping lightly upon the rock began to arrange the wood. Heedlessly his eye fell upon the distant sea, and lo! a wild transport dashed off his black look of despair; an eager light irradiated his eagle eye.

"Saved! saved!" shouted he, reeling into the arms of the astonished Eleanor, weeping like a girl.

She thought him crazed and shrank back in terror. Recovering himself, he cried earnestly:

"The ship is there—she is coming. Oh, Ellie, we are saved!"

When Eleanor at length comprehended his meaning, she bounded forward to the rock, and satisfied that it was indeed a large ship—masts, hull and all plainly visible—she flew like a frantic creature to Mr. Vernon, and flinging her arms around his neck, sobbed herself in a transport of delight.

Walter had grown more calm, and hastened to state the joyful intelligence clearly. Mr. Vernon took their hands and solemnly lifted his eyes upward. Never came prayer more thrillingly from the innermost soul than rose on the twilight air from that lonely island.

"Now, then, we must work, Walter," said his father quietly. "Night is close at hand, and the reef is dangerous. I think you and I can get poor Tom's canoe out into smooth water and warn them from the sunken rocks. At such a time as this Eleanor will not shrink to be left alone to tend faithfully the beacon light. Our preservers must not suffer for obeying our signal of distress."

Walter was already on his way to the beach. The experience of the last few days had swept away all trace of boyishness. With the firm, elastic tread of confident manhood he dashed down to the boat. A sigh went out to the memory of him whose hand had last secured the rope of bark, but the eagle eye was fixed steadfastly on the outer sea—and this was time for action and not for lamentation. His father, with something of youth's vigor, leaped to his side, carrying a bunch of the knots they had long ago prepared for evening illumination, the flame of one among them streaming up sickly and pale in the waning daylight.

What wild, exultant hopes, what sad, bitter memories stirred those two tumultuous hearts—who shall say? But the oars were plied in silence, and silently, too, when a fresh breeze sprang up, was the little sail raised, and before the dusky wings brooding above them folded the white sails of their hope from sight, they had gained the desired station close beside the treacherous reef, and with their little torch flaring brightly over the gray ridges of leaping water, moored their tiny lighthouse as securely as possible, and waiting, gazed not at the burning stars above, but far over the sea to the flickering gleam where the unknown ship hung out her signal lamp, or back to the cliff where Eleanor tended faithfully the rosy bonfire.

Eleanor was lonely and intensely agitated, but no thrill of fear mingled with her sensations. Vigilantly and steadily she kept the blaze bright throughout the night, now straining her ear to catch a fancied hallo, now turning sadly in the direction of that new-made grave, whose cold, unconscious occupant could hear never more the glad huzza of rescue for which he hoped so long.

CHAPTER VIII.

WITH the first welcome glimpse of daylight to her weary eyes came a sound that brought her heart fluttering to her throat—a cheery shout mingled with the measured dash of oars. Eleanor threw down her torch, and sweeping back the cloud of damp curls that fell heavily over her face as she ran, she flew down the path to the little cove where the boat was kept, which was the natural inlet, since no other was free from surf or convenient for landing. A strange boat, packed closely with men, was aiming steadily for the shore. Her eager eye ran rapidly over the company to find Walter and his father. They were there in the stern, in earnest conversation with a tall officer in the lieutenant's uniform of Her Majesty's service. Eleanor stood on shore, half shy, half dignified, the early morning light playing softly around her graceful figure, the light breeze dallying with her robe of native cloth, and stirring a golden sunshine of their own among her curls.

"A romantic picture, truly," said Lieutenant Harry Ingalls, looking admiringly upon the beautiful girl, half child, half woman, poised there upon the rock as lightly as a bird, fit ideal of the tropic loveliness of the whole scene. "By my sword, one might believe yonder was another Aphrodite freshly risen from the foam. It were worth treble the voyage the 'Hornet' has made to rescue and return so fair a flower to England's generous heart. In truth, young sir, I have done pitying you for this long exile. In faith, I should ask nothing better myself with so fair a companion."

He turned his gay blue eye to Walter merrily, but a frown was on the latter's forehead, and his looks were bent gloomily upon the water, and it was his father who answered quietly, just a little reprovingly:

"We have endeavored to do our duty faithfully toward one so gentle and good, especially never to forget amidst the unavoidable familiarity of circumstances the probable high birth and elevated position of the young lady. The same respect and delicacy, I trust, will be observed by all others, until she is safely under the protection of her own relatives."

The young officer colored a little, and replied frankly:

"You need have no fear of me, my good sir. I trust a British sailor knows what is due to his own character, as well as what is required by a beautiful woman in need of his protection. Our queen herself could not be more honorably dealt with than will this young lady on board our ship. Come, boys, bend to it steadily—a long pull a strong pull, and a pull all together," he added, turning his eyes away from the shore.

AMERICANS IN CUBA.

Consul General Lee Prevented From Investigating.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The World's Havana special says: The order prohibiting the American consul general from visiting the military prisons keeps him from personally investigating the condition of the Americans imprisoned there. He has to rely on what Weyler tells him. In the last interview Lee complained of the sanitary condition of the cells the American prisoners were in. Weyler replied: "Oh, I have attended to that matter. They have been removed to cells 41 and 42." General Lee retired flattered at his supposed success, not knowing that the Americans always occupied those cells. They were gloomy and so damp that water oozes from the ceilings and trickles down the walls, wetting the floor, which never dries. In one of these cells Melton, an American newspaper correspondent, and George Aguirre were locked up with a man suffering from small pox. The disagreement between Weyler and Lee continues and arrested Americans are suffering the consequences.

STRIKE IS OFF.

Committee of the Brotherhoods Settle It.

MONTREAL, Oct. 8.—The telegraphers' strike on the Canadian Pacific railway has been declared off. It is understood that all of those operators who have not performed criminal acts will be reinstated. The other terms agreed upon are in the nature of a compromise. The trouble was settled by a committee of the brotherhoods of the engineers, firemen, conductors and switchmen, acting as a conciliatory medium between the Canadian Pacific railroad and the strikers.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—George Du Maurier, the artist and author, who has been suffering for some time with heart and lung troubles, died yesterday. His death was peaceful.

French Crew Attacked by Pirates.

MALAGA, Oct 11.—The Spanish merchant steamer, Seville, which arrived here from French Mediterranean ports, reports that the French bark Corinthe, while becalmed recently near the island of Alhucemas, the Spanish prison settlement off the coast of Morocco, was attacked by armed Moors in boats. The pirates bound the crew of the bark, and pillaged her. The crew of the Seville succeeded in rescuing one of the crew of the Corinthe and captured a boat load of Moors. When the Seville approached the Corinthe the pirates opened fire upon her, killing two men and wounding four, but the Spanish ship's crew eventually compelled them to retire. A Spanish gunboat has been sent to Morocco with instructions to demand the release of the prisoners and the payment of indemnity. The outrage took place in Spanish waters.

Strike a Rich Bed of Gold.

DEADWOOD, S. D., Oct. 10.—A rich strike was made on the Gold King lode of the Rua group on Squaw Creek. In running a drift on the blanket formation the miners struck a well-defined vertical vein over two feet wide that runs over $100 a ton. The group consists of seventeen claims. Another rich strike was also made on the German-American Mining Company's property at the head of Black Trail Gulch, owned by Chicago parties.

$30,000,000 Loss by Fire.

LIMA, Peru, Oct. 9.—The great fire at Guayaquil, Equador, has been finally subdued. It is estimated that the amount of the loss will reach $30,000,000. The insurance amounts to $2,500,000. Thousands of persons are left homeless by the conflagration. The custom house and its contents have been destroyed. The fire is believed to have been caused by an incendiary.

Double Lynching in Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 12.—A negro, Jim Anderson by name, was shot to death by a mob near Taylor's ferry, twenty-two miles from Birmingham. Henry Cyat, another negro, was taken by a mob at the same place and riddled with bullets. The negroes were accused of having murdered and robbed Randolph Falls, a farmer residing near Toadsville.

Condition of British Crops.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The report of the condition of the British crops up to the first of October shows that the cereals have been somewhat damaged by rain, but the roots and grass have been improved. The average of wheat is now 104 9-10 and that of barley 84-35.

BLACKBURN INSULTED.

Logan Carlisle Makes a Kentucky Duel Possible.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Logan Carlisle, son of Secretary Carlisle, and chief clerk of the treasury department, has issued a declaration that is a burning insult to Senator Joe Blackburn. A few weeks ago Logan Carlisle's messenger, a negro, resigned his position, claiming that as a democrat he could not serve under Carlisle, who refuses to support Bryan. Three days ago the negro messenger issued a challenge to Logan Carlisle to meet him in joint debate. Logan Carlisle responds, says he feels highly honored by the challenge, because his backers, in putting this negro forward have done him greater honor than the silver democrats have done in offering to pit Senator Blackburn against Secretary Carlisle. In thus putting the negro forward as superior to Senator Blackburn, Logan Carlisle invites a Kentucky settlement of the differences existing between the Blackburn and Carlisle families. No insult could be offered Joe Blackburn which could be more incisive. Everybody is asking what Blackburn will do about it.

ENGLAND AFTER GERMANY.

British Naval Reinforcements Sent to Zanzibar.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The dispatch of British naval reinforcement at Zanzibar has excited interest in the situation and is universally interpreted as a demonstration against Germany, as the condition of affairs in Zanzibar does not justify such measures. It is admitted here that Germany has the technical right to remove Khalid from her consulate at Zanzibar, but the method adopted and the crowing of the German press in connection with the affair, openly declaring that the measure was a slap for Great Britain, has acted like a bellows to the anti-German fire burning in this country. The Spectator urges the government to arms in Zanzibar as an answer to Germany's unfriendly act. It is almost impossible to exaggerate the feeling in Great Britain against Germany at the present moment, aroused by offensive articles in the German press. The Globe epitomizes the general opinion of the British press in the remark: "If Great Britain is so unfortunate as to incur the anger of Germany, we have no doubt as to the result."

IN TURKEY.

The Sultan Takes a Decided Stand Regarding the Bosphorus.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 8.—It is semi-officially announced that Turkey has decided not to admit the United States cruiser Bancroft or the guardships of Greece and Holland through the Dardanelles to act as protectors of the embassies of the three nations in case of emergency. It is known that Russia objected to the presence of these warships in the Bosphorus. Her objection is said to be based on the Berlin agreement, which excludes from naval representation in the Bosphorus powers not parties to that agreement. It is believed that United States Minister Terrell a month ago sent an urgent request to Washington for war vessels. It is further intimated that the United States will insist, by force if necessary, upon their presence on the Bosphorus, taking the ground that such a step is not an unfriendly act to Turkey, in view of all the circumstances, and that it is necessary to the protection of the lives and property of American citizens.

GREAT DAY AT GALESBURG.

Thirty-Eighth Anniversary of the Lincoln and Douglas Debate.

GALESBURG, Ill., Oct. 8.—The celebration of the thirty-eight anniversary of the Lincoln-Douglas debate here opened with the dedication of the soldiers' monument at Hope cemetery. Business houses were decorated and many visitors were in the city. The gold standard democrats tendered Senator Palmer a reception. A procession followed, reviewed by Chauncey M. Depew, H. S. McClure, editor of McClure's Magazine, and other distinguished visitors. Hon. Robert T. Lincoln unveiled the monument and delivered an eloquent address. A memorial tablet of bronze was placed in the wall of Knox College. Senator Palmer delivered the unveiling address.

ENTIRE FAMILY KILLED.

Bloody Tragedy Discovered by Neighbors at Noblesville, Ind.

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Oct. 11.—Evidence of a horrible tragedy has been discovered at the home of Albert Bray, a farmer living three miles from this city. A neighbor, on going to the house and failing to get a response to a rap, forced his way in and found the bodies of Bray, his wife and their two children, aged 3 and 6 years, upon the floor of the bedroom in which they slept. Bray was still alive, but the others were dead. The father expired shortly after the discovery, without gaining consciousness. A bloody razor was lying at his side and it is supposed that he committed the awful butchery with it.

MARVELOUS RESULTS.

From a letter written by REV. J. Gunderman of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junct. she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing which would last for hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr, King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at J. L. Harr's Drug Store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

Nothing really looks quite so ridiculous as a vulgar person in stylish clothes.

The man who lets his troubles control his mouth is a heavy addition to the troubles of other people.

Li Hung Chang likes us, but he waited until he was safely on the other side before he ventured to say so.

There are people of such intense personality that they imagine others are interested in the fact that they arise early in the morning.

A Philadelphia boy smoked cigarettes on a wager, against time. It took him only half an hour to absorb poison enough to kill him. He died in a few hours. Death followed as surely as if a deadly weapon had been used. It is none the less suicide when a fatal result follows a longer use of cigarettes. Such suicides are not rare. Insane asylums and graves bear witness to the insidious and destructive power of this habit.

In a recent letter Dr. George Ebers, the famous German Egyptologist, thus sums up his life: "Next March I shall be sixty years of age, and I have loved much, erred much, borne much and worked much." The humility of the great scholar finely illustrates the truth that profound knowledge and arrogance are not necessarily allied, as unthinking and unlearned people often imagine. He who is most learned is apt to be the most eager and modest learner.

The most famous clown in America, Austin B. Crary, famous for the "Hey Rube" expression and his donkey and cart performances in Barnum's and other circus shows, has gone mad. He talks incessantly, saying that the fact of having had to act crazy for twenty-five years has resulted in his really becoming crazy. As he was being taken to the asylum in Cincinnatio he explained to the keepers his plan for arranging matters that all actors might be paid $50 a day and all other persons $6 a week.

A Minneapolis man fell in love with a Chicago woman after reading in a newspaper symposium her ideas of what a husband should be. The editors of the city are already expecting to put in an extra department for the receipt of mail to accommodate the other Chicago ladies who have a few ideas of their own about prospective husbands. It is even feared that some poor, discouraged little maiden on the unmentionable side of 30 may be driven to the extreme of saying that her ideal man may smoke in the parlor and come to the breakfast table in his shirt sleeves if only he will hurry up to provide the parlor and the breakfast table before the winter sets in.

Friends of Rockford college, a college for young women in Rockford, Illinois, and of the University of Wisconsin, have contributed funds for a fellowship in economics for the coming year, to be held by a graduate of Rockford college desiring to carry on graduate studies in the school of economics, political science and history of the University of Wisconsin. The faculty of the university voted to recommend Miss Mary A. Sabin for this fellowship and she has now been duly elected by the regents. Miss Sabin was graduated from the seminary course of Rockford college five or six years ago; she studied at Smith college subsequently, and then went back to Rockford where she took her degree this year.

The Chinese province, Manchuria, which came into prominence during the late Chinese-Japanese war, appears to be recovering rapidly from the effects of the recent war. Mr. Hosie, consul at Niuchwang, reports that he had a recent opportunity of visiting Kirin, the central province of Manchuria, and nothing surprised him more than the magnificence of the agricultural area through which he passed in this journey of over 780 miles. The country resembled very much the plains of Canada, with here and there a touch of the rolling lands of the northeast of Scotland. There were no small cultivated patches, as in southern and central China; fields on a gigantic scale everywhere met the eye. Scarcely a piece of waste land was to be seen. He mentions the all but incredible volume of trade that was being carried on along the main roads, and the great impetus which the Japanese occupation of the Laotong peninsula gave to the development of the more northern districts of Manchuria. Russian exploring parties have been traversing the province, and an American and German firm have established agencies."

THE NEWS IN IOWA

GOT LONG SENTENCES.

End of a Sensational Criminal Case at Iowa City.

IOWA CITY, Oct. 18.—The most sensational criminal case that Iowa City has had for years and one with a large element of tragedy in it, came to an end when Judge P. B. Wolfe, of Clinton, pronounced the following sentences: To hard labor at Anamosa for 10 years, William McDonough, John McGuan, John Sale, Harry Goody; for seven and one-half years, James McDonough. These young men are all Iowa City lads, who were arrested by Deputy Sheriff Clark and a posse of officers in August, charged with criminally assaulting Emma Gromas, a feeble-minded girl, 16 years of age. Another member of the party, Charles Fickler, alias "Chicago Pickle," of Chicago, was shot dead by Clark while resisting arrest, and Luke Jordan, of Iowa City, was afterwards found dead, mysteriously free from wounds, at the side of a railroad track. Judge Wade having arrested one of the men at the revolver's point, gave way to Judge Wolfe in the trial of the case. Previous to conviction the men had made three unsuccessful attempts to break jail.

MADE A MISTAKE.

Jury in the Hoover Case Gives the Defendant Light Punishment.

INDEPENDENCE, Oct. 16.—After a trial of three weeks' duration, a verdict has been returned in the case of Sylvester Hoover, charged with assault with intent to commit murder on Joseph Heckel. Strong circumstantial evidence was introduced by the state, which was not weakened by that produced by the defense. The jury returned a verdict of assault with intent to do great bodily injury. The jury have since stated that they took into consideration the boy's age, which is 16, and wanted to give him three to five years in the penitentiary. Through ignorance, they have given him one year in the county jail. The crime was a cold-blooded one, Heckel being shot at night while seated in his own home. Public opinion is high in indignation at the verdict. The cost to the state is estimated at over $2,000.

Attempted Postoffice Robbery.

AUDUBON, Oct. 16.—A daring attempt was made at 2 o'clock a. m. to rob the postoffice at Grant City, a small inland town one and a half miles north of Audubon. The clerk, who was sleeping in the store in which the postoffice is situated, was awakened by the rattle of glass at the back window, followed by heavy blows upon the sheet iron shutters inside. Leveling his revolver at the window, he sent a bullet flying through the shutter, whereupon the would-be burglars beat a hasty retreat through the back alley. An examination of the premises showed that two men had been concerned in the work, as their tracks were plainly discernable in the soft ground. In their haste to get away they left a carpenter's brace, and it is supposed that a wire clothes line intercepted one of them, as his hat was found beneath it. This is the second time within a few years that this office has received visits of this nature.

Tells a Pitiful Story.

BURLINGTON, Oct. 17.—Mrs. Julia Daugherty, once a handsome bride with bright prospects for a happy future, was in the city tombs on the charge of vagrancy. She told a pitiful story of desertion, claiming she and her husband came from Cedar Rapids, as he told her, to take a lucrative position. When they arrived in Burlington he slipped away from her, leaving her penniless and helpless. She wandered about the streets for several days, and was then arrested for vagrancy. The officers sent her to her friends in Keithsburg, Ills.

More Railway Shops for Ottumwa.

OTTUMWA, Oct. 17.—The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul will hereafter run all passenger and freight crews through from Ottumwa to Kansas City. In the interest of economy, the division station at Chillicothe, Mo., has been abolished, and the divisions will be from Marion to Ottumwa, and Ottumwa to Kansas City. A new round house will be constructed in Ottumwa, and the machine shops and division station transferred from Chillicothe to Ottumwa. It will mean the removal of 80 to 100 families from that place to Ottumwa at once.

Accidentally Shot.

NEWTON, Oct. 19.—Ellis Bous, 22 years old, visiting here from Springfield, Ohio, accidentally shot and killed himself while hunting squirrels in Adamson Grove. His remains were sent to Ohio.

Suicide in Hamilton County.

WEBSTER CITY, Oct. 16.—A young man named Ike Rooker, living five miles south of Webster City, suicided by shooting himself with a shotgun. No cause is known for the act.

MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE.

Verdict Returned by the Jury in the Harris Murder Case.

DES MOINES, Oct. 19.—William Harris was found guilty of murder in the second degree in the district court. He was tried for the murder of George Frank on September 7. His defense was drunkenness. The attorney tried to secure a verdict of manslaughter. The state tried to convict him of murder in the first degree, with a death sentence. The jury compromised on a verdict of murder in the second degree. The crime is punishable by imprisonment for any term of years from ten to life.

RAN AWAY FROM TROUBLE.

Banker Kennedy of Manchester Hangs Himself.

MANCHESTER, Oct. 16.—J. D. Kennedy, a banker and one of the wealthiest citizens of Manchester, committed suicide by hanging himself. Business reverses are said to have led to the suicide. Mr. Kennedy has been a man of unquestioned honesty. He was one of the first directors of the First National bank and resigned a year ago on account of poor health.

THREE MEN KILLED.

Precipitated Forty Feet from a Bridge Scaffold at Dubuque.

DUBUQUE, Oct. 17.—A fatal accident occurred here. Several men were on a scaffold erected for building the Catfish bridge. A porion of the scaffolding gave way and three men were precipitated forty feet to the rocks below. Chris Smith was instantly killed, and James Mayoney and George Jansen received injuries which will prove fatal.

BULLARD INDICTED.

Secretary of Iowa Senate Charged With Forgery On Two Counts.

BELMOND, Oct. 17.—Secretary of the Iowa Senate W. E. Bullard, of Belmond, has been indicted by the Wright county grand jury at Clarion on two counts of forgery. Mr. Bullard asks that the trial be held this present term of court.

Hog Cholera Reports.

DUBUQUE, Oct. 15.—Reports to the Illinois Central show no trace of hog cholera east of Independence or south of Manchester. It rages northwest and southwest of Independence. From Jessup to Fort Dodge the loss is 40 per cent; at Iowa Falls, Alden, Williams and Blairsburg 50 per cent; from Charles City north, 25 per cent. Farmers are rushing unfatted hogs as well as shoats to market, and next spring's crop will be short.

BREVITIES.

Highland Park College, Des Moines, has just published "A Little Book," elegantly illustrated, containing a splendid write-up of that noted school. It is mailed free upon request.

Franklin H. Whitney died at Atlantic on the 12th after a month's illness. He had lived in Cass county forty years and founded the city of Atlantic. His assignment and the failure of his bank October 1 tied up property valued at $500,000. The present outlook is that his heirs will save $100,000, left after all debts are paid.

At Dubuque recently W. V. Hand, formerly of Minneapolis, who was arrested three months ago on charge of using the United States mails for fraudulent purposes, was, at his own request, brought before Judge Shiras and pleaded guilty to the charge. He said he was tired of lying in jail. He advertised for a girl to accompany his wife to Europe, demanding $2 as a guarantee. His receipts for awhile were large. The judge sentenced him to one year's imprisonment in the county jail.

Lake Mills dispatch: There is no longer the shadow of a doubt that the man under arrest here, charged with participating in the Sherburne robbery, is the guilty party. With head lowered in shame and disgrace, he confessed one of the most heinous crimes ever committed. "I might as well make a clean breast of it all. The fellow that was killed was my brother. We robbed the bank at Sherburne, but I am not guilty of killing either of the men. It was agreed that we were not to shoot."

Burlington dispatch: An electric car ran away down the steep grade on North Fourth street, jumping the track at a curve and running a block further down the hill. It was badly shattered, and all of the passengers more or less injured. A Miss Coleman was seriously hurt, being bruised and cut from head to foot. She was thrown on her face on the brick pavement, and was covered with blood when picked up. Police Officer Zorn jumped from the car and fell on his side, bruising and cutting himself badly. These two were the most seriously injured. A careless car-cleaner neglected to supply the car with sand, and the wheels slipped on the frosty track.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

THE CRUISER BANCROFT.

Arrives at Smyrna—Will Not Force the Dardanelles.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The United States dispatch boat, Bancroft, concerning whose trip to the Mediterranean sensational reports have been published, has arrived at Smyrna. That part of the story of the Bancroft alleging that the French fleet would co-operate in securing the passage of the Bancroft through the Dardanelles is absolutely without foundation and it can be stated on absolutely unquestioned diplomatic authority that no negotiations to such an end have ever been attempted. The essential features of the entire story are discredited in diplomatic circles, which believe the published report originated in the fact that the Bancroft's admission to the Bosphorus is desired, and that Minister Terrell will use the influence he possesses with the porte to bring it about by peaceful methods, but will not persist if decided objection is made. So far as the United States alone is concerned, European powers have no objection to the presence of the dispatch boat in the Bosphorus, the objections arising solely from the fact that it might establish a precedent for like demands from other nations.

SENSATION IN ENGLAND.

Sir Edward Clark Declares Against England's Claims in Venezuela.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—A great sensation has been caused in the political world by the speech of Sir Edward Clark, conservative member of parliment, and and who was solicitor general in Lord Salisbury's previous ministry, in which he said, speaking of the Venezuelan question, that the decision of the American boundary commission would be against England, not because it was a hostile commission, but because he believed no honest and impartial arbitrator or commission could decide in favor of England's claims upon the evidence. Sir Edward's assertion is widely commented on in all the political circles and in the press. The Daily News says it supposes Sir Edward Clark is afflicted with the terrible disease of inverted jingoism. "The panic stricken talk of the whipping Lord Salisbury is likely to get from the new president," this paper continues, "is only calculated to re-animate the American jingoes and to make conciliation and compromise harder."

FATAL RESULTS OF A FIRE.

Three Men Killed and Half a Dozen Badly Hurt.

MONTREAL, Oct. 16.—Three firemen were killed and six badly injured at a stubborn fire at the chemical warehouse of Gilmour & Co. Edmund LaPorte, Harry King and Silvan Carpenter are the names of the dead. The firemen fought the fire courageously and after an hour's work they seemed to have the upper hand. At this stage the firemen were distributed in all parts of the building and were speedily drowning out the flames, when, with a terrible crash the second floor gave way and fell to the floor beneath. The men who were on top escaped, half suffocated and bleeding from many wounds, but the men below were crushed under tons of timber and goods. The loss of property is in the vicinity of $200,000, insurance about one-half.

Another Trunk Mystery.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—About $60,000 worth of railroad bonds and other securities have been found in a trunk, which has been held as security for a board bill in the Saratoga hotel for nearly three years. The documents have been turned over to Chief of Police Badenoch and he will make an investigation, as the whole affair is surrounded with mystery. All the papers are made out in the name of J. Lawrence Schoolcraft, whose mother, it is thought, lives at Glenn Forge, Va. The hotel authorities say the package was found in a trunk left there shortly after the world's fair by a man who registered as Geo. Craft, of Philadelphia, it having been held as security for a board bill of $36.

A Heavy Apple Crop.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The October fruit report of the agricultural department shows a heavy apple crop and an especially fine quality in the northern tier of states. Prices are extremely low. This particularly is the case in Michigan, where the markets are glutted. The disastrous storm of the last week in September did much damage to fruit along the Atlantic coast. The loss was particularly heavy in parts of Pennsylvania and New York. Some complaint of the dropping of fruit comes from the middle west.

Mexican Presidency.

CITY OF MEXICO, Oct. 16.—The formal proclamation has been made in this city of the re-election of President Diaz.

COLORADO BANK ROBBERY.

All Three Shot Down by Citizens—Four of the Latter Wounded.

MEEKER, Colo., Oct. 16.—Three men entered the Bank of Meeker, which is connected with the store room of J. W. Hughes & Co., who own the bank. Two of the men held the store employes at bay, while the third went to the bank cashier's window, and, firing one shot, ordered the cashier to throw up his hands. The order was not quickly obeyed, and the robber fired again, whereupon the cashier's hands went up. The manager of the store was then forced to open the bank door, and after gathering up all the money in sight, the robbers marched the bank and store employes into the street with hands uplifted. They then rushed out of the back way with their booty. Citizens attracted by the shots had pretty well surrounded the building by this time, and being armed, opened fire on the robbers, two of whom, Chas. Jones and William Smith, were killed by the first volley. The third man, George Harris, was shot through the lungs, dying in two hours. He is fully identified, and gave the others' names, which are believed to be fictitious. Four citizens were shot, none of them fatally. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

Distress in India.

SIMLA, India, Oct. 16.—At the vice regal council the minister of agriculture stated that the local authorities of a large portion of India have reported that distress is expected as a result of the drouth and consequent raise in the price of wheat. The construction of government works, however, and the importation of wheat from California would prevent actual famine.

Death of Henry E. Abbey.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Henry E. Abbey, the well known theatrical manager, is dead. With him were his daughter and Mrs. Kingsley, the mother of Abbey's first wife. The present Mrs. Abbey, who recently brought a divorce suit, is said to be in Europe. Abbey had been ill for some time. The immediate cause of his death was hemorrhage of the stomach.

Mobilizing Russian Forces.

VIENNA, Oct. 19.—A statement is published that steps to complete the mobilization of the Russian forces are being taken in the several districts. All the officers on leave or retired have recalled. It is intimated that these movements are because it is expected Russia will receive an European mandate to occupy Constantinople.

TERSE NEWS.

Thomas E. Watson, populist nominee for vice-president, is suffering with an ulcerated throat

An Athens dispatch says that the governor of Mytiline has discovered a plot of Turkish students to bring about a general massacre of Christians, and that four of the ringleaders have been arrested.

A recent dispatch from Sebastopol says that Russia is continuing her preparations for an emergency. Local military and naval forces at Sebastopol, Odessa and Batoum have been mobilized. A company of submarine engineers has been ordered to hold itself in readiness to immediately embark upon a gunboat already loaded with mines, shells and torpedoes.

Washington dispatch: Dr. Burgess, sanitary inspector of the marine hospital service at Havana, reports yellow fever epidemic there and he is informed that it is so in most of the places where the Spanish soldiers are found. During September there were 1,034 deaths in Havana from the disease. Smallpox, instead of diminishing, increases daily, not only in Havana, but in the suburbs. The doctor expresses the fear that it will be many months before this scourge is over. He also points out the danger from yellow fever to vessels discharging cargoes at Tallapiedra wharf, Havana, because of its close proximity to an old and badly infected military hospital.

Fairmont, Minn., dispatch: The climax of the most sensational week in southern Minnesota's history came with the complete revelation of the identity of the two desperadoes who robbed the Sherburne bank and killed three persons. The one killed near Elmore was J. Hans Kellihan, a boy of but 18 years. The man in jail at Fairmont is Lu Kellihan, brother of the dead bandit buried in the potter's field at Sherburne. Lu Keilihan is 23 years old and at first refused to disclose his identity, but later weakened and told the whole story of the plan to rob the banks at Heron Lakes, St. James and Sherburne, the route of the flight and other incidents. The man in jail insists that his brother was the leader and did all the shooting. A telegram from Rock Rapids, Iowa, says the identification of the robbers is correct. Their parents live there and admit that the boys are their sons.

CAMPING IN COLORADO.

Something About a Very Pleasant Outing Enjoyed This Fall.

Whoever would enjoy the pleasure of existence; whoever would extend the power for such enjoyment; whoever would continue his life and seek to lessen the remembrances of the burdens going hand in hand with that pleasure, must break away from desk and the grinds of modern office life, and seek rest and health in the rougher yet kindlier environments of Nature. Among the cloud-capped mountains and in the canons which separate them, men live to be grizzled and brawny, with appetites which devour all food with avidity and relish, and which the city man, afflicted with indigestion, envies whenever chance affords the opportunity for self comparison, more than anything else. I speak from a personal knowledge of the fact, for these reflections were induced by a recent visit to the heart of the Rocky Mountains in Colorado. The Denver & Rio Grande Railroad takes the traveler at Denver and carries him amidst the splendor of scenery on every hand, to the confines of the wilderness, high up in the clouds, where birds and beasts and fishes are free, but where men have also encroached, and are spending their lives in digging and blasting for the precious minerals which the mountains hide behind their rocky fronts. Camping outfits which belong to city people, out for a good time, "roughing it," are to be seen in many of the beautiful parks, made by the rush of waters and left when they receded to their newly-established beds. It's the thing to do, they hold, to spend a portion of the year away from business, and the theory that ten or eleven months of good work makes up for the time spent in regaining health, and is all that anybody ought to do, is gaining many converts. In the summer the mountains and the canons are lovely, but not more so, I think, than when in the Autumn they assume their royal colors and when the air has a snap in it, and the red rosebuds are fragrant as apples, and the grass which browned under the hot sun, has been refreshed by the later rains and is green, vieing with the cedars and pines which tower above, reaching the clouds.

There are some fine lakes in the mountains west of the San Luis valley, and he who enjoys piscatorial sport may have his feast. The trout are those delicious spotted beauties which wear your patience when you are angling and give you such an opportunity to edify your friends on your return home. The enterprising Denver & Rio Grande road has reached the vicinity of the fishing resorts, as well as the mining camps, and the traveler can go as comfortably as he wishes to, until he reaches the point from which the way must be gone by wagon or on horseback. Alamosa is a good outfitting point—so is Monte Vista or Del Norte, or any of the many bustling towns which are passed. The weather is delightful until as late as January, and no inconvenience will be experienced at night if you do have to lie with the sky for a ceiling. We camped one night at Lake Fork, on the other side of a mountain 8,000 feet high, about six miles from the practically deserted village of Platora, and the old hero of Gettysburg, who had lost his right arm and his hearing at the same moment, and is now mining, with the help of his son, told us that across the lake there were plenty of bear and deer and mountain lions and other big game. It was so plenty that the ranch men and the cowboys gave it a wide berth, and relinquished the idea of sending cattle over there to graze, as they were sure to find fewer brands when they rounded them up later. The locality affords such variety of amusement that it is an ideal one for any company of friends, no matter how varied their tastes or their object in making the trip. Let me suggest to my readers that they try it, if not this Fall, then next Summer.

Pure Gold.

Gold, when refined from all impurities and alloys of inferior metals, is denominated pure. This means gold of twenty-four carats, and this is the standard recognized by the mint master and dealers in gold. As a matter of fact, however, there is no gold so pure. Gold of twenty-two carats is about as pure as it can be got. It has two parts of silver or one part of copper. The copper darkens the color of gold, while silver lightens it in color. Twenty-three carat gold is occasionally seen, which means a half a carat of silver and of copper. Ordinarily eighteen carat gold is the best gold that can be had. Certainly it is the best for jewelry, for pure gold, as it is called, is too soft and will wear away much faster than the owners of it desire.

A California Burglary.

A California burglar recently cut the screen door of a room on a porch, took out a pair of trousers, and cleared off with $16.45, while the man and wife were arguing as to whether the cat was making the noise.

"The idea of making women our political equals!" exclaimed the man with the hat anchored to his coat by a half-inch cable; "there is not a position which one of them could fill——"

"Oh, yes, there is," broke in Mr. Henry Peck; "there is one job my wife could hold up to perfection."

"Name it!" exclaimed the excited orator.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"GOSPEL FARMING" SUBJECT OF SUNDAY'S DISCOURSE.

From the Text "I am the True Vine and My Father Is the Husbandman"—John XV: 1—Plowing and Sowing that We May Reap the Good Things of Life.

THIS last summer, having gone in different directions over between five and six thousand miles of harvest fields, I can hardly open my Bible without smelling the breath of new-mown hay and seeing the golden light of the wheat field. And when I open my Bible to take my text, the Scripture leaf rustles like the tassels of the corn.

We were nearly all of us born in the country. We dropped corn in the hill, and went on Saturday to the mill, tying the grist in the center of the sack so that the contents on either side the horse balanced each other; and drove the cattle afield, our bare feet wet with the dew, and rode the horses with the halter to the brook until we fell off, and hunted the mow for nests until the feathered occupants went cackling away. We were nearly all of us born in the country, and all would have stayed there had not some adventurous lad on his vacation come back with better clothes and softer hands, and set the whole village on fire with ambition for city life. So we all understand rustic allusions. The Bible is full of them. In Christ's sermon on the Mount you could see the full-blown lilies and the glossy back of the crow's wing as it flies over Mount Olivet. David and John, Paul and Isaiah find in country life a source of frequent illustration, while Christ in the text takes the responsibility of calling God a farmer, declaring, "My Father is the husbandman."

Noah was the first farmer. We say nothing about Cain, the tiller of the soil. Adam was a gardener on a large scale, but to Noah was given all the acres of the earth. Elisha was an agriculturist, not cultivating a ten-acre lot, for we find him plowing with twelve yoke of oxen. In Bible times the land was so plenty and the inhabitants so few that Noah was right when he gave to every inhabitant a certain portion of land; that land, if cultivated, ever after to be his own possession. Just as in Nebraska the United States Government on payment of $16 years ago gave pre-emption right to 160 acres to any man who would settle there and cultivate the soil.

All classes of people were expected to cultivate ground except ministers of religion. It was supposed that they would have their time entirely occupied with their own profession, although I am told that sometimes ministers do plunge so deeply into worldliness that they remind one of what Thomas Fraser said in regard to a man in his day who preached very well, but lived very ill: "When he is out of the pulpit, it is a pity he should ever go into it, and when he is in the pulpit it is a pity he should ever come out of it."

They were not small crops raised in those times, for though the arts were rude, the plow turned up very rich soil, and barley, and cotton, and flax, and all kinds of grain came up at the call of the harvesters. Pliny tells of one stalk of grain that had on it between three and four hundred ears. The rivers and the brooks, through artificial channels, were brought down to the roots of the corn, and to this habit of turning a river wherever it was wanted, Solomon refers when he says: "The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, and he turneth it as the rivers of water are turned, whithersoever he will."

The wild beasts were caught, and then a hook was put into their nose, and then they were led over the field, and to that God refers when he says to wicked Sennacherib: "I will put a hook in thy nose and I will bring thee back by the way which thou camest." And God has a hook in every bad man's nose, whether it be Nebuchadnezzar or Ahab or Herod. He may think himself very independent, but some time in his life, or in the hour of his death, he will find that the Lord Almighty has a hook in his nose.

This was the rule in regard to the culture of the ground: "Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together," illustrating the folly of ever putting intelligent and useful and pliable men in association with the stubborn and the unmanageable. The vast majority of troubles in the churches and in reformatory institutions comes from the disregard of this command of the Lord, "Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together."

There were large amounts of property invested in cattle. The Moabites paid 100,000 sheep as an annual tax. Job had 7,000 sheep, 3,000 camels, 500 yoke of oxen. The time of vintage was ushered in with mirth and music. The clusters of the vine were put into the wine press, and then five men would get into the press and trample out the juice from the grape until their garments were saturated with the wine and had become the emblems of slaughter. Christ himself, wounded until covered with the blood of crucifixion, making use of this allusion when the question was asked: "Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel and thy garments like one who treadeth the wine vat?" He responded: "I have trodden the wine press alone."

In all ages there has been great honor paid to agriculture. Seven-eighths of the people in every country are disciples of the plow. A government is strong in proportion as it is supported by an athletic and industrious yeomanry. So long ago as before the fall of Carthage, Strabo wrote twenty-eight books on agriculture; Hesiod wrote a poem on the same subject—"The Weeks and Days." Cato was prouder of his work on husbandry than of all his military conquests. But I must not be tempted into a discussion of agricultural conquests. Standing amid the harvests and orchards and vineyards of the Bible, and standing amid the harvests and orchards and vineyards of our own country—larger harvests than have ever before been gathered—I want to run out the analogy between the production of crops and the growth of grace in the soul—all these sacred writers making use of that analogy.

In the first place, I remark, in grace as in the fields, there must be a plow. That which theologians call conviction is only the plow-share turning up the sins that have been rooted and matted in the soul. A farmer said to his indolent son: "There are a hundred dollars buried deep in that field." The son went to work and plowed the field from fence to fence, and he plowed it very deep, and then complained that he had not found the money; but when the crop had been gathered and sold for a hundred dollars more than any previous year, then the young man took the hint as to what his father meant when he said there were a hundred dollars buried down in that field. Deep plowing for a crop. Deep plowing for a soul. He who makes light of sin will never amount to anything in the church or in the world. If a man speaks of sin as though it were an inaccuracy or a mistake, instead of the loathesome, abominable, consuming, and damning thing that God hates, that man will never yield a harvest of usefulness.

When I was a boy I plowed a field with a team of spirited horses. I plowed it very quickly. Once in a while I passed over some of the sod without turning it, but I did not jerk back the plow with its rattling devices. I thought it made no difference. After awhile my father came along and said: "Why, this will never do; this isn't plowed deep enough; there you have missed this and you have missed that." And he plowed it over again. The difficulty with a great many people is that they are only scratched with conviction when the subsoil plow of God's truth ought to be put in up to the beam.

My word is to all Sabath school teachers, to all parents, to all Christian workers—Plow deep! Plow deep!

And if in your own personal experience you are apt to take a lenient view of the sinful side of your nature, put down into your soul the ten commandments which reveal the holiness of God, and that sharp and glittering coulter will turn up your soul to the deepest depths. If a man preaches to you that you are only a little out of order by reason of sin and that you need only a little fixing-up, he deceives! You have suffered an appalling injury by reason of sin. There are quick poisons and slow poisons, but the druggist could give you one drop that could kill the body. And sin is like that drug; so virulent, so poisonous, so fatal that one drop is enough to kill the soul.

Deep plowing for a crop. Deep plowing for a soul. Broken heart or no religion. Broken soil or no harvest. Why was it that David and the jailer and the publican and Paul made such ado about their sins? Had they lost their senses? No. The plow-share struck them. Conviction turned up a great many things that were forgotten. As a farmer plowing sometimes turns up the skeleton of a man or the anatomy of a monster long ago buried, so the plow-share of conviction turns up the ghastly skeletons of sins long ago entombed. Geologists never brought up from the depths of the mountain mightier ichthyosaurus or megatherium.

But what means all this crooked plowing, these crooked furrows, the repentance that amounts to nothing, the repentance that ends in nothing? Men groan over their sins, but get no better. They weep, but their tears are not counted. They get convicted, but not converted. What is the reason? I remember that on the farm we set a standard with a red flag at the other end of the field. We kept our eye on that. We aimed at that. We plowed up to that. Losing sight of that we made a crooked furrow. Keeping our eye on that we made a straight furrow. Now in this matter of conviction we must have some standard to guide us. It is a red standard that God has set at the other end of the field. It other end of the field. We kept our eye that you will make a straight furrow. Losing sight of it you will make a crooked furrow. Plow up to the Cross. Aim not at either end of the horizontal piece of the Cross, but at the upright piece, at the center of it, the heart of the Son of God who bore your sins and made satisfaction. Crying and weeping will not bring you through. "Him hath God exalted to be a Prince and a Saviour to give repentance." Oh, plow up to the Cross!

* * *

Again, I remark, in grace as in the farm there must be a reaping. Many Christians speak of religion as though it were a matter of economics or insurance. They expect to reap in the next world. Oh, no! Now is the time to reap. Gather up the joy of the Christian religion this morning, this afternoon, this night. If you have not as much grace as you would like to have, thank God for what you have, and pray for more. You are no worse enslaved than Joseph, no worse troubled than was David, no worse scourged than was Paul. Yet, amid the rattling of fetters, and amid the gloom of dungeons, and amid the horror of shipwreck, they triumphed in the grace of God. The weakest man in the house to-day has 500 acres of spiritual joy all ripe. Why do you not go and reap it? You have been groaning over your infirmities for thirty years. Now give one round shout over your emancipation. You say you have it so hard; you might have it worse. You wonder why this great cold trouble keeps revolving through your soul, turning and turning with a black hand on the crank. Ah, that trouble is the grindstone on which you are to sharpen your sickle. To the fields! Wake up! Take off your green spectacles, your blue spectacles, your black spectacles. Pull up the corners of your mouth as far as you pull them down. To the fields! Reap! reap!

Again, I remark, in grace as in farming there is a time for threshing. I tell you bluntly that is death. Just as the farmer with a flail beats the wheat out of the straw, so death beats the soul out of the body. Every sickness is a stroke of the flail, and the sick-bed is the threshing-floor. What, say you, is death to a good man only taking the wheat out of the straw? That is all. An aged man has fallen asleep. Only yesterday you saw him in the sunny porch playing with his grandchildren. Calmly he received the message to leave this world. He bade a pleasant good-bye to his old friends. The telegraph carries the tidings, and on swift rail-trains the kindred come, wanting once more to look on the face of dear old grandfather. Brush back the gray hairs from his brow; it will never ache again. Put him away in the slumber of the tomb. He will not be afraid of that night. Grandfather was never afraid of anything. He will rise in the morning of the resurrection. Grandfather was always the first to rise. His voice has already mingled in the doxology of heaven. Grandfather always did sing in church. Anything ghastly in that? No. The threshing of the wheat out of the straw, that is all.

The Savior folds a lamb in his bosom. The little child filled all the house with her music, and her toys are scattered all up and down the stairs just as she left them. What if the hand that plucked four-o'clocks out of the meadow is still? It will wave in the eternal triumph. What if the voice that made music in the home is still? It will sing the eternal hosanna. Put a white rose in one hand, a red rose in the other hand, and a wreath of orange blossoms on the brow; the white flower for the victory, the red flower for the Savior's sacrifice, the orange blossoms for her marriage day. Anything ghastly about that? Oh, no! The sun went down and the flower shut. The wheat threshed out of the straw. "Dear Lord, give me sleep," said a dying boy, the son of one of my elders, "Dear Lord, give me sleep." And he closed his eyes and woke in glory. Henry W. Longfellow, writing a letter of condolence to those parents, said, "Those last words were beautifully poetic." And Mr. Longfellow knew what is poetic. "Dear Lord, give me sleep."

'Twas not in cruelty, not in wrath
That the reaper came that day;
'Twas an angel that visited the earth
And took the flower away.

So may it be with us when our work is all done. "Dear Lord, give me sleep."

I have one more thought to present. I have spoken of the plowing, of the sowing, of the harrowing, of the reaping, of the threshing. I must now speak a moment of the garnering.

Ancient Egyptian Cloth.

The cloth of the old Egyptians was so good that, though it has been used for thousands of years as wrappings of the mummies, the Arabs of to-day can wear it. It is all of linen, the ancient Egyptians considering wool unclean.

Another instance where a man lost money by not taking the home paper was demonstrated last week. August 30 a horse, buggy and harness were stolen from the streets of Belmond. The horse was brought here by the Dows gang of horse thieves. who did the deed, and turned into F. M. Smith's pasture near town. The owner of the horse was here a few days afterward and inserted a discription of the property in the Advocate offering $50 reward for the return of the same. The horse was in Mr. Smith's pasture over two weeks and he saw the animal many times, but he is not a subscriber of the Aduocate, hence knew nothing about a reward being offered. It would have been an easy matter for Mr. S. to have captured that $50—enough to pay for the home paper fifty years in advance—Dows Advocate.

Mr. Vernon was the first to touch the beach.

"I welcome you gladly to our retreat, my gallant countryman," he said, waving his hand courteously, "and here I introduce to you its princess."

As all hats were doffed, and the eyes of the party bent in respectful admiration upon her, Eleanor blushed deeply; then regaining her self-possession she bowed gracefully, and hastening to Walter's side, whispered:

"Come, Walter, do come and tell me all about it, the time has seemed so long since you went away."

The affectionate tone—more than that, the tenderness with which the small hand was laid upon his arm—brought back the light to Walter's face, and he cast a half-defiant look backward where the handsome officer was left to Mr. Vernon's care, while he himself was drawn away by the beautiful object of their mutual admiration.

A brief but comprehensive recital of the events of the past ten years was given to the lieutenant by Mr. Vernon, and then he called Eleanor to bring the diamond necklace found in her relative's trunk.

The young girl brought the trinket, laid it in his hand and looked up anxiously into his face.

The lieutenant started.

"I have seen a face like yours before—where can it have been?"

"I am not given to inquisitiveness myself," said Mr. Vernon. "I knew my fellow-passengers were far my superiors in rank—they had the private cabin, and I seldom saw them. I never asked either their rank or family. For Eleanor's sake I have always regretted my indifference. I hoped some of your company might know the crest."

Lieutenant Ingalls turned the cold clasp to find it, and started.

"Ah," said he, and paused.

Walter's hand was clenched firm and tight on the arm of the bamboo sofa. Mr. Vernon looked earnest and interested, but Eleanor's wild, imploring eyes never left his.

"My name—what is it," she gasped.

Lieutenant Ingalls hastened to answer in earnest sympathy.

"My dear lady, I cannot tell you, but there is one near at hand who can, for your crest is that of our admiral, the Right Hon. Charles Lord Collinwood, commander of Her Majesty's ships in the Indian and Pacific oceans. His flagship lies but a few leagues beyond the 'Hornet,' and she signaled us to lay by and ascertain the meaning of your light the night before last. We have orders to repair to him with news of our discovery, and you may speedily see him. I must soon return and report to the captain, who will come down to the island himself, I doubt not."

"You will find an abundance of fruit. You may help yourself freely to our supply for the rainy season," said Mr. Vernon, rising to accompany him to the cove.

"Is your water good? We were running close to find some, or we had never come so far to the eastward."

Neither of the party accepted his invitation to visit the ship. They preferred to remain on the island till their final departure, and busied themselves in packing the few mementoes and relics of their island life ready for transportation to the ship.

In the afternoon the captain's gig made its appearance. The captain, Sir John Wilson, was much interested in the communication his lieutenant brought to him, and the moment he landed, passing Mr. Vernon and his son, advanced to Eleanor, and removing his laced hat from his gray head, said respectfully:

"My best greetings and congratulations to you upon this fortunate escape from a lonely island, fairest Lady Eleanor Collinwood."

Eleanor's tears bedewed the outstretched hand.

"You know me then? And that is my name?"

"Without a doubt, even if your face bore not the youthful likeness of our much-admired Lady Collinwood, the widow of our noble admiral's elder brother. Well do I remember how we all sympathized with her grief when, in addition to the death of her husband, came the mysterious loss of the 'Petrel,' which was bringing home from India the relatives who had charge of her only child. Dear Lady Eleanor, how I rejoice that we shall be the humble instrument of bringing so much happiness to that lovely and estimable lady, the pride and pattern of our court. As for you," he continued, turning somewhat patronizingly to the attentive Vernons, "you will be generously rewarded for your services, you may consider your fortune made, for no office you may ask will be denied you."

"We shall claim none," replied Mr. Vernon quietly, while Walter's proud eyes flashed. "Lady Eleanor knows whatever assistance we may have rendered has been well repaid by her sweet presence. Her noble relatives will find that, although for ten years debarred from all save our society, she is neither uncultivated in her tastes, unlearned in her mind or ignorant in manners. For ourselves, if such humble persons can interest you, we shall forego our original purpose to reach England speedily, and take passage in the first ship that crosses our path that will take us nearer Italy. My son has received all the instruction I could give with such crude materials as Nature furnishes. I mean he shall be taught further by the best artists in Rome. Once given to her uncle's protection, we shall feel that the noble companion of our exile is parted from us effectually, until we reach a fairer and brighter shore than that of England."

CHAPTER IX.

ELEANOR had dropped Sir John's hand, and with a frightened, indignant look she sprang to the speaker's side.

"What do you say—what do you mean, my friend, my benefactor, my preserver? Do you think I have a heart of stone? Do you think for luxury and gradeur I shall renounce you and Walter? No, no; if that is the penalty of liberty, let me stay here forever."

Mr. Vernon looked sadly at the kindling eye and flushed cheek.

"My dear child," he said kindly, "I shall never wrong your noble nature by a single such unkind thought. You will never forget us, but time and new associations, more than all your duty to a mother, this gentleman has pictured so lovable and beautiful, will make you acquiesce contentedly in a decree long-standing customs have made more binding than the edicts of a sovereign."

Eleanor was looking beseechingly at Walter, but he neither spoke nor moved, nor seemed to have heard a word that had been spoken. She went to him and touched his hand timidly.

"Walter," said she, pleadingly.

"Lady Eleanor!"

The girl stood silent a moment, and then burst into tears.

"I am not Lady Eleanor—I hate the name!" cried she passionately. 'I am your Ellie, that you loved and cared for once. If I cannot be the same still, I will fling myself on Tom's grave, and no force shall tear me from it. Oh, I thought I was so happy when I knew a ship had come at last, but now I am so miserable!"

"Ellie, dear Ellie," said Walter, forced from his icy formality by her tears, "let us go to Tom's grave now for the last time."

She obeyed instantly, and unmolested by any of the party, they went down the path Tom's feet had worn so plainly in the green, and sat down beneath the Hibiscus tree. Then Walter spoke. How clear and strong and hopeful his tone was.

"Ellie," he said, "you know how my father has taught me, what sentiments he has instilled, for you have shared them. You know I must not swerve from the path honor and conscience point out to me; you know I will not though the way is strewn with thorns. You are restored now to the topmost round of noble society, while I, even for your sweet sake, though life holds no prospect so dear as the hope of your love—I will not be lifted up to a place beside you by any one's pity or gratitude or charity—no, nor by sweet love itself. My place is far below; but if I can, by my own exertions, industry, perseverance and genius mount up to your side, I will do it. Day and night I will strive and pray for it; your dear memory shall keep my soul strong in the struggle; no other can usurp your throne within my heart. Hush, Ellie, do not speak! I ask—I will accept no promise from you; I have no right to do it."

Her eye was fixed upon him in proud affection.

"It is like you, Walter, to talk so. No matter, if you will not hear it. Here at Tom's grave, which I shall never see again, I say to the wind and sea and sky, if your ears are deaf, I know Walter will succeed, and I shall wait for him."

The soft, exulting tone, half shy, half bold, was irresistible. Walter was not so heroic that he could turn away without one grateful kiss to the archly-smiling lips. This was all that was said—was it a betrothal?

Sir John evidently thought Lady Eleanor Collinwood had talked long enough with an obscure plebeian's son, for he came sauntering down the path with a significant cough.

Walter quietly retreated to his father's side, and the gallant old officer, exerting himself to the utmost to entertain her, began a flattering account of her mother's high position, exceeding loveliness and irreproachable character.

"Ah, my dear young lady," said he, "you cannot imagine how all London idolizes, venerates and yet fears Lady Annabel, because her unparalleled goodness is a constant reproach to the folly and indiscretion of ordinary mortals. She is at once the pet of our royal mistress and the pride of the whole court."

"Ah," sighed Eleanor, her sparkling eyes welling over with tears, "so superior herself, how will she be able to love a single wildwood's daughter like me?"

Sir John gazed in smiling scrutiny upon the lovely face turned toward him so ingenuously.

"Never fear; that you are your mother's own child is plainly shown by the fact that this long isolation on a lonely island has not impaired your native grace and refinement. I shall not venture to depict the maternal love awaiting you. But come—time presses, and we must reach the ship before nightfall. Without doubt the commodore is already on board the 'Hornet' awaiting our arrival. Say your farewell to your prison joyfully, sweet lady, for freedom and happiness and honor lie before you."

Admiral Lord Collinwood received his niece with a tenderness that banished at once all her fears of coldness. His agitation was nearly as great as her own. Folding her closely in his arms he sobbed:

"My sweet child, my precious one, you know not how joyfully your poor old uncle welcomes your return to life and liberty. Your mother and I thought to pass our dreary lives alone, without a young heart to love, leaving the proud old name to pass to a distant branch of the family. Dear relic of my dead brother, you will bring new life to us."

Eleanor nestled in his arms with the happy consciousness of at last finding the affection that rightfully belonged to her.

Toward Mr. Vernon and his son the admiral was exceedingly cordial, as well as grateful. He was one of those true noblemen and native gentlemen who are as far above arrogance and haughtiness as they are too dignified for obsequiousness.

"No reward we can give will compensate for what you have done for our dear child," said he warmly to Mr. Vernon. "My sister-in-law will feel the debt more keenly even than I. If there is anything we can do for you, either through influence or pecuniary assistance, I beg you to ask it freely as a right."

Mr. Vernon shook his head.

"There is nothing whatever that we need which our own exertions cannot procure, even were we not too proud to receive reward for what has been a pleasure more than a duty. And yet we gratefully appreciate your lordship's kindness."

"You are a noble fellow. I can tell you, Vernon, if Eleanor were my own child I would give a speedy return to your gallant son. I would say, 'Here, my brave lad, you have guarded and served her in her need; you have been as delicate and honorable in your lonely island as you could have been at St. James. The jewel you have polished shall sparkle on your bosom still.' I would do it, I say, but the child belongs to Lady Annabel. Bless your soul; if you only knew her, it would save me a deal of talking, but you see my sister-in-law is so superior, so elevated above everybody else in perfect life and character, we are all a little afraid of her; and as I can't tell how she would like it, I dare not say a word either to encourage your son or justify Eleanor in clinging to her attachment. That's just the predicament I'm in."

Mr. Vernon smiled at the noble-hearted admiral's embarrassment.

"Thank you again, my lord, for your kind wish to aid us. I assure you, long ago, before your ship came, my son saw the presumption of his love for one so far above his station, and wrestled with himself until, if it was not suppressed, it was overmastered. With your permission I propose we part from the dear girl at once. I understand that the 'Hornet' separates from you to cruise in the Mediterranean. I propose to proceed as soon as possible to Italy, that Walter may have the best instruction which his artist genius deserves. My own personal hopes are dead long ago; even were they not, this wasted lamp of life would make them futile; but Walter must redeem the lost years by incessant application. The belt of gold I hung round my waist ten years ago is still with me. With economy it will supply all Walter's wants until his brush is able to provide more. I myself shall only need—a coffin."

Lord Collinwood's honest eye overflowed with tears at the quiet resignation of the tone. He stretched out his hand.

TRUTH OR FICTION?

THE QUESTION WHICH WORRIED THE MIND OF THE BANNER SCRIBE.

Proven Undoubtedly True by a Practical Test Applied Locally by One of Bussey's Best Known and Respected Ladies—A Strange Story Easily Verified Right Here at Home Proves That "Testimonials" Are Not Fakes—Mrs. Elliott's Story a Clincher.

From the Banner, Bussey, Iowa.

The great frequency with which our attention has been attracted to certain articles, which generally go the rounds of all the leading newspapers, has caused us to wonder and speculate a great deal as to why none of these things ever happened to occur nearer home, and finally our interest and wonder grew to such a pitch that, knowing a certain lady in Bussey to be a regular purchaser of Pink Pills for something over two years, by reason of the fact that she had also induced our own wife to give it a trial, with very beneficial results, we at last determined to put the matter to the test and see if this lady could put aside her natural repugnance to appearing so prominently in print in order to encourage people generally to the greater use of her favorite remedy, by giving her testimonial for publication in her home paper, where those who read would know that it was no hoax fixed up merely to catch the unwary and credulous.

With this object in view, we called on Tuesday afternoon, on Anna Elliott, wife of our esteemed townsman, W. A. Elliott, proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, the leading hostelry of Bussey, Iowa, and we give the story in her own words:

"I have been landlady of the Commercial House now for nearly six years, and for a long time was hardly able to get along with the work at all, being always out of sorts, affected by pains in the head, dizziness, and general weakness and nervousness, always feeling over-worked and hardly able to drag myself around from morning till night, often nearly wishing that I were dead.

"If things had gone on much longer in this way I would certainly have broken down entirely and had to give up my work, but luckily, just at this juncture, I happened to read an article about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which seemed to cover the symptoms of my case exactly, and I sent direct to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, at Schenectady, N. Y., and procured two trial boxes. These did me so much good and I felt so much encouraged that I sent for a $2.50 package and have always taken good care to keep a supply of them on hand since, in over two years now.

"Their continued use put me on my feet completely, as the saying is, and I have felt stronger and better able to do my work and see to things about the hotel than I ever was in my life before and Pink Pills have become the standard remedy in our family for every ill arising from debility of any kind.

"One member of our family has been completely cured of a very bad and long-standing case of kidney trouble, while a number of the neighbors who have tried them speak highly in the praise of this remedy and declare that there is no other medicine that can possibly supply its place."

Those who know Mrs. Elliott know full well that she would not be willing to authorize the publication of the above statement without every word of it being strictly true, but to prove conclusively to any strangers who may read this article that it is every word "as true as gospel" she subscribes to the following affidavit, in the hope that her fellow beings who suffer as she did may be convinced of the wonderful merits of Pink Pills for Pale People and thereby be led to obtain relief through giving them a prompt and thorough trial.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 3d day of June, A. D. 1896.

(Seal.) W. BURTON, Notary Public.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

The sum of $18,000 has been raised for the semi-centennial in honor of the Rev. Dr. Richard S. Storrs, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church, Brooklyn, and the sum is constantly growing. The special committee hopes to complete the full amount of $25,000 by November 19, when it is proposed to celebrate the semi-centennial of Dr. Storrs' pastorate in the Church of the Pilgrims by special services in the church, and in all probability a great mass meeting in the Academy of Music.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

The influence of women upon the civilization of the world, could never be measured.

Because of her, thrones have been established and destroyed. The flash of her eye, the touch of her hand, and we have the marvellous power of women, glorious in the possession of perfect physical health.

Lydia E. Pinkham, by her wonderful discovery of the "Vegetable Compound," has done much to place this great power in the hands of women.

She has lifted thousands and thousands out of the misery brought by displacement of the womb, and all the evils that follow diseases of the uterus.

The "Vegetable Compound" restores natural cheerfulness, destroys despondency, cures backache, strengthens the muscles, restores the womb to its normal condition, and you are changed from a physical wreck to the joy of your home and friends.

By the way—the leading druggists tell us that the demand for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is simply beyond their power of understanding, and what is best of all, it does the work and cures where the best physicians utterly fail.

The Violets Blue — The Bicycle Boom Has Reached the Nursery — An Inspiration Seeker — Flotsam and Jetsam from Humor's Tide]

E sent her dainty violets
Tied up with ribbon white,
And in between the silver stems
He hid a note from sight.
"With these," he wrote in manly phrase,
"I send my heart to you,
And if you care to keep it, love,
Then wear the violets blue."

Before the gilded cheval-glass
She donned her satin gown;
From shoulders white, and slender waist,
Its richness rippled down.
In folds of flame along the floor
She trailed its crimson hue:
"I cannot wear his flowers tonight,
Alas! that they are blue."

Behind the little withered stems
With silken ribbon tied,
Too well the velvet blossoms kept
Their secret 'till they died.
Two colors more the spinster Fate
Into her shuttle threw,
The crimson of a satin gown,
The violets' tender blue.

Rev. P. J. Berg, Pastor of the Swedish M. Church, Des Moines, Iowa, on March 4th, 1896, writes: "Last year I was troubled with a bad cough for about five months. I got medicine from my family physician and I tried other remedies without relief. When I first saw Dr. Kay's Lung Balm advertised I thought I would try and I am glad I did. I bought a box and took a tablet now and then thout any regularity, and after a few days, to my great surprise, though was gone. Ten days ago I had sore throat. I was out of the tets and could not get them in Des Moines, and I sent to the WesteOffice of Dr. B. J. Kay Medical Co., Omaha, Neb., for six boxes and soon as I took it a few times that soreness and hoarseness all passed ay in one night. I believe it is also good for sore throat."

SOMETHING TO KNOW.

It may be worth something to know that the very best medicine for restoring the tired out nervous system to a healthy vigor is Electric Bitters. This medicine is purely vegetable, acts by giving tone to the nerve centres in the stomach, gently stimulates the liver and kidneys, and aids these organs in throwing off impurities in the blood. Electric Bitters improves the appetite, aids digestion and is pronounced by those who have tried it as the very best blood purifier and nerve tonic. Try it. Who hypnotized this hen This story is true, of course, otherwise the New York Journal would never dream of printing it. Well, a farmer in the neighborhood of Richmond, K., has a hen who has taken—(according to this true story)—a remarkable interest in the presidential campaign. She has laid an egg on one side of which stands in bas-relief the capital letter "B," which stands for Bryan, of ourse. On the other side, also in bas-relief, but somewhat bolder, is an exact epresentation of an American dolla, on which are plainly visible an eagle and the figures 16 to 1, the "1" being preceded by a "$." This is certainly a "corker," and no doubt of it. The farmer's name is Dock Cobb, his address is Red House, Ky., and he is a brother of County Attorney T. Tevis Cobb, who vouches for the absolute truth of this astounding "campaign document."

The railway returns of the United Kingdom for the year 1895 contain much interesting information. At the end of 1895 there were 21,174 miles of railway open for traffic in the United Kingdom, of which 9,738 were single lines. In the last twenty years about 4,500 miles of new line have been opened for traffic, and construction still proceeds at an average rate of about 200 miles a year. Over £1,000,000,000 of capital is now sunk in British railways, which compares with only £630,000,000 twenty years ago. Then the average cost per mile of line open was £37,833; now it has grown to £47,280. For the year 1895 the total gross receipts of the British railways were £85,922,690. The working expenditure was £47,876,000, or 56 per cent of the gross takings. The net receipts were £38,046,100, which represents a return of 3.80 per cent on the total paid-up capital. Twenty years ago the gross receipts were £61,250,000, the proportion of working expenditure was 54 per cent of the total takings. and the return on paid-up capital was 4.45 per ...

THE NEWS IN IOWA

FOR FRAUDULENT BANKING.

Banker C. J. Field Will Be Brought to Trial On the Charge.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Oct. 23.—The failure of the big bank of Field brothers at Cedar Rapids over two years ago, by which so many people lost everything they had, is to be brought into prominence again, for in December, Charles J. Fields, indicted by the Black Hawk county grand jury, will have his trial in the district court at Waterloo on a charge of fraudulent banking. There were several indictments against William Fields and his brother, C. J. Fields, the present defendant, which grew out of the failure of their bank, the First National, at Cedar Falls. The cases were taken into Buchanan county on a change of venue. William Fields was tried last May, convicted and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. No part of the sentence has been served, the defendant being out on bail pending an appeal to the supreme court The case against C. J. Fields is exactly similar in all respects to the one which resulted in the conviction of his brother.

LIBERTINES CONVICTED.

Two Men Guilty of Assault With Intent to Commit Rape.

IOWA CITY, Oct. 22.—The jury in the case of the state of Iowa vs. Uriah Trimble, of Lone Tree, returned a verdict of guilty of assault with intent to commit rape. As the same evidence was to apply in the case of the brother, Jehu, the hopelessness of the latter led him to withdraw the plea of not guilty and enter a plea of guilty. The law fixes the penalty at confinement in the penitentiary for a period of not exceeding twenty years. The men were charged with criminally assaulting Sellie Strong and May Clark, and though the defense introduced evidence to show that both girls had consented to the crime, the age of consent law applied in the case, as they were only about 11 and 12 years of age when the wrong was inflicted.

IOWA CITY, Oct. 23.—Judge Wade sentenced Uriah and Jehu Trimble, convicted of assault upon two small girls near Lone Tree, to thirteen years in the penitentiary at hard labor.

$500 FOR A MURDERER.

Gov. Drake Offers $300 for the Delivery of Orman McPherson.

DES MOINES, Oct. 24.—Gov. Drake has offered a reward of $300 for the arrest and delivery of Orman McPherson, a desperate character, whose reputation is very bad, and who, on the night of September 20, murdered Marshal Findley at Morning Sun. McPherson and his wife had separated and he had been trying to force his child away from its mother, and a warrant was out for his arrest. When Marshal Findley attempted to arrest him, McPherson drew a revolver and shot him down. Findley died in ten days, and McPherson has not been heard from since. One hundred dollars reward was offered by the mayor of Morning Sun, and as a similar sum was offered by the sheriff of that county, the total amount offered for McPherson is now $500.

DECLINED TO EAT.

As a Result Death Claimed Mrs. Bassett After Six Weeks' Time.

ATLANTIC, Oct. 24.—Mrs. P. A. Bassett, aged 85, died here at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Levi Downs. Mrs. Bassett was quite fleshy and about six weeks ago took a notion not to eat any more, stating she had no desire to do so. The only thing she would take was clear water. For the past week she was quite feeble in consequence. Doctors say she literally lived off her own flesh.

JEFFERSON WINS.

Secures the Odd Fellows' Orphans' Home.

MASON CITY, Oct. 24.—The grand lodge of Odd Fellows of Iowa, after a long discussion of the location of the Orphans' Home, chose Jefferson by a vote of 65 to 27. This will take the matter out of the courts and work on the building will be commenced at once. The grand lodge and Rebeccas will meet next year at Davenport.

Tough Characters Bottled Up.

PRIMGHAR, Oct. 25.—Sheriff Carter has just landed in Anamosa two of the toughest characters ever sent from O'Brien county. They were charged with house breaking and grand larceny, and plead guilty in the district court. They made several attempts to break jail on two or three occasions and planned to murder the sheriff and his son. Sheriff Carter promised them he would get enough of them to Anamosa to get a receipt for them, while they persisted in saying that they would never be taken there alive.

Duncombe Postoffice Robbed.

FORT DODGE, Oct. 23.—The postoffice at Duncombe was robbed by burglars, who blew the safe open and took out $200 in stamps and $20 in money.

RUN OVER BY A HOSE WAGON.

Ed Wiatt, a Well-Liked Old Gentleman, Dying at the Ottumwa Hospital.

OTTUMWA, Oct. 25.—An old gentleman, Ed Wiatt, is dying at the Ottumwa hospital as the result of being run over by a hose wagon. He was riding a horse, but because of the glare of the electric light the driver did not see him in time to stop. The old man was thrown violently to the pavement and his skull fractured.

ATTEMPT AT BURGLARY.

LYNNVILLE, Oct. 26.—The outer door of Macy Bros.' (bankers) safe was blown open by burglars. The vault door was not wrecked. It is thought the noise of the explosion scared the burglars away. The door was blown into fragments. The safe and contents were insured. There is no clue to the burglars.

O'Brien County Farmer Insane.

PRIMGHAR, Oct. 24.—James Cooper, an O'Brien county farmer, went violently insane and was found in a nude state wandering in the fields. He was captured after a sparp chase by officers and neighbors and is being guarded to be sent to the asylum. It is said his mind has not been right since he attended Buffalo Bill's wild west show at Sheldon on the 19th of September. The wild, exciting scenes of the show seemed to have upset him.

Masked Robbers in Iowa.

LARRABEE, Oct. 23.—Two masked men entered the house of Charles Hinel, a bachelor living one mile north of town, and compelled Hinel to give up $20 and a watch, ring and other valuables, belonging to a young man who was staying with him. No arrests have been made, but suspicion points to a young man living near Larrabee, who has been implicated in other small crimes, as one of the party.

Harris Sentenced.

DES MOINES, Oct. 26.—William Harris was sentenced to twenty-five years in the penitentiary at Fort Madison for the murder of George Frank. No appeal can be taken in the case.

Otho Postoffice Burned.

FT. DODGE, Oct. 25.—The Otho postoffice was burned. The cause of the fire is unknown. Two hundred dollars in cash was burned.

BREVITIES.

Highland Park College, Des Moines, has just published "A Little Book," elegantly illustrated, containing a splendid write-up of that noted school. It is mailed free upon request.

At Marshalltown recently E. G. Bowman, a traveling man who has lived in that city for several years, was arraigned before Justice Cammack on the charge of bigamy, the charge being made by a woman from Mills county, who was present with her two children. Bowman was held in $500 bail.

Sioux City dispatch: Henry Neadeskon, a working man employed in sand digging up the Missouri river, fell from a barge in the presence of half a dozen working men and was drowned. He was drawn under the barge, and they could render him no assistance. He was 25 years old and had a wife and child in Russia.

Wall Lake dispatch: Harry Jorgenson, aged about 17, went to the barn to do the morning work, and when he opened the stable door he found the lifeless body of his brother, George, who was about 22 years old, hanging from a rafter in the barn. There is no motive known for him committing the act. He was a tailor by trade and was making a good living for himself and his widowed mother.

At Cresco recently T. P. Farnsworth was in the act of loading his revolver and one of the cartridges being a little large, he gave the cylinder a wrench, at the same time turning half around, when the cartridge exploded, the ball striking his wife nearly in the center of the forehead, killing her instantly. Both parties are highly connected and are very popular in the community. The coroner's inquest returned a verdict of accidental shooting.

Fire a few nights since wiped out almost the entire business portion of Kamrar, a small town seven miles south of Webster City. The postoffice, together with all its contents, was consumed. Bohning & Pierce's general merchandise store with a five thousand dollar stock, Torrence & Son's drug stock, W. M. Hanson's machine and blacksmith shop, a restaurant, a millinery store and a number of smaller business houses, including the local E. H. Martin Telephone exchange, were consumed. The wind was blowing directly away from the residence portion of the town and only a few dwellings were burned. The fire started from a defective flue and the total loss was in the neighborhood of $40,000.

ALL OVER THE WORLD

MASSACRED BY SAVAGES.

An Austrian Party Attacked by Natives and Several Killed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24.—Details of a massacre on the Solomon Islands were brought up from the south seas by the Oceanic Steamship Company's mail steamer Monow. The victims of the blood-thirsty savages were members of a party of Austrians which had been taken to the islands by the Austrian man-of-war Albatross. It was under the leadership of Henry, Baron Foulton Von Norbeck, an Austrian scientist, who has visited many groups of islands in the south seas and had numerous exciting experiences with the natives. While traveling with an armed guard over the mountains of the island, he was set upon by bushmen and slain, together with three others. During the desperate conflict which followed the assault, many of the party were desperately wounded.

GRAVE SITUATION.

Irades in Connection with the Recent Purchase of Arms.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 24.—The irades issued in connection with the recent purchase of arms have resulted in a condition of affairs that is regarded as very grave. The ministers are opposed to the poll tax imposed on the Mussulmans but the palace officials insist that the measure is necessary for the defense of the Mussulman religion on the ground that the Christians are preparing to attack the Mussulmans and the European press is preaching a crusade against Islam. The British committee appointed to investigate the cause of the recent disorders in Constantinople compute that 15,000 Armenians in Constaninople and suburbs were rendered destitute as a result of the late massacres.

EXPRESS TRAIN HELD UP.

Four Masked Men Do it Scientifically in Missouri.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 24.—A passenger and express train on the Chicago & Alton railroad was held up and robbed by four masked men at Blue Cut, between Independence and Glendale, Mo. The express messenger surmised the train was being held up, and, opening the safe, he threw the money into a chicken coop. So far as can be learned, the robbers secured only a few packages of jewelry and $25 in currency, which the fireman had left in his vest hanging in the cab. There have been three hold-ups in the cut. The James gang held up a train there in 1881.

Race War in Florida.

CHIPLEY, Fla., Oct, 23.—J. M. Criglar, manager of Hagerman's lumber mills at Hager Station, quarrelled with his negro employes, who drove him with revolvers into his office, which he locked, and opened fire on the negroes with a rifle. Firing continued on both sides for an hour, Criglar escaping the bullets of the negroes by dropping to the floor. The negroes were preparing to cremate Criglar when the Louisville & Nashville train arrived and the train crew and passengers finally drove away the besiegers. During the battle Criglar killed Amos Kudson and John Alexander and wounded four others, two, it is thought, fatally.

Watson Can't Withdraw.

TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 23.—By a decision rendered by the judges of the state supreme court, Thomas E. Watson is not permitted to withdraw his name from the regular populist state ticket. The matter came up in the supreme court on a writ of mandamus against Secretary of State Edwards, who had, in compliance with the formal demand filed by Mr. Watson, announced his intention of omitting Mr. Watson's name from the head of the regular populist ticket.

Harriet Blaine Beale Divorced.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—Truxton Beale, whose wife, Harriet Blaine Beale, has been granted a divorce, is the son of the late Gen. Beale, who was stationed on the Pacific coast in the early days and who left a large estate accumulated here. Truxton Beale was engaged in business in San Francisco and was a prominent society and club man. He served a term as minister to Persia.

Gold Hunters in Arkansas.

HOT SPRINGS, Oct. 22.—Within the past few weeks a number of miners from abroad have arrived here and are busy prospecting for gold in the mountains adjacent to the city. Rich finds are reported six miles northeast and the mining fever is becoming intense. The woods are full of prospectors.

Russian Town Destroyed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 23.—The town of Knroff, in the government of Lublin, Russian-Poland, has been almost totally destroyed by fire, and 3,000 persons are left homeless.

Who They Were.

Mrs. Winks (at dinner in great hotel)—Who are those men at that table in the corner?

Mr. Winks—Don't know. What are they talking about?

"Oh, they are probably city officials."

TALMAGE'S SERMON

"PAGEANTRY OF THE WOODS" SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Following Text: "We All Do Fade as a Leaf; and Our Iniquities, Like the Wind, Have Taken Us Away" —Isaiah 64-6.

IT is so hard for us to understand religious truth that God constantly reiterates. As the schoolmaster takes a blackboard, and puts upon it figures and diagrams, so that the scholar may not only get his lesson through the ear but also through the eye, so God takes all the truths of his Bible, and draws them out in diagram on the natural world. Champollion, the famous Frenchman, went down into Egypt to study the hieroglyphics on monuments and temples. After much labor he deciphered them, and announced to the learned world the result of his investigations. The wisdom, goodness, and power of God are written in hieroglyphics all over the earth and all over the heaven. God grant that we may have understanding enough to decipher them! There are scriptural passages, like my text, which need to be studied in the very presence of the natural world. Habakkuk says, "Thou makest my feet like hind's feet;" a passage which means nothing save to the man that knows that the feet of the red deer, or hind, are peculiarly constructed, so that they can walk among slippery rocks without falling. Knowing that fact, we understand that, when Habakkuk says, "Thou makest my feet like hind's feet," he sets forth that the Christian can walk amid the most dangerous and slippery places without falling. In Lamentations we read that "The daughter of my people is cruel, like the ostriches of the wilderness;" a passage that has no meaning save to the man who knows that the ostrich leaves its egg in the sand to be hatched out by the sun, and that the young ostrich goes forth unattended by any maternal kindness. Knowing this, the passage is significant—"The daughter of my people is cruel, like the ostriches of the wilderness."

Those know but little of the meaning of the natural world, who have looked at it through the eyes of others, and from book or canvas taken their impression. There are some faces so mobile that photographers cannot take them; and the face of nature has such a flush, and sparkle, and life, that no human description can gather them. No one knows the pathos of a bird's voice unless he has sat at summer evening-tide at the edge of a wood, and listened to the cry of the whip-poor-will.

There is today more glory in one branch of sumach than a painter could put on a whole forest of maples. God hath struck into the autumnal leaf a glance that none see but those who come face to face—the mountain looking upon the man, and the man looking upon the mountain.
